"Society is so hollow," said Priscilla. "You don't know how things have changed since you were home, dear. We are all going in for the higher life, such as art or mental science. Dancing and golfing are not enough."

"Yes," said Constance dubiously. Then she leaned forward and took the pretty speaking face between two tender hands.

"Do you know what I would like for you, Priscilla?" she said. "I would like to see you married and settled. Marriage is a woman's sphere. The rest is for us queer exotics who are tossed out to battle with the elements through the force of circumstances. I don't believe a woman, if she told the truth, would ever look for any 'higher sphere' than living for others if she found the right person to live for."

Priscilla frowned. "I suppose it would suit some persons," she said, "but I feel I was born for other things."

"I don't," said Constance firmly. "There are days when I hunger to be taken care of; when I long for a big brother or any one to protect me, to fight my battles for me; when I thirst for little children's arms. Fame does not bring happiness. Virtue is its own reward, but love is the reward we women want for merit. When we miss it, we have missed the great gift."

"But men have loved you?"

"There was a man who loved me once," said Constance, "but that was long ago. I had dreams, like you, Priscilla. I let him go."

"Is he married?"

"I don't know."

"Does he ever write you?"

"I sent him away. He has not the right."

"Doesn't music make up to you?"

Priscilla was silent. She was thinking of that look on Stornmouth's face when he had said a few short minutes ago, "Not laughing at you, child; only looking at you." What had he meant? Priscilla wished she had asked him.

"I think I shall love to sing," said Priscilla.

"We all do," said Constance cheerfully, "but we don't get the chance."

Then Priscilla turned to go.

"You had a debut, had you not?" she asked as she walked toward the door of the little salon.

"Yes."

"Was it a success?"

"Tolerable," said Constance. "I was frightened. I realized it meant my whole future. When one realizes that"—She stopped short with an eloquent gulp in her throat.

"Oh, do tell us about it!" cried Mary.

"Do," urged Priscilla.

"If you wish to hear it," said Constance simply. "It was at a little town in Italy, where nobody knew me. I sang well, I think. The papers said so. All the evening I felt as though I were listening to somebody else, as though I were hearing a voice which was coming to me across a dream. I once had when I was a little girl—a dream of singing before a great crowded house of foreign, unsympathetic faces. The voice seemed very sweet to me, but sad and not extra powerful. I sang Marguerite. When I walked across the stage to the church, I could not see. There was a mist before me. I seemed to think, 'If I get through this, my cause is won,' but my heart beat so, Priscilla, my heart beat so." The sweet oval face paled with the memory. "After that it was all right. I somehow walked through that awful mist. I seemed to pierce it and come out into a space where all was peace. I imagined what mother would have said if she had lived and had been on that other side, 'My brave little daughter.' I fancied she was there. They said I sang better than I had ever sung before." She stopped.

"There was another time," she began again, with a long, tired sigh, "a time when I was the doublure for a great singer down in Naples. To be a doublure is to study the role with the hope to sing in case the real prima donna is ill. Humiliating, but we are all obliged to do it some time or other, and we are often only too glad to seize that chance to be heard. Saponarella was ill. The opera was 'Spartacus,' written by an old Neapolitan who had starved all his life, and who in that one night, at 75 years of age, became famous. There was a contralto who hated me, and who had always been jealous of my teacher's belief in my powers. She drugged some water which stood on the shelf in my dressing room. One of the chorus warned me, and so her purpose was frustrated. It was that which fired me on. I will never forget the drinking song in the opera, Priscilla. I was a woman who saw her lover being led to the scaffold, and, knowing all was hopeless, elected to cheer his last hours with the memory of her voice. It makes you fierce, a song like that. It holds the possibilities of so much emotion. Imagine, if you can, the situation." Constance's face was inspired with a white light that seemed to come from within. "I will sing it for you."

She stood forth on the little mangy mat in front of her doorway; she had drawn them across a near threshold into a tiny room looking out on a dark, narrow court—a room which held a piano and a sparsely filled grate of dying coals. With no more ado she began to sing, in a wild, rich voice, the drinking song of the broken hearted maiden.

The voice held the echo of great grief and passion. It melted into almost maternal tenderness, like the croon of a mother singing her sick child to sleep, and out again to a soaring ecstasy of exalted endeavor which seemed almost prayer. It ended with a broken chord. The little room seemed to Priscilla to vanish. Only a woman's broken hearted voice carrying the strains of a mortal anguish filled the dingy, uninspiring place.

"He dies then," explained Constance quietly. "There is nothing else for me to do but to be silent."

"Oh, Constance," said Priscilla, "I don't wonder you wish to sing when you can sing like that." She felt hopelessly insignificant and inexperienced.

"Thank you," said Constance, laughing. "I wish you were a director."

"I never could sing like that," said Priscilla. "I doubt if ever I could feel like that."

"You must have felt to sing of any emotion," said Constance, with a little sad smile.

"Don't you love it?" cried Priscilla.

"I have almost died for it," returned Constance softly.

Priscilla put her arms around her and gave her a girlish hug.

"You cannot possibly imagine how much I admire you," she said. "You will come and see me, won't you?"

"If I have time," Constance replied.

As Priscilla walked home to the Avenue Montaigne, where Aunt Mildred had secured an apartment, it occurred to her that perhaps Stornmouth might be right, after all. She told Aunt Mildred of her doubts and fears. "Mr. Stornmouth says," she explained, "it is the hardest life in the world."

"I dare say his remark was not entirely disinterested," returned Aunt Mildred, with a mischievous gleam in her still pretty, laughing eyes.

At which Priscilla sniffed contemptuously and withdrew.

SWEDISH WOMEN IN A CLUB.

Chicago Said to Have the Only Organization of the Kind in the United States.

Chicago boasts the only club of Swedish women in the United States. There are now in this country about 2,000,000 Swedes, including those born here of Swedish parentage. Of these fully 100,000 are residents of Chicago, making it really the second Swedish city in the world, ranking next to Stockholm. According to the Chicago Times-Herald 40,000 of them are women, and, outside of the sewing societies and Sunday school associations connected with the Swedish churches, they have only one organization of their own, the Swedish American Women's Equality Association, which combines political, literary, and social features. The Swedish-American newspapers and preachers, and the men generally, look on this society as a huge joke, though the two years of its existence have been most successful. The men cannot associate it with their old country idea of a woman's place in the world.

Strange to say, the idea of organizing this club originated in a New York woman's mind. That woman was Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt. Two years ago she delivered a lecture at Grace English Lutheran church, and the club was the outgrowth of the lecture. A great many prominent Swedish women were present, and Mrs. Emmy Hvald issued a call for a meeting. Ten women responded and enrolled themselves as members of the present club, and for the first time Chicago Swedish women voted for candidates for the School Board and the University.

The purpose of the club is "to obtain for the Swedish-American woman wider opportunity for advancement, spiritual and intellectual culture, and social progress."

The club has only seventy members, but these are representative women, and they intend to branch out and make their organization a nucleus for similar clubs in not only their city, but also in all cities where Swedes are to be found in large numbers. The club meets monthly, when a paper is read by a member, and is followed by a general discussion.

The bowling team of the Park Club will roll its next three games Thursday evening of next week against the Elizabeth team. The games will be rolled on the Park Club alleys. The games are of special significance as the Parks and Elizabeth are close to each other, and three games for either team may make some change in the order. The Parks have won eleven games and lost seven. One less victory and one more defeat than Elizabeth's record. If therefore Elizabeth can get two out of three of the series, she will tie the Parks for second place in the league. Westfield in the meantime will have a chance to carry off the coveted second place by a clean score Tuesday night. Westfield is now tie with Elizabeth, but will roll three games with the New Jersey A. C. at Westfield Tuesday night. If she wins all three it will place her ahead of the Parks and Elizabeth by a very small margin. The New Jersey A. C. is weak, particularly so on strange alleys, and after the showing Westfield made last Tuesday, it seems likely that Westfield will accomplish what she wishes. The next week promises to make several changes in the standing in the league. If, however, the Park Club bowlers continue their present creditable work they are likely to get back to second place without delay. Elizabeth is strong and the result of the games between her team and the Parks Thursday night will be watched with interest.

BASKET BALL.

According to the ruling of the Directors of the Y. M. C. A., the visitors who sit in the gallery at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium at basket ball games or any other contests will be very limited in number. A certain number will also be allowed to stand in the gallery. The rest can go where they can find room. This is the result of the announcement of Chief Doane that the old method of filling the gallery was a violation of the State laws. The present method will comply with the law but will, no doubt, materially reduce the income of the basket ball team from its gate receipts.

The basket ball game in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Monday evening was to have been with the team from the Eastern District of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A. Owing to the fact that the Eastern District was suspended for a time owing to a game with an unregistered team, Manager Fuller, of the Plainfield team, secured the Bowery Boys for that night. The date was made so that if at the last moment the Eastern District team was able to play, the bann of the A. A. U. being removed in time, the Bowery Boys were not to come. The Eastern District team is still in disgrace, however, and the Bowery Boys were a good attraction.

The chilly temperature and the mist and rain that has fallen during the morning, have combined to make the city streets and sidewalks alike unpleasant for horses and foot passengers. The rain froze as it fell and the sidewalks are now sheets of glass.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Thorn, of East Second street, have been entertaining their daughter from Orange.

CONTESTANTS ARE HUSTLING.

Bright Prospects in The Daily Press Subscription Contest Already.

The prospect of a practical business education to be obtained free has aroused the young people of the city and borough to renewed efforts. It isn't difficult work after all to secure subscriptions for The Daily Press, as many of the contestants are finding out. It merely takes a fair presentation of the excellence of The Press to round up many new subscribers. As a result the contestants are beginning to turn in new subscribers thick and fast. Several have taken a good start and are steadily hustling. It's anybody's race yet, however, and plenty of enterprise is the best stock in trade that the young canvassers need.

Both bookkeeping and shorthand are valuable investments to the young business man or woman. Even if they do not intend to make either of the subjects their life work, they will be exceedingly valuable in many other lines. The Plainfield Business College teaches a practical system, as anyone interested can see by personally visiting the college. The Gregg School of Stenography, the course in which is second prize in the contest, is eminently practical in every way. The instruction is of the latest up-to-date methods of the Gregg system, acknowledged to be one of the best and easiest systems in existence.

HUSKED CORN IN A CHAIR.

A Tell-tale Picture That May Have Important Bearing in Deciding Jury.

Justice Smalley, of the borough, is holding court today to try the contract case of Josewh W. Hastings, of Hastings, of Newark, against Mrs. Phebe E. Osborn, of Washingtonville, The case is an interesting one, and is bound to develop some humorous points. Up to the hour of going to press the case was still going on, with prospects of its taking up the whole afternoon.

Hastings lives in Newark, and worked on Mrs. Osborn's farm four months last summer. He claims regular pay for his work, and is suing Mrs. Osborn for $150 which, he says, she still owes him. Mrs. Osborn, on the other hands, says that she took Hastings in and gave him work out of pity. He was to do errands and help around, she says, and for this was to receive $2 a week and his board. Mrs. Osborn admits she owes Hastings $8, which amount she has tendered him in court.

Mrs. Osborn does not speak very enthusiastically about Hastings' love for work, and her counsel, Counsellor S. S. Swackhamer, has in his possession a photograh of Hastings, where he is husking corn. The point about this picture is that the man is seated comfortably in a high-back chair husking, while his companion husks seated on a stump. This photograph Mr. Swackhamer intends showing to the jury.

KEEP OFF THE WAGON.

Mayor Wilson Says Boys Must Stay Off Fire Department Apparatus.

Mayor Wilson, of the borough, has given a warning to all boys and young men not to jump on any fire apparatus in the borough or to interfere in any way with the firemen in the performance of their duty. If they persist in following up up this practice they will be arrested by the marshals.

The other day while the hose wagon was on its way to a fire a boy who was on the wagon was thrown fully twenty feet at the corner of Linden avenue and Somerset street and nearly killed. The Mayor is determined to break up this practice at once. There have been times when the firemen could not get on the apparatus owing to the great number of boys that have jumped on while on the way to a fire.

Pneumonia Was Fatal.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Fanwood, January 13—Alfred Terry, son of the late Jonathan Terry, died this morning at his late residence in Fanwood township. The cause of his death was pneumonia, and the deceased had been ill only two days. The funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Interment will be in the Methodist cemetery, Plainfield.

TO WELCOME SOLDIERS.

Preparations for Reception of Companies E and C, Third Regiment.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Jan. 13.—Mayor Mack and Captain D. F. Collins, the former commander of Company E, have taken steps to arrange to give the boys of Companies E and C a grand reception on their return. As soon as the news was confirmed that the Third Regiment was to be mustered out at Athens, Ga., there was great rejoicing here, and letters were sent post-haste urging the men to come home in a body and under their commanders, so that a reception could be given them.

Captain Collins will try and have an ordinance passed by the City Council next Monday evening appropriating a sum of money for this purpose, and appoint a committee to take charge of the public welcome.

Interest Defaulted.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Cranford, Jan. 13 — The people of Cranford were much surprised to learn that the January interest on the registered township sewer bonds, held by the Provident Savings Bank, of Jersey City, had been defaulted. Treasurer McIntyre has explained the matter satisfactorily, stating that he thought the interest was payable at the State Bank in Elizabeth, and that he did not know it was his duty to send a check for the amount due to the Jersey City bank. The interest has been paid and the default has been explained to the satisfaction of the bank.

Contest for Postmaster.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, January 13.—The village of Spotswood, in Middlesex county, about eight miles from New Brunswick, is divided upon the question of the postmastership. There are two candidates, Edward Underhill and Joseph Hodapp. Hodapp is thought to have the backing of the local Republican leaders and it is expected that he will secure the indorsement of Congressman Howell, but Underhill is making a stiff fight. It is expected that the appointment will be made the first week in February.

Board of Trade's Annual Meeting.

SAD ENDING OF A SOCIAL FRATERNITY.

Knights of Ancient Essenic Order Will Probably Disband.

AN AUSPICIOUS OPENING.

WAS COMPOSED OF PROFESSIONAL AND BUSINESS MEN.

Great Interest Was Taken In Organization at the Start—Was Formally Organized With Ninety-Eight Members—Great Plans For the Future—It Will Now Close With a Banquet.

After one of the most auspicious openings ever granted to a secret society in Plainfield, Senate Lodge, No. 621, Knights of the Ancient Essenic Order, stands on the verge of dissolution. Wednesday evening will see a final banquet that is expected to end the affairs of the organization in a burst of glory and good time.

Sixteen months ago Organizer Wahl, of the Essenic Order, came to Plainfield, with the intention of forming a lodge. The objects of the organization were social and fraternal. There were no sick benefit or insurance schemes connected with it. Wahl met with success at the start. He succeeded in interesting a nummer of the prominent young men of the city, principally professional and business men. They took the matter in hand and ninety-eight were enrolled when the lodge was formally organized.

The new organization seemed to fill a long felt want among the young men and much enthusiasm was shown over its organization. The first few meetings were largely attended and the whole affair was pronounced a grand and unqualified success.

Elaborate plans were mapped out for the future. A programme committee was appointed to provide entertainment for each meeting and it was understood that a grand minstrel show was to be given in Music Hall to raise money to purchase the necessary paraphernalia for the initiatory proceedings of the lodge. The ritual of the order was very elaborate as were also the costumes supposed to be worn at the formal exercises. A small amount was purchased but it was the intention to have the complete outfit.

Then the meetings began to fall off in attendance. The programme committee did not provide entertainment and, at last, the meetings themselves ceased.

Since then, several efforts have been made to arouse interest in the lodge again but without success. Somehow it wouldn't take. Similiar lodges were afterwards organized in Newark and New Brunswick and are now in a flourishing condition. New York also has several lodges that are very popular. The attempt in Elizabeth was a failure.

There is nearly $150 in the lodge treasury so it was decided to hold a farewell banquet, as it were, for the members who still remain in good standing. The banquet will be held at the City Hotel Wednesday evening. While a few of the members wish to continue the life of the lodge, the vast majority believe that it should be dissolved at the close of the banquet.

Senator Reed has returned from a business trip to Washington.

AGED MRS. HART ACTED IN AN IMPROVIDENT WAY.

HER PROPERTY RETURNED TO HER.

She Conveyed Her Property to Her Stepson and Then Regretted the Action.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, Jan. 14—Vice-Chancellor Reed yesterday filed an opinion annuling the conveyances and assignments of property and mortgages made by Sarah Ann Hart, of Scotch Plains, Union county, to her stepson, Levi E. Hart, a lawyer of Westfield.

Mrs. Hart is considerably more than eighty years of age. In 1896 she was living in her own house at Scotch Plains in company with a feeble-minded son by a former husband. The property where she lived was worth $1,500. She also owned a mortgage of $3,500, another mortgage of $1,000 and a wood lot worth perhaps $250. The income from her property was insufficient to support herself and unfortunate son, and she turned it over to her stepson, Hart, under and agreement that he was to support her and her imbecile son. The latter died in a few months and after living for a time with her stepson, Mrs. Hart left for her brother's house, where she still resides. She then brought the suit to have the conveyances set aside on the ground that she had been unduly influenced by her stepson.

The Vice-Chancellor fails to find, from the testimony, that the stepson exerted any undue influence over her, and says the acts should not be permitted to stand because they "were clearly improvident acts of an old lady." The opinion says "they were made without consultation with any disinterested person, without consideration, in favor of those in whose house and in whose care she lived."

BOBBED UP FOR AN HOUR.

Miss Segal Was Before the Grand Jury But Disappeared Immediately.

(Special to The Daily Press)

Elizabeth, Jan. 14.—Miss Rose Segal, clad in black and wearing a heavy black veil, was ushered before the Grand Jury yesterday to give her evidence to that body against her father, Rabbi Segal, her brothers, Frank and Bertrand and Louis Norton, a clothier in Market street, Newark.

Miss Segal was brought to the city by Justice E. R. Collins, of Westfield, and after being before the Grand Jury about an hour was piloted again by the Justice. She eluded all the newspaper men and boarded a train for New York.

Justice Collins says that he is the only one in Jersey who has known Mrs. Segal's whereabouts. It was intimated by Miss Segal's attorney, Samuel Schleimer, that the reason of her sequestering herself was to prevent her father from serving ne exeat papers upon her.

Dr. John Max Beiner, the complainant against the Segal's and Norton, was before the Grand Jury for over two hours.

The jury has not brought in any indictments and cannot do so until next week as Justice VanSyckel is out of the city.

Isaac Squires Changes His Position.

Isaac Squires, of the borough, for many years a valued employe of the Potter Printing Press Works, resigned his position last evening to accept a position with the Campbell Printing Press Company. Next Wednesday Mr. Squires will sail for London, Eng., where he will have charge of the erection of the firm's presses abroad. He will be in communication with Harry Morrison, formerly of this city, who is now located in London as the representative of the Campbell company.

MAYOR WILSON ON THE PAYMENT OF TAXES

Borough Officials Do Not Intend To Be Harsh.

THEY MUST FOLLOW LAW.

NO INCONVENIENCE FOR MOST OF THE DELINQUENTS TO PAY.

Mayor Wilson Says That Most of the Taxpayers Who Have Not Settled Their Accounts With the Borough Have Fallen Into the Habit Because of Tax Methods Prevailing for Years.

To the Editor of the Daily Press.—Several articles have recently appeared in your columns upon the subject of the collection of delinquent taxes in North Plainfield, which gave the impression that the borough authorities were inclined to be harsh in their treatment of delinquents.

Nothing could be further from the truth. The fact is that nothing has been done, nor is proposed, except the mere compliance with the spirit of the tax laws, which have been in existence for the last forty years. Nothing new and nothing different from what is done in other townships is contemplated.

The officers of the borough are elected by the people and charged by law with the performance of certain duties. They are solemnly sworn to perform those duties without fear or favor, and are false to their trust and to their oath if they do otherwise.

One of the most important of those duties is to collect the taxes. The law commands that for all personal and poll taxes which remain unpaid Dec. 20th, a warrant shall issue within five days, under which the goods of the delinquent shall be sold, and if sufficient money cannot be made in that way the body of the delinquent must be taken to the county jail.

Persons who pay their taxes complain, and with reason, if this law is not enforced, and the authorities have no option unless they violate the law. Never-the-less, it is not proposed to jail any citizen who is really unable to pay his tax, but when it is remembered that taxes, with exception of poll tax, are levied only upon property, and that the poor man is assessed but in proportion to his possessions, it will be seen that the destitute is not assessed at all.

On December 21st there were over seven hundred delinquents in North Plainfield. Each delinquent ordinarily represents a family. Does any one believe that there are anything like one-half that number of families in North Plainfield who cannot pay their taxes without distress if they chose?

It has been said that a large proportion of these delinquents were mechanics out of work. That is not true as examination of the list will show. It is nearer the truth to say that because of failure to comply with the law in years past people have fallen into the habit of neglecting payment. Who will assert that it is not a bad habit, while the borough is obliged to borrow money, and pay interest?

John F. Wilson,
Mayor.

LISTENED TO THEIR PROTESTS.

Evidence Taken of Objectors to the Union County Boulevard.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, January 14—The property owners on the north side of Westfield avenue in Union township, who object to the awards made by the commissioners appointed by the court to condemn that portion of their land needed for the proposed county boulevard, gathered in the Freeholders' room yesterday to state their objections to Court Stenographer Herbert Knight, of Newark, who was delegated by Justice VanSyckel to receive their statements. Several lawyers were on hand, and the commissioners who made the awards were also present as interested parties.

There were several women among the objectors. Many questions were propounded by the lawyers, and the taking of testimony occupied most of the afternoon. The statements of the objectors will be submitted by Stenographer Knight to Justice VanSyckel, who has designated Monday, Jan. 23d, as the date for the hearing in the Union county court.

Death of a Servant.

Mrs. Martha Wagener, for many years a servant at the home of C. W. King, Watchung avenue, died yesterday. The funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the undertaking parlors of A. M. Runyon & Son, Park avenue. Rev. Mr. Richardson will officiate.

LIVING BOOK TITLES.

LIBRARY TEA GIVEN AT THE HOME OF MRS. FRANK ROWLEY.

Queer Devices for Representing Titles of Books—Some of the Best—Prizes for Those Guessing the Most Titles.

A novel affair arranged by Mrs. Frank S. Rowley, assisted by Mrs. J. O. Stevens, was given last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rowley, Sycamore avenue, for the benefit of the building fund of the Church of the Redeemer. It was called a library party.

Those who attended represented in some manner the title of some well-known book. Mrs. W. M. Downey represented "Never Too Late to Mend," with a torn kid glove, while "An Old Woman's Outlook" was represented by Rev. W. M. Downey, who carried a pair of spectacles on the lapel of his coat. "Pickwick Papers" was represented by Frank S. Brown, who carried a quill toothpick tied with a lamp wick. "The Quick and the Dead" was interpreted by James Rogers. He had pinned to his coat a piece of a New York paper and another piece of a Philadelphia paper.

There were in all between forty and fifty guests present. During the evening there were vocal solos by George O. Stevents and Walter Arnold Hudson, while J. O. Stevens entertained the guests with a reading, all of which was greatly enjoyed.

Prizes were awarded to those guessing the greatest number of book titles. The first prize, a chocolate cake, was presented to Miss Clapp, she having guessed twenty-seven titles, while Rev. W. M. Montgomery, who guessed twenty-six titles received second prize, a box of Huyler's candy. The booby prizes, candy canes, were presented to Frank S. Brown and Miss Davis.

During the affair there was a successful sale of candies and the sum of $30 will be realized as profits from the entertainment.

BANQUET FOLLOWED INSTALLATION.

Foresters Start Their New Year in a Jolly Manner.

A memorable event in the history of Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order of Foresters, was that of last evening when the annual installation of officers took place. There was a large attendance of members and a number of high court officers. High Physician Lowrie, of this city, installed the officers, assisted by Court Deputy Joseph Berd and Bulkner. George Bold acted as marshal and conductor. The work of installation was performed in a commendable manner, after which in the good and welfare of the order the members enjoyed several songs and instrumental music.

The officers installed are as follows: Court deputy, John Allen; past chief ranger, G. Weber, Jr.; chief ranger, John J. Praed; vice-ranger, James O. Hansen; treasurer, W. A. Reinmann; chaplain, LeRoy DeCamp; senior woodward, Harold Hansen; junior woodward, M. Westergaard; senior beadle, P. Nugent; junior beadle, H. Jorgensen.

After the business of the evening was concluded adjournment was made to McVey's Hotel, where a bountiful repast was served. Everybody did ample justice to the good things set before them and pronounced "Mac" a genial host.

Court Plainfield organized a few years ago with fourteen members and today there are one hundred and twenty five on the roll.

STOPPED IN TOO MANY GIN MILLS.

John Sullivan, of Berkley Heights, no relation to the original "John L.," came to Plainfield yesterday to help his employer out of trouble and succeeded in getting locked up in the borough before he reached home. He works for Mr. Mushrome, a hotel-keeper at Berkley Heights. Sullivan was sent to Justice Mosher with a doctor's certificate showing that he was not well enough to appear in court to answer to a suit brought against him by another man. The note was delivered, but Sullivan, in going home, stopped once too often. He finally became so intoxicated that Chief Wilson was obliged to lock him up last evening. His horse and wagon was placed in the stables at Drier's Hotel, and this morning Sullivan was sent to Somerville for ten days. The owner of the rig has been notified to come after his property.

TELL-TALE PICTURE IMPORTANT WITNESS

WORTH ONLY $2 A WEEK.

GREAT AMUSEMENT AT TRIAL OF HASTINGS AGAINST OSBORN.

But the Farmhand Wanted $1.50 Per Day—Picture Showing Him Seated in a Big Arm Chair Husking Corn Caused His Case to Collapse—Jury Awarded Him $11—He Wanted $193.

There is sometimes a great deal of amusement to be had listening to the trial of cases in a justice's court, but probably the Hastings-Osborn case, tried before Justice Smalley and a jury yesterday, furnished more fun and a greater opportunity for the lawyers engaged to bring out the humorous features than any case tried in this city for some time.

J. W. Hastings, of Newark, as was told in yesterday's Press, sued Mrs. Phebe E. Osborn, of Washingtonville, for $193, which he claimed as balance due him for work done on her farm last summer. Hastings, according to his account, thought he was entitled to $222 for four months work. He credited Mrs. Osborn with enough to leave a balance of $193, which amount he still said was due him.

Counselor S. S. Swackhamer was Mrs. Osborn's lawyer, and handled the case with consummate skill, so that after the jury had been out an hour they returned with a verdict of $11 in favor of the plaintiff.

The case was more like a farce in a play than anything, and Mr. Swackhamer, by his witty remarks, kept not only the spectators but the court and jurymen in a condition of mirth from start to finish. At times, in his summing up, they would burst out into roars of laughter. Hastings was made to appear as ridiculous as possible. Mrs. Osborn proved that he agreed to come out to her farm and work for her for $2 a week and board. He claimed to be a practical farmer, but an example of his practical ability was shown when he allowed three tons of hay to rot, and let the weeds in the potato patch grow so high that they had to be cut down with a grass scythe. Two barrels of potatoes were planted in this patch, but owing to neglect only four barrels were dug.

What capped the climax was a photograph of this "practical farmer" comfortably seated in a large arm chair out in the field husking corn, as Mr. Swackhamer said, "with the soft breezes of autumn blowing round his head, the birds singing and the golden rod waving in the wind." In that position this "practical farmer" succeeded in husking one bushel of corn a day, worth 25 cents, and then demanded $1.50 a day pay. A magnifying glass was secured, and the jurymen given a chance to examine the photograph through that.

Mrs. Osborn admitted that she owed Hastings $2 and tendered him that amount in court before the day of trial. His books showed that she still owed him $13, according to the $2 a week plan, so the jury simply compromised and gave him $11. Robert M. Clark represented the plaintiff.

CALLED COP NAMES: PAID $5.

A Youth Whose Overdose of Jersey Lightning Had Bad Affect.

Andrew Benford, a youth of nineteen from Paradise Alley, visited Washington Hall last Saturday evening. He was somewhat overcome by an overdose of "Jersey lightning." He saw Special Officer Mattox there. When the latter requested Benford to move on, Benford applied such improper terms to the policeman that the latter felt bound to bring the matter before City Judge Runyon. After one adjournment the hearing was held this morning.

Benford admitted that it might all be true and so the Judge fined him $5 with a warning not to do it again.

CAME HOME AFTER 25 YEARS AND NOT KNOWN.

HE WENT WEST AND GREW UP.

Was Not Even Recognized By His Mother Until He Told Her Who He Was.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, Jan. 14—W. W. Pittenger, of Mercer street, had the novel experience Saturday morning of meeting his own brother without knowing him. It happened like this: Twenty-five years ago Mr. Pittenger's brother Joe lived at Clinton. One night Joe, who was a likely lad, followed Horace Greeley's advice and "lit out" for the west. For a number of years his whereabouts was unknown to his family. Then he wrote home that he was doing well. He started his career at the bottom of the ladder. His first job was that of dish washer on a big ranch. As he grasped the western idea his rise was steady. He is now known as J. P. Pittenger, assistant supervisor of the western division of the Western Union Telegraph Company.

Recently he had a hankering to see the scenes of his boyhood. He obtained two months' leave of absence and came east. He first went to the home of his mother at Clinton, but she failed to see in the man any resemblance of the boy who had left home twenty-five years ago, and did not recognize him as her son. Mrs. Pittenger and her son journeyed here Saturday to give W. W. Pittenger a surprise. Mr. Pittenger met them at the door of his home and after greeting his mother gave the stranger a distant handshake and began to talk about the weather. Mr. Pittenger's wife, who has a keen memory for faces, recognized Joe, and then there was much rejoicing.

ROESEL DECISION MONDAY.

U. S. Supreme Court to Decide the Fate of Mr. Pitts' Murderer.

(Special to The Daily Press)

Washington, Jan. 14—The Clerk of the United States Supreme Court said Thursday that in all probability the court will Monday next render its decision on the appeal case of Louis Roesel, convicted of the murder of James C. Pitts, a farmer, of Summit. Roesel has already been sentenced three times to be hanged, and if the decision of the court is adverse to him he will again be sentenced.

After Roesel was convicted, the first appeal taken by his lawyer was on the ground that the Oyer and Terminer was not legally in session. Counsel for Roesel later took another appeal, which the court dismissed. This was followed by an application for a writ of habeas corpus, which the court denied. An appeal from the decision denying the writ was taken to the United States Supreme Court, and it is this application that the court will render a decision on Monday.

ATTACKED BY A DOG.

Mrs. J. O. Stevens Frightened so That She Fainted Away.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. J. O. Stevens, wife of Secretary Stevens, of the Postal Telegraph and Cable Company, was attacked by a large and somewhat vicious dog while she was passing through Washington Park on her way to the home of Mrs. Frank S. Rowley, to attend the Church of the Redeemer affair. The dog tore Mrs. Stevens' dress and she was so frightened that she fainted away on the sidewalk. Residents at Harold Serrell's home, corner of Myrtle and Sycamore avenues, assisted Mrs. Stevens into the house and in a little while she came to and was able to attend the affair at Mrs. Rowley's home.

Only recently this same dog attacked W. Wilder Rowley, of Sycamore avenue, and it was with difficulty that he escaped serious injuries. The owner of the dog should take every precaution to see that his dog does no damage.

Officers Installed.

Star of Plainfield Lodge, No. 25, Shepherds of Bethlehem, held their regular meeting in Grand Army Hall last Thursday evening, and officers for the ensuing six months were installed. Sir. David Bowden was the installing officer, assisted by Sir. Laraman. There were ten applications for membership received at the meeting. They will be acted upon at the next meeting.

Weather Kept Many Away.

There was a small attendance at the union evangelistic service at the First Presbyterian church last night. Rev. G. Kennedy Newell was the speaker, and gave an informal talk founded upon the story of the "Prodigal Son."

Funeral of Alfred Terry.

The funeral services of Alfred Terry, son of the late Jonathan Terry, of Fanwood township, will be held tomorrow afternoon from the residence at 1:45 o'clock instead of 2:30 o'clock as first announced.

UNION COUNTY AT THE INAUGURATION.

Plainfield Will Send a Goodly Delegation.

VERY LITTLE ENTHUSIASM.

TOO MUCH TALK ABOUT SIMPLE INAUGURATION HAS QUIETED IT.

Union County Will Have a Special Train, a Parade and Also the Governor—Special Excursion Rates for the Day—Plainfielders are Loyal to Party and Will Turn Out—Schedule of the Special Train.

Union county is planning to send a goodly delegation to see its favored son, Foster M. Voorhees, inaugurated as governor of the State of New Jersey, Tuesday. Plainfield is expected to furnish her share of the Union county representation. Despite the promises that the inauguration was to be a very quite affair, Trenton will see a lively time on that occasion.

There has not been any overpowering enthusiasm over the inauguration on the part of the Plainfield Republicans. That may be accounted for by the continual statement that it was to be a very quiet affair. Of course there will be a goodly turnout from here as some of the politicians have much to do in Trenton that day. There are various committee conferences and quiet little chats that may be productive of much in the near future.

To the rank and file of the party there is none of this to interest, the ceremonies and reception being the only things to interest. Although there isn't to be any grand parade, the Union county delegation is scheduled to march through the streets to Taylor's Opera House. Essex county may have her delegates go and do likewise. The Plainfield Republicans are a pretty loyal lot of men, however, and they are going to the inauguration if there isn't anything but the Governor to see.

The Jersey Central railroad has provided a special train direct to Trenton for the convenience of the Union county delegates. The Newark men will also be taken in. The train starts at Newark at 8 o'clock and will come to Elizabeth and then out to Plainfield which will be the last stop before reaching Trenton. The train will go direct, leaving the main line at Trenton junction. Returning, the special train will leave Trenton at 6 o'clock that evening. The following schedule will be observed in the morning:

	Train Leaves A. M.
Newark, Broad Street	8.00
" Ferry Street	8.02
" East Ferry Street	8.04
Elizabethport	8.15
Elizabeth	8:20
Roselle	8.25
Cranford	8.29
Westfield	8.34

Excursion tickets will be sold to Trenton Tuesday at a reduced rate, which will be good on the special train or any of the regular trains.

SECOND ARREST SCARES BONDSMAN.

John Teeple was arrested this morning by Constable Mattox, on a warrant from Justice Nash's court, and held under $200 bail on a charge of stealing feed, flour and grain from P. M. French the Somerset street miller. The alleged thefts extend over a period from July 19th, 1898, to September 15th, 1898.

Teeple worked for P. M. French at that time, and it is said that he took the flour, grain, etc., and sold it, pocketing the money. The total amount alleged to have been taken is worth $25.

Teeple is awaiting trial now on similar charges, preferred several weeks ago, and was out on a bond furnished by F. Margentino, of Park avenue. When Margentio heard this morning of Teeple's second arrest, he asked to be relieved from the former bond, which was granted. Teeple will be taken to Elizabeth this afternoon.

Mr. Giles to Retire.

Isaac E. Giles, the West Front street baker, will give up his place of business some time during next week. He has made an assignment to a Mr. Dunham, a relative. Just what Mr. Giles intends to do he has not as yet made public. It is said that the place will be opened by another candy-maker and baker at an early date.

One of the Wreck Victims Leaves Hospital.

LET US ARM YOU!

It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

HOT SHOT FOR EAGAN

The War Commission Return His Testimony for Expurgation.

GEN. ALGER SAYS NOTHING

Letter Accompanying It Tells the Commissary-General That His Vituperative Language Attacking Gen. Miles Was Improper—The Cabinet Considers the Matter.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.--Immediately upon assembling yesterday, the war investigating commission decided to return to Commissary General Eagan the official copy of the testimony delivered by him before the commission Thursday.

A letter of transmittal explains the action of the commissioners.

The following letter was sent:

Office of the Commission Appointed by the President to Investigate the Conduct of the War Department in the War With Spain.

Washington, Jan. 13, 1899.

To Brigadier General C. P. Eagan, Commissary General, War Department:

Sir: We respectfully inform you that after your testimony was read yesterday, the following resolution was unanimously passed:

Moved, That the commission receive General Eagan's testimony without comment; that it be not printed at once, but held for the consideration of the whole commission.

Carried.

Having now considered the questions involved, we have determined that in many instances the vituperatie language used by you was not such as ought to have been addressed as a witness to this board. We think that the personal attacks and irrelevant statements contained in the paper submitted should be eliminated and before receiving it as testimony we request that you will revise its language and, if you choose, resubmit it for our consideration.

We herewith return your papers.

Very respectfully,
CHARLES DENBY,
Vice President.

General Eagan, speaking of the action of the war commission in returning him his statement for revision, remarked:

"It is hard that a man is not allowed to call a spade a spade. I will not say what action I will take, or whether I will eliminate anything. I will take advice in the matter and then determine my action."

General Miles said that he had little to say regarding the remarks of General Eagan. Concerning his own position on the beef question, he desired to make it clear that he had not volunteered the statements made before the war investigating commission. He said:

"As it is the duty of every commanding officer to investigate charges of this kind, I was making a proper military investigation. When asked by the commission if I had any testimony to offer, I replied that I had nothing to volunteer, but later a more imperative order came for me to appear and I did so. I stated only what I was compelled to in answer to questions by members of the commission, that required a truthful answer. As to calling for a court martial to try General Eagan, I do not care to say anything, except that I shall do my duty."

Alger Has Nothing to Say.

The main interest at the war department in the sensational attack made by Commissary General Eagan on Major General Miles before the war investigating commission centered in the question as to whether or not action would be taken to prosecute General Eagan.

Secretary Alger will give no sign of what his course will be. It is evident that he feels keenly the notoriety into which the army personnel has been brought by General Eagan's statements, and realizes the embarrassing position in which the war department is placed on account of its promise that no officer should be held accountable elsewhere for testimony before the commission.

From the remarks of high officers of the department it appears to be probable that the immunity from prosecution promised officers may be extended to General Eagan.

That is the way some of the officers in authority construe the promise of protection to army witnesses.

Other officers, however, contend that the rejection of General Eagan's testimony by the commission withdraws from him the protection that was promised and that it will be necessary for the secretary of war to order a court martial for the trial of General Eagan.

Gen. Wood Says Beef Was Good.

General Leonard Wood, military governor of Santiago, was the first witness before the war investigating commission yesterday morning.

He said that a great deal of refrigerated beef was sent the troops at Santiago. It had a slight mould on it but was unloaded in good condition. There was a prejudice among the troops against the meat that had aged to any extent.

A great deal of the beef was condemned, not because the beef was bad when it reached Santiago, but because it could not be properly handled. It would leave the ship before daybreak in the morning and not reach the troops before four or five o'clock in the afternoon.

Speaking generally, he said that the campaign should be judged by the result. The enemy was beaten. The campaign was not devoid of hardship, but it was not as severe as the operations under General Lawton on the Yakin river in 1886, when little food could be had.

Continuing, General Wood remarked that the army in Cuba had accomplished what was regarded as impossible. The foreign attaches regarded the expedition as wonderfully successful. They often remarked on the overcoming of the natural difficulties. The landing in Cuba was performed in the face of untold dangers Eagan's Case Before the Cabinet.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.--The cabinet engaged in a full discussion of the sensational testimony given by General Eagan before the war investigating commission.

No member of the cabinet would make any statement on the matter after the meeting. Each one, upon being questioned, replied that the subject was entirely in the hands of the president and the secretary of war.

The letter of the investigating commission returning the copy of General Eagan's testimony was read at the meeting. One of the cabinet members called attention to the fact and said by way of comment that the commission's action had the decided approval of the president and cabinet.

Immediately after the cabinet meeting general interest was centered in the letter of the investigating commission and its possible effect on any contemplated official action against the commissary general.

The statement of a cabinet officer that the president distinctly approved the act of the commission, leads to the question whether or not the administration will not be satisfied to drop the case against General Eagan in case he shall comply with the commissioners' request by striking out of his testimony the vituperative language used against the commanding general.

It is not known that the action of the commission was inspired by the president or by the secretary of war, but it is regarded as barely possible that the administration will be satisfied with the suggested official retraction of the abusive language by General Eagan.

ROOSEVELT ON ARMY BEEF.

The Governor Told Gen. Miles That Some of It Was Unfit for Use.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 14.--Governor Roosevelt's letter sent to General Miles regarding the meat furnished to the Rough Riders contained a discussion as to the four kinds of beef furnished to the Rough Riders.

Colonel Roosevelt told Gen. Miles that the corned beef ration was good, but that the so-called canned roast beef was very bad. At best this canned roast beef was tasteless, and at the worst it was nauseating, and as a matter of fact, even when hungry, the men never ate one-quarter of the total amount of their rations of this beef.

There was put on board the transport on which Colonel Roosevelt's regiment sailed for Cuba a number of quarters of beef which it was said had been specially prepared to resist tropical heat. After forty-eight hours this beef became putrid, and the men of the regiment who were compelled to remain in its vicinity could not stand the odor which came from it, which permeated the forward deck of the ship.

Finally Colonel Wood succeeded in getting it condemned, and it is the belief of Colonel Roosevelt that it was thrown overboard. The canned beef was stringy, the letter says, and tasteless, and most of the men could not choke it down, so exceedingly repulsive was it found to be.

This was the beef supplied to the regiment from the time it left San Antonio until it reached Tampa, Fla., and afterward for two weeks on board the transport on the way to Cuba. This beef, Colonel Roosevelt's letter said, was absolutely undesirable for the purpose for which it was purchased.

As to the beef provided in Santiago after about July 25, the letter said, the quality was good. This beef came in quarters in refrigerator ships. The specially prepared beef, or the so-called "embalmed" beef" could only be made use of, the letter said, in a case where the regiment could get a plentiful supply of fresh vegetables and salt to disguise it effectually. Unfortunately no salt came with the army rations.

The substance of this matter set forth in the letter to General Miles was testified to by Colonel Roosevelt when he was called before the war investigating commission, and the letter also contained a report Col. Roosevelt made to the war department about September 12, just before the muster out of his regiment.

This report made to the war department was supported by a supplemental statement of Quartermaster Coleman of the Rough Riders, by the regimental surgeon and by some of the captains.

Governor Roosevelt is known to regret greatly the turn the trouble seems to be taking in the war department with respect to the army beef, as he feels very strongly that it is not important to try to censure anyone for what is past, but that it is most important to get everything arranged so that it will work well in the future should an emergency arise. Whatever he has written or testified to has been with this end in view.

QUAY IS RESOURCEFUL

His Opponents Fear He May Get Democratic Votes.

BOTH SIDES HARD AT WORK.

Monday May See the Final Round-up of the Rival Forces in the Pennsylvania Fight—Quay's Friends Say He Has Considerable Strength Yet in Reserve.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 14.--It is feared now by Senator Quay's opponents that his managers are negotiating for enough Democratic votes to help him through the squeeze into which the factional warfare in the Republican ranks has driven him. Certain Democrats have admitted that they would rather vote for Quay than any other Republican, but the danger in any deal with the Democrats is that some Republicans will leave Quay the moment it appears that there is any understanding with the minority. A few of the Democratic leaders are suspected of Quay tendencies, and they are being watched by their colleagues.

The action of the Democratic caucus Thursday in turning down the resolution providing for regular and prompt attendance on every session of the joint convention of the legislature has confirmed the suspicion of a dicker with them in the interest of Senator Quay.

The impression is growing stronger that it will be impossible for Senator Quay to win with Republican votes alone.

Before leaving for home the anti-Quay managers declared that their list of members who would refuse to vote for Quay until he was cleared of the conspiracy charges already numbered sixty, and that by Tuesday, when the balloting is to begin, there would be more lined up with the anti-Quay organization.

State Chairman Elkin has left for Philadelphia, and the only prominent leader here is Senator Mitchell of Jefferson, who will stand by Quay until the end.

The fact that the Quay men are circulating a pledge among those who are friendly to the senior senator to hold them to him to the end, leads to the belief that there will be a long deadlock, with a probable compromise in the end.

Many of the enthusiastic supporters of Quay announce their purpose to remain with him until he is elected or defeated. They contend that they have at least one hundred votes that can be counted for Quay all the time, and that when he comes to give out administration favors and good committee assignments in the legislature there will be a break up of the anti-Quay forces.

The "insurgents" say that these favors have all been discounted many times.

The argument made by those who try to justify the possible support of Quay by Democrats is that he supported the Teller resolution twice in the United States Senate, and voted against the force bill.

Spatz of Berks, who is accused of having Quay leanings, says the Democrats could support former Senator Cameron, and he intimates that the time might come when that would happen.

Cameron's free silver record and his opposition to the force bill would make him acceptable to the Democratic members.

Senator Quay will return to Harrisburg on Sunday or Monday, and then the final round up of the forces will be made.

Both sides are confident. Senator Quay's success in other close battles has undoubtedly given him a prestige that is invaluable to him at this critical period.

Winchester, Va., to Receive a Large Sum.

Scranton Pa., Jan. 14.--Judge Acheson of the United States circuit court has rendered an opinion in the case brought by Henry Handley and others to have set aside that provision of the will of the late Judge John Handley of this city which made the city of Winchester, Va., his residuary legatee.

It was claimed that the bequest to Winchester was invalid because that city had not the legal capacity to administer the trust.

Judge Acheson, in a long and exhaustive discussion of all the questions raised, sustains the will in its entirety. The testator's meaning is sufficiently plain, he says, and the charity to which the bequest was made a highly meritorious one.

Judge Handley left $250,000 for a public library for Winchester. This, together with the residuary estate, brings Winchester's bequest up to at least half a million.

Great Increase in Exports.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.--The bureau of statistics yesterday made public its monthly statement of exports of breadstuffs, provisions, including cattle and hogs, cotton and mineral oils.

The statement shows a remarkable expansion of our export trade for the calendar year 1898, the total being $789,667,394, against $693,610,747 for the year 1897, which was in its turn much the largest for any year since 1892, when our total exports of breadstuffs, provisions, cotton and mineral oils aggregated $671,563,574.

For December, 1898, the total exports of the commodities named was $93,273,506, as against $88,630,606 for December, 1897.

New York Senate Thanks Miss Gould.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 14.--The Senate was in session but ten minutes Friday and then adjourned until Monday evening.

The Assembly concurrent resolution, thanking Miss Helen Miller Gould for her patriotic and benevolent work during the Spanish-American war was unanimously adopted.

Governor Roosevelt sent in the nomination of State Engineer and Surveyor Edward A. Bond as a member of the forest reserve board, to succeed former State Engineer and Surveyor Campbell W. Adams.

The nomination was referred to the finance committee.

SUGAR COMBINATION RUMOR.

Four Companies Said to Be Negotiating Toward a Consolidation.

New York, Jan. 14.--A story was circulated in Wall street that negotiations were now under way looking to a consolidation of the American Sugar Refining Company, the Glucose Sugar Refining Company, Doscher's Sugar Company and the sugar business of the Arbuckles.

According to the story the negotiations were being carried on by interests independent, so far as their official capacity was concerned, of any of these companies.

It was stated that the negotiations might not result in success, but that a syndicate was now in process of formation with this end in view.

The movement was further stated to have the sympathy of the American Sugar Refining Company interests and the Glucose following, while no understanding had been reached with the Arbuckles and Doschers.

Representatives of the American Sugar Refining Company and the Doscher Refinery, who were seen, denied the story.

TRUSTS OF ALL KINDS.

The Corporation Trust Company of Jersey City is named as the representatives of the company's interests in New Jersey.

The objects of the company are to deal in and manufacture articles of steel and metal of every kind. The capital stock is divided into nine hundred thousand shares at a par value of one hundred dollars each.

Of this stock four hundred thousand shares will be preferred and five hundred thousand shares common stock. The holders of the preferred stock will be entitled to receive seven per cent. cumulative dividends annually.

The certificate of incorporation of the Steel and Wire trust was filed at noon Friday. The company, which will be known as the American Steel and Wire Company of New Jersey, is capitalized at ninety million dollars, of which forty million dollars is preferred and fifty million dollars common stock.

The new trust is to take over all the steel wire works in the United States.

Nearly everything that can be organized into a trust is now conforming to that fashion. A partial list of the industrial reorganizations announced within the past few hours, follows:

The Pressed Steel Car Company, with $25,000,000 capital, formed by capitalists from Pittsburg, Pa., and Joliet, Ill. Nineteen millions of the securities were taken by the companies organized. The remaining six million dollars have been placed by Poor & Greenough of this city.

The coffin manufacturers of the United States are organizing and a meeting of a number of them was held yesterday at the Hotel Manhattan, in this city. J. Marcellus of Syracuse was made chairman.

The National Casket Company is not a member of the new combination, but it is reported that it would welcome it and work in harmony with it.

The chewing gum manufacturers of the country have been quietly forming a consolidation and nearly every firm has signed an agreement.

News from Havana.

Havana, Jan. 14.--American notes and coin are selling at one per cent. premium over the regular rate of foreign exchange for Spanish and American gold. The reason is that centenes, worth in New York $4.88 to $4.89, are receivable here for customs dues at $4.82. Consequently importers would rather pay American currency at a premium than part with centenes at six or seven cents less their value for other business.

There is little American gold here, probably about two million dollars, and American notes are brought by the soldiers and visitors. The paymaster's army pay roll is $750,000 a month.

The Havana money handlers dislike notes, not being familiar with them, and being in fear of counterfeits. Nevertheless the speculators buy them eagerly, owing to the premiums.

General Davis at Pinar del Rio has investigated the reports to the effect that there are bandits in the mountains in the western part of the province of that name, and finds that they are unfounded.

One or two bands are reported to be operating in the province of Puerto Principe, where they have been raiding farms, and firing a few shots to scare the proprietors.

The Yale Presidency.

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 14.--While the name of ex-Postmaster General Wilson has been from time to time "mentioned" here in connection with the Yale presidency, and he has many admirers both among graduates and the Yale faculty, the matter has gone no further.

Professor F. B. Dexter, secretary of the corporation, and Dr. Ray Palmer of the prudential committee of that body, both deny unqualifiedly that any offer has been made, and the former says that the corporation will do nothing about the presidency for at least a month.

Very recent statements by a number of the clerical members of the corporation show that it has no definite opinions or even impressions as to the successor of President Dwight.

Post Office Safe Robbed.

Trenton N. J., Jan. 14.--Three cracksmen entered the postoffice at Yardley, Pa., four miles from here, at an early hour yesterday morning and drilled a hole in the safe, which contained stamps and money.

They were surprised at their work by William Hoffman, who sleeps in the building.

A lively exchange of pistol shots followed. The men escaped to the street, where they were again fired on by T. S. Cadwallader, a brother of the postmaster.

MR. DINGLEY IS DEAD

Distinguished Statesman Passed Away Friday Night.

A LONG PUBLIC CAREER.

It Was Hoped so Late as Thursday That Mr. Dingley Would Recover—L. E. Payne a New Yorker Likely to Succeed Him as Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.--Representative Nelson Dingley of Maine died last night at 10.30. The news was a great shock, despite his serious illness, as the reports for the last day or two have favored recovery.

Mr. Dingley was unconscious for most of the day, and death came quietly without consciousness being regained. There were present at the time Mrs. Dingley, Miss Edith Dongley, E. N. and A. H. Dingley, sons of the dead man; James C. Hoge, an intimate friend of the family; Dr. Deale, one of the physicians who has been attending him, and two nurses.

To within a few hours before his death the family firmly believed, as they have throughout his illness, that Mr. Dingley would recover, and it was only when it became apparent that he was dying that they gathered at his bedside.

The death of Mr. Dingley is a serious hindrance to much important work in Congress and in the joint high Canadian commission, of which he was a member.

The funeral will be conducted at the House of Representatives on Monday. The body will be taken to the House at 10 o'clock and there lie in state until noon, when services will be conducted in the presence of the House and the Senate.

At 4.20 in the afternoon the funeral party will leave over the Pennsylvania railroad for Lewiston, Me., arriving there at two o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

Further services will be held at the family residence in Lewiston on Wednesday.

The interment will be in that city. The services in the House of Representatives probably will be conducted by the Rev. S. M. Nayman, pastor of the First Congregational church, where Mr. Dingley was accustomed to attend while residing in Washington.

Representative Dingley's illness dated back to December 23, when he complained that he was not well. The physician diagnosed the case as one of grip so commonly prevailing here, and cautioned the patient to keep to his room. The following Saturday pneumonia developed in the left lung, complicated with great irregularity of the heart.

Skillful treatment brought good results, and on Thursday there were signs that the lung was beginning to clear.

The next day, however, the disease took an alarming turn, and the two sons, who were in Michigan, were telegraphed for.

The question of leadership in the House will have to be decided in filling the vacancy which has been created on the ways and means committee.

Sereno E. Payne of New York, who once was passed over by Speaker Reed, is the next in line of succession, and to him belongs the chairmanship. Were it not that General Grosvenor is a likely candidate for governor of Ohio, there might be a struggle for the honor, which will carry with it priority in the next Congress.

Dalzell of Pennsylvania is next to Payne, but he is not of the material to lead his party. Neither is Hopkins of Illinois, who follows. Grosvenor is the fourth on the list.

Nelson Dingley, governor of Maine from 1874 to 1875, and member of Congress from the Second district of that state since 1881, was born in Durham, Androscoggin county, Maine.

At 17 years of age he taught a winter school in the town of China, fourteen miles from home, and he continued to teach winters while fitting for college.

After leaving college, Mr. Dingley studied law in 1855-6 with Merrill and Fessenden, in Auburn, to which city his parents had removed while he was in college, and in the last year he was admitted to the bar. Instead of entering upon the practice of law he decided to become a journalist, for which profession he always manifested a decided taste.

In September, 1856, he purchased the Lewiston Journal of which he had been practically the editor while studying law, and to which in 1862 he added a daily edition. The paper rapidly increased in circulation and influence under his management.

His first vote was cast in 1854 for Anson P. Morrill, the anti-slavery and temperance candidate for governor, a political combination from which arose the Republican party of Maine in the following winter. He threw himself into the Fremont campaign in 1856 with all the ardor of youth and ability of age.

In 1858, at the age of 29, he was elected representative from Auburn to the state legislature, in which body he at once took high rank, was re-elected in 1862 and chosen speaker of the House at the session of 1863. In 1863 he removed to Lewiston, where a few months after he was elected to the legislature and with the opening of the legislative session of 1864 was unanimously re-elected speaker.

At the state election of 1864 he was elected to the House a fourth time, and with the session of 1865 was again offered the position of speaker, which he declined preferring to take his place on the floor. He was also a representative to the legislature from Lewiston in 1868 and 1873.

In 1873 Mr. Dingley was nominated as the Republican candidate for governor of Maine by a vote of two to one against two popular opponents and was elected by about 10,000 majority. In 1874 he was re-elected by over 11,000 majority, declining a third nomination in 1875.

Mr. Dingley was nominated by the Republicans of the Second Congressional district of Maine to fill the vacancy in Congress caused by the resignation of William E. Frye. He was elected by a majority of more than five thousand, nearly twice as large as ever before given for any candidate in the district. He served on the committee on banking and currency and as a member of the committee on alcoholic liquor traffic, and in the session he presided several times over the House in committee of the whole.

Mr. Dingley's first speech in Congress was made April 25, 1882, on "Protection to American Shipping," the House being in committee of the whole on the bill to create a tariff commission.

Under a joint resolution introduced into the House by Mr. Dingley and passed August 7, 1882, he was appointed a member of a joint committee to investigate the condition and wants of American shipbuilding and ship owning interests. The report of the committee, drawn up by Mr. Dingley, and unanimously agreed to by the committee, was regarded as an able and valuable document.

In 1882 he was re-elected as a Congressman at large for the forty-eighth Congress. At the opening of congress in December, 1884, Speaker Carlisle appointed him at the head of the Republican minority on both the banking and currency committee and the select committee on American shipbuilding and shipowning interests.

Mr. Dingley was re-elected to the Forty-ninth Congress from the Second Maine district in 1884.

At the annual meeting of the Congress Temperance Society in February, 1887, Mr. Dingley was elected president.

In June, 1886, Mr. Dingley was re-elected to the Fiftieth Congress and again elected to the Fifty-first Congress in 1892. The Fifty-fourth Congress in 1894, and the Fifty-fifth in 1896 by large and increased majorities. In the Fifty-second and Fifty-third Congresses he was an active member of the committee on appropriations.

In forming his cabinet prior to entering on the duties of chief executive, on March 4, 1897, President McKinley offered the position of secretary of the treasury to Mr. Dingley, but he declined the offer, preferring to remain in his position as chairman of the ways and means committee and floor leader of the Republican majority of the House.

Under his lead the House within sixteen days after the Fifty-fifth Congress was convened in extraordinary session on March 15, 1897, by President McKinley, passed a bill revising the tariff.

Mr. Dingley was a Congregationalist in religion. He married on June 11, 1857, Miss Salome McKenney of Auburn, Me. They have had six children, Henry M., Charles L. (dead), Edward N., Arthur H., Albert G. and Edith Dingley.

DUN'S WEEKLY REPORT.

Business Continues to Present a Rosy View to Statisticians.

New York, Jan. 14.--Contrary to the French saying, the expected has occurred. Rapid advances in prices of iron and steel products have their immediate effect, perhaps not to the lasting benefit of the industry, for there is the same reason for doubt as to its permanence as in 1895, when shrinkage of buying and reaction soon carried prices lower than before. But there is now larger demand for many other products, and without unwieldy combinations all are doing well.

The state of business is on the whole as satisfactory as it has been at any time. The volume of exchanges through leading clearing houses is 27.9 per cent. larger than last year in January, and 32.6 per cent. larger than in 1892.

Exports of merchandise from New York are 11.6 per cent. larger than last year, with but slight increase in imports. The excess of exports over imports promises to be large this month also. Failures for the first week of the year were $1,661,690 in amount, manufacturing $498,452, and trading $1,163,238. Failures for the week have been 318 in the United States, against 349 last year, and 24 in Canada, against 45 last year.

GREEN GOODS IN JERSEY CITY.

A Second Indictment Against Western Union Manager There.

Jersey City, Jan. 14.--John B. Bertholf, manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company, who was recently indicted on a charge of aiding the operations of green goods swindlers, was in court on a similar charge yesterday. He waived examination and furnished bail to again go before the grand jury.

Reuben Percival of Ithaca, the complainant, received a letter a short time ago from E. F. Garland, alleged to be of No. 31 Montgomery street, Jersey City, informing him of a green goods scheme. He entered into correspondence, and last Tuesday reached the Grand Union Hotel in Manhattan, where he was to remain "until he was called for."

While at the hotel, according to his story, he sent a telegram to Garland, but signed his own name instead of the fictitious one assigned him. He received no answer, so he crossed to Jersey City and called at No. 31 Montgomery street, where he asked for Garland.

The proprietor of the hotel at that address, sent Percival to Chief of Police Murphy.

Acting on the advice of the chief, Percival went to the Western Union office and demanded to know what had become of his telegram, receiving, he alleges, no satisfaction.

A warrant was then issued for Bertholf's arrest. It was alleged in the first indictment found against Bertholf that he forwarded telegrams to a secret address for the green goods men, and this allegation is now repeated.

London is Isolated.

London, Jan. 14.--This city was isolated yesterday. No news messages were received from the continent since early in the morning, and communication with all parts of the provinces is interrupted.

There have been many wrecks of minor importance, and several lives have been lost along the coast.

The gale has subsided, but another one is approaching the Irish coast.

A GOOD WORK.

TRAVELING LIBRARIES INTRODUCED INTO PHILADELPHIA.

Many Requests for Books from the Small Places Outside the City Limits—An Effort being Made to have the System Extend all Through the State.

The traveling library system introduced in this city under the direction of the Free Library of Philadelphia a little over a year ago has proven so popular, and so many requests for its extension have been made by neighboring towns, that the trustees of the Free Library are making a strong effort to provide traveling libraries for use in every part of the State. With this object in view a bill was recently introduced into the present session of the Legislature asking for a $30,000 appropriation, and all the librarians who have charge of public collections of books in Pennsylvania are prepared to advocate its passage, says the Philadelphia Record.

The city traveling library system consists of boxes of 25 books each, which are circulated in fire houses, police stations and similar places, thus reaching a class of people who have no opportunity to share in the benefits of the regular library system. Requests have been received from thirty villages and towns outside of the city limits to forward boxes of books, but as the Free Library is a city institution, it was found that the requests could not legally be complied with.

The $30,000 State appropriation is designed to overcome this obstacle. Though asked in the name of the Free Library of Philadelphia, it is for the use of the entire state. If granted, the money will be used in the equipment of traveling libraries of fifty volumes each. Those for use in the western part of the State will be placed in the custody of the Carnegie Library at Pittsburg; those for the eastern part will be handled by our own library, and the towns in the central part of the State will be supplied through the State Library at Harrisburg, the Public Library at Scranton, and the Osterhaut Library at Wilkesbarre.

MAJOR PUTNAM'S POWDER KEGS.

They were Filled with Onions but Served the Purpose Just As Well.

Shortly before the Revolution, when the air was heavily charged with forebodings of the approaching struggle, Major Putnam happened to be in Boston. The Major disliked the redcoats and sometimes inveighed against their arrogant superciliousness in no gentle terms. One day an officer of His Majesty's regulars overheard Putnam assert that the provincial army, untutored in arms as they were, would fight with the courage of trained soldiers. The officer resented the assertion, and after some hot words challenged the Major to a duel, provided he dared to fight.

"Name them," haughtily replied the officer.

"Two kegs of gunpowder; the time, to-morrow; the distance, ten paces; the fight to be as follows: You to sit on one keg, I on the other; a slow fuse to be attached to each and lighted, and the one who holds out the longest shall be declared the winner."

There was nothing for the officer to do but accept the unusual weapons, and on the following day at the appointed time and place the combatants took their seats upon the kegs of gunpowder. The fuses were lighted and began sputtering, rapidly approaching the kegs. The officer was deathly pale, and watched the growing danger with dilated eyes. At last he could stand it no longer, and with a leap he left his keg and raced like a madman out of sight. When he had gone, Old Put laughingly kicked the burning fuse away and disclosed to his friends a keg of onions. When the matter came to light the officer was subjected to the laughs and gibes of the entire command.—Harper's Round Table.

An Accidental Discovery.

When Sir Humphrey Davy was a boy of sixteen, a little girl came to him one day in great excitement, and asked why, when she rubbed two pieces of cane together, they should make a spark of light. Humphrey was a studious lad, who spent hours in thinking out scientific problems. He patted the child's curly head and said: "I do not know, dear. Let us see if they really do make a light, and then we will try to find out why." He soon found that the little girl was right; the pieces of cane, if rubbed together quickly, give a tiny light. Then he set to work to find out the reason; and after some time—thanks to the observing powers of his little friend, and his own kindness to her in not impatiently telling her not to worry, as so many might have done—Humphrey Davy made the first of his interesting discoveries. Every reed, cane and grass has an outer skin of flinty stuff, which protects the inside from insects, and also helps the frail-looking leaves to stand upright.

A Shrewd Swindler.

A man has been getting his board free in the eastern part of Vermont by representing that he wants a good farm. He looks over a farm, decides to buy it and agrees upon a price. He then says he will receive the money in a few days and the farmers board him free. When the swindler is ready to go he gets his host to carry him to another place, where he plays the same game. He usually borrows a small sum of money at each place.—Philadelphia Ledger.

An Argument for Consolidation.

In the natural course of events when there is any detail about a postoffice that can be remedied by Washington officials the man expected to bring about the desired change is the Congressman representing the district in which the office is situated. But as in many other matters resultant from a place divided in municipal, county and Congressional lines, Plainfield presents a condition widely different from the usual run.

Though Plainfield is in Congressman Fowler's district, and the postmaster is virtually named by him, the postoffice serves a large and influential portion of another Congressional district—North Plainfield, whose representative at Washington is Congressman Howell. Now it happens that this particular section of Congressman Howell's district is aroused and full of complaint about the postal service allotted them. But differing from other problems of a similar nature that may confront his constituents, Congressman Howell can not work effectively for the former without encroaching, to more or less extent, on the custom of one Congressman not meddling with affairs in a district represented by another—especially if both are of the same political affiliation.

Inasmuch as the postmaster is one of the political perquisites of Congressman Fowler, observing the ordinary rule would bring all complaints concerning the local office to him. But for the people of another district to address their fault-finding to him, when they have a Congressmen of their own, presents another unusual phase in the way things run at Washington. Thus it is that the Plainfield office develops a contradictory state of affairs. When we look at the matter in a purely theoretical light of what a Congressman's duty is, Mr. Fowler is not supposed to bother himself with the complaints of people living in another district. Mr. Howell on the other hand is violating an unwritten law among his colleagues when he tries to effect a change in an office in a district not his own. However, if Mr. Fowler did not bother himself about North Plainfield's needs in a postal way, and Mr Howell kept mum because the office that serves that district is in the former's bailiwick, then the borough would be in a sad plight, and in this particular case practically without representation at Washington. Of course, we do not suppose that Messrs. Fowler and Howell are coming to daggers points about the arrangement of the postal service in Plainfield and North Plainfield, for, as a matter of fact, they are working in unison to adjust the difficulty to the best advantage of their respective constituents. But the facts herein rehearsed emphasize strongly the need of a consolidated city, and the obliteration of all governmental lines of any kind between city and borough when they are so essentially one in all other details now.

What Perseverance Can do.

To those young fellows who think that they are having a hard tussle with the world, with but slim chances of "getting there," we recommend a perusal of the life and attainments of Albert J. Beveridge, who has just

THE TROUBLE AT ILOILO.

The Spanish forces evacuated Iloilo, the second city in the Philippines, and the insurgents took possession. been elected United States Senator in Indiana. As an example of pluck and perseverance prosecuted to a successful end and under the greatest barriers, Mr. Beveridge stands on a high pinnacle and sheds an encouraging light to every young man in the country, though he be as poor and as insignificant as a church mouse.

Reared in poverty, put to work on a farm before he was in his teens, and made a drudge of till he was almost out of them, Beveridge has in a little over a decade arisen to a foremost position in the public world of this great country, and is now booked by the august Indiana legislators to make his appearance in the United States Senate as its youngest member. His career has not been a meteoric one, but studded throughout with hard knocks and great difficulties to overcome. A less ambitious and perserving fellow would have "fell by the wayside" long ago, but not so of Beveridge.

From farm to railroad, from railroad to lumber camp and from lumber camp to college, then overwork and a period of cowpunching on the western plains, and finally a law student in Indianapolis—that's Beveridge's career up to the time he entered his manhood years. From that time forward his advance has been steady, and now he sees himself honored as but few are honored.

The young man who is struggling along and barely able to make both ends meet in a financial way, enjoying but few or none of the pleasures of the world, should read a few pages of Beveridge's life before the Indiana statesman was twenty-five years of age. It will prove a great incentive for facing all the trials and tribulations with an encouraging view of life.

Asbury Park has decided that the presence of prize fighters, who do their training for their mills by the sad sea waves, is a detriment to the town. Consequently the Board of Trade has passed resolutions inclined to insult the gentlemen of pugilistic attainments or aspirations, whichever it may happen to be. The tradesmen want to be careful or the fighters will let loose on them with their flow of words, and then the former will be sorry that they ever spoke.

It begins to look as though Governor-elect Voorhees is going to have a spectacular inauguration notwithstanding his expressed sentiments for an unostentatious ceremony. It will be a great day for Union county when Voorhees goes in.

Admirers of Mayor Wilson, of the borough, are beginning to talk about his renomination at the approaching borough election. Mayor Wilson has been one of the best chief executives the people "across the brook" have ever had.

A good many men who were "behind" President McKinley after we got in the late unpleasantness with Spain are now running as fast as they can to get in front and head him off.

Mr. Tom Platt is doing business at the same old stand—just the same as all the political bosses are.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

An entertainment of very high excellence was presented to those who went to Music Hall last evening to hear Frame, the famous Scotch comedian. The fact that his company was under the management of Major J. B. Pond was enough to warrant its excellence. To the Scotchmen and Englishmen, who formed a large proportion of the audience, the entertainment particularly appealed. Frame was at his best; his inimitable Scotch wit was sufficiently Americanized to take at once. His manner and his costumes were mirth inspiring. He was assisted by a talented company of artists. Most of the programme was decidedly Scotch and the bonny airs and graceful "Highland Fling" were given as they are in the land of the thistle. Miss Florence Hayward's character songs and John Mackenzie's dances were particularly commendatory.

Frame's engagement in Philadelphia does not begin until Monday, so he has consented to remain in Plainfield today and give another entertainment this evening. It is a chance for Plainfielders to hear the best of Scotch artists in the profession and the house this evening should be crowded. Real music on real bagpipes by an expert will be particularly attractive to everyone with a drop of Scotch blood in their veins. The performance last evening was witnessed by a fair-sized audience, which was loud and long in the expression of its approval of the selections.

Discovered by a Woman.

Another great discovery has been made, and that, too, by a lady in this country. "Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she cou hed incessantly and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night, and with two bottles has been absolutely cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus writes W C. Hamnick & Co., of Shelby, N. C. Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help, but her cure is complete and her health is excellent." This shows what thousands have proved—that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, boils and running sores. WHITE'S WHITE SALE
THE WHITE GOODS EVENT OF THE SEASON.

Encouraged by the marked success which has attended our previous Muslin Underwear sales, we have made a large purchase for this occasion. Our orders were placed during the makers' dull season. The work has been most thoroughly done, materials and trimmings are of the best, the fit, finish and size generosity is the same as if the garments were made under your own supervision—by your own home seamstress—and the prices are less than you would pay for bare materials.

NIGHT ROBES.

Every feature of this sale is special, but more special than other features will be the nightgown selling. They are among the best creations of master makers and are daintily trimmed with the prettiest laces, ribbons and embroideries. Prices 25c, 49c, 75c, $1 and $1.25.

WHITE SKIRTS.

Some plain with rows of tucks, some with cambric and embroidery flounces with lace insertions; all cut very full, nothing scant about them but the prices—25c, 35c, 49c, 75c to $1.25.

CORSET COVERS.

Trimmed with embroidery, torchon laces, or clusters of tucks with insertions, perfect fitting, high, square or V shape necks, made of fine cambric. Who would bother to make them when you buy at these prices—15c, 25c, 29c, 39c, 50c

DRAWERS.

Made with yoke bands, deep hamburg embroidery, umbrella, flounces or rows of tucks. As some of the best numbers are somewhat limited as to quantity it is advisable that you be among the early choosers as these lots cannot be duplicated at these prices—17c, 25c, 39c and 50c.

A RICH MAN'S VIEWS.

MILLIONAIRE TELLS HOW HE EARNED $50 A MONTH AND SAVED.

Says the Poorest Man in the World To-Day Is the One who has Nothing but Money. Duty to Earn all Possible. But it must be Obtained Honestly.

"Who is the poorest man in the world to-day? The poorest man I know is the man who has nothing but money—nothing else in the world but money—only money."

It was a man with iron gray hair and an iron gray mustache who spoke the words, and he repeated the last ones with emotion.

The man who spoke has endowed the University of Chicago with millions upon millions of dollars. He is John D. Rockefeller, who in the parlors of the New York Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, addressed the young men's Bible class.

Mr. Rockefeller held in his hands a cheap looking little yellow backed account book.

"This is my ledger," he said. "My first business training was in keeping a ledger. It was at the time when I began to spend my first earnings in my first struggle to get a footing.

"It was a very hard struggle. When I put my head on my pillow the contents of this little ledger then kept running in my mind until I awakened the next morning.

"Besides the accounts I kept in this book there were memoranda of occurrences. In forty-two years I found it. I kept it more than forty-two years ago. In deciphering some writing on the back of here, I see that I called it 'Ledger A.' I place great value upon this little book."

Mr. Rockefeller's hands trembled as he turned the pages of the little volume which he had taken from a big envelope in his inside pocket.

"It was important to me to be particular at that time about items of receipts and disbursements," he continued. "I hope you young men are all careful. I believe it is a religious duty to get all the money you can, get it fairly, religiously and honestly—and give away all you can.

"I would not dare to let you read this book. My children read it, and said that I didn't spell toothbrush correctly. I haven't seen this book for twenty-five years. You couldn't get it from me for all the modern ledgers in New York and what they all would bring in.

"It reports what I received and paid out for several years. Here is an item: Income from December 26, 1855, to January 26, 1856, ... $50

"And I lived within my income. Out of that I paid my washerwoman, the lady with whom I boarded, and I saved a little and put it away.

"I see that I paid in the Sunday school every Sunday one cent. It was all I had to give. I had a large increase in revenue the next year. It was increased $25 a month.

"I was as independent in those days as Mr. Astor. But when I got that increase I felt guilty. I felt like a criminal—like a capitalist. We had no trusts or capitalists in those days.

"I remember the clothes I bought. I didn't patronize a fashionable tailor. I bought my clothes from a cheap clothier. The clothes were good and such as I could pay for. Let me give you all a word of advice:—'Live within your means.'"

Curiosity prompted Mr. Rockefeller here to ask all those to raise their hands who had come to New York from the country. Nine-tenths of the young men raised their hands, to the evident pleasure of the speaker.

"City men haven't had the struggles we had who came from the country," he said. "Two days ago I had a talk with a carpenter who was going to make a building comfortable where help was going to sleep. There were two big spaces he closed with mineral wool, so the damp wouldn't come in, he said. Then on the next floor he showed me two spaces he was also going to close with wool 'so that,' as he expressed it, "the sleeper there, a houseman, would not have to hear the rain drops fall upon the roof.'"

This seemed to afford Mr. Rockefeller infinite amusement.

"Why," he said, "the carpenter's suggestion made me think of my own experiences when sleeping under the roof. I know that I heard the rain fall, and when I looked up I could see the shingles, and in one place a big crack through which the sky was visible. It was pretty hot there in summer, but I preferred summer on the whole.

"I think I was better for that sort of experience, and my head is full of sadness as I contemplate the condition of a number of young fellows that I know in this city. Their fathers have plenty of money, but the boys have not the ghost of a chance in competing with you who came from the country. They'll go down and you'll take their places.

"What is success? Is it to get money? Well, is that success? The poorest man I know is the man who has nothing but money. If I had my choice to-day, I'll be a man with little or nothing but a purpose in life.

"It's not the money itself that is so miserable. Money is good if you know how to use it. Let me give you a little word of counsel. Know just what you receive and how you spend it. Write down just what you do with it and don't be ashamed to let your fathers and mothers see what you have written down.

"In a year or two I managed to save nearly $1,000. Here is an item as to clothes. My clothing from November, 1855, to November, 1856, cost me just $9.09. Here is one bit of extravagance which had quite escaped my memory, 'pair of fur gloves, $2.' Here are other items:—

Mittens	8 shillings
Given away	$5.58
Missionary cause, November 25	.15
Ministerial student	.10
Night Society	.75
Sabbath School	.05
Present to Sabbath School Superintendent	.25

"I was living in Cleveland then, and I must have felt sorry for New York. Here is an item:—Five Points Mission, 12 cents.

"We had a little paper published by the Sunday school called the Macedonian. I subscribed to that. There was a venerable teacher of my class, a Scotchman, and a great Bible student. He is down for twenty-five cents.

"All these little things helped me to come into sympathy with many undertakings, both religious and philanthropic. My opinion is that no man can trust himself to wait until he has accumulated a great fortune before he is charitable. He must give away some money continually."

LINCOLN IN THE FIELD.

His First Visit to General Grant and His Horse-back Ride.

One Tuesday a White river steamer arrived at the wharf, bringing President Lincoln, who had embraced this opportunity to visit for the first time the armies under General Grant's immediate command. As the boat neared the shore, the General and several of us who were with him at the time walked down to the wharf, in order that the General-in-Chief might meet his distinguished visitor and extend a greeting to him as soon as the boat made a landing. As our party stepped aboard, the President came down from the upper deck, where he had been standing, to the after-gangway, and reaching out his long, angular arm, he wrung General Grant's hand vigorously, and held it in his for some time, while he uttered in rapid words his congratulations and expressions of appreciation of the great task which had been accomplished since he and the General had parted in Washington. The group then went into the after-cabin. General Grant said: "I hope you are very well, Mr. President." "Yes, I am in very good health," Mr. Lincoln replied; "but I don't feel very comfortable after my trip last night on the bay. It was rough, and I was considerably shaken up. My stomach has not yet entirely recovered from the effects." An officer of the party now saw that an opportunity had arisen to make this scene the supreme moment of his life, in giving him a chance to soothe the digestive organs of the Chief Magistrate of the nation. He said: "Try a glass of champagne, Mr. President. That is always a certain cure for seasickness." Mr. Lincoln looked at him for a moment, his face lighting up with a smile, and then remarked: "No, my friend; I have seen too many fellows seasick ashore from drinking that stuff." This was a knockdown for the officer, and in the laugh at his expense Mr. Lincoln and the General both joined heartily.

General Grant now said: "I know it would be a great satisfaction for the troops to have an opportunity of seeing you, Mr. President; and I am sure your presence among them would have a very gratifying effect. I can furnish you a good horse and will be most happy to escort you to points of interest along the line." Mr. Lincoln replied: "Why, yes; I had fully intended to go out and take a look at the brave fellows who have fought their way down to Petersburg in this wonderful campaign, and I am ready to start at any time."

General Grant presented to Mr. Lincoln the officers of the staff who were present, and he had for each one a cordial greeting and a pleasant word. There was a kindliness in his tone and a hearty manner of expression which went far to captivate all who met him. The President soon stepped ashore, and after sitting awhile at headquarters mounted the large bay horse "Cincinnati," while the General rode with him on "Jeff Davis." Three of us of the staff accompanied them, and the scenes encountered in visiting both Butler's and Meade's commands were most interesting. Mr. Lincoln wore a very high black silk hat and black trousers and frock coat. Like most men brought up in the West, he had good command of a horse, but it must be acknowledged that in appearance he was not a very dashing rider. On this occasion, by the time he had reached the troops he was completely covered with dust, and the black color of his clothes had changed to Confederate gray. As he had no straps, his trousers gradually worked up above his ankles, and gave him the appearance of a country farmer riding into town wearing his Sunday clothes. A citizen on horseback is always an odd sight in the midst of a uniformed army, and the picture presented by the President bordered upon the grotesque.—General Horace Porter in Century Magazine.

MEN'S WAYS.

"Say, Chimmie, how do fishes drink? You oughter know. Ma says your dad drinks like er fish."

EFFECT OF A POEM.

FROM IT A COWBOY WAS IMPELLED TO MOUNT FORTUNE'S LADDER.

Jack Mason was born and brought up on a Texas ranch. He had no mother and not very much of a father, so he just roved over the great prairies, knocked about with men and cattle, and "growed." To such as he there was only one vocation open—that of a cowboy.

By hook or by crook, Jack managed to get a sort of smattering of the three R's, and was especially attracted to the pleasing art of reading. He had, however, very little opportunity for indulging his tastes in this direction, as the very best book he had ever seen was an old almanac.

When about sixteen Jack started out one day with a comrade or two to round up a herd of cattle. An unwritten code which obtains all over these immense tracts of land is that when rounding up cowboys are at perfect liberty to enter any house en route and help themselves to anything in the way of food that they find, the only acknowledgement required from them being that they shall pour water over the fire before going away. This, of course, is to prevent any possibility of fire after their departure, and the real cowboy is as strenuous about this point of etiquette as the society man is about his party call.

One stormy evening, after a tramp of many a weary mile, Jack and his comrade came to one of these rude, deserted houses, and thankfully availed themselves of its sheltering roof. It was but the work of a moment to possess themselves of a light and fire, and finding both pork and potatoes in the house, they eked out a very comfortable meal with what they carried in their pouches.

An atmosphere of well-bred content and cheer dominated the little room, when suddenly Jack started up, attracted by something which he thought he espied on a shelf in the corner. No! He was not mistaken. It was a book, a copy of Meredith's "Lucile." Now Jack had never read a line of poetry in his life; but he sat down close to the sputtering candle and opened the new-found treasure with joyous expectancy.

At 4 o'clock the next morning Jack Mason closed the volume, and with it a chapter of his life, for a fixed resolution had taken possession of him, body and soul. The poem had portrayed a life so different from his own that he made up his mind that there must be something better even for him than being a cowboy on the plains all his life, and the sun was not very high in the heavens that very day when he had succeeded in transferring his job at rounding up to another cowboy, and was already on his way to the nearest city. Here he succeeded in finding a man he had once met on the prairies, and who gave him employment and a little kindly advice as to the best use to make of his time.

Jack was really in dead earnest, so he worked, studied and observed through many succeeding years, until to-day he is an educated, prosperous man, the secretary of one of the largest manufacturing concerns in the South, all because chance or Providence threw in his way at just the right time a book breathing a thoroughly refined atmosphere, and full of noble, uplifting sentiments.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

America's Teasel Production.

Skaneateles and its neighbor, Marcellus, stand alone in America in one industry, raising teasels. It was more than fifty years ago when this industry began in Onondaga county. For fifty years it has been more to the farmers of two towns than all other agricultural pursuits combined. And yet the teasel business has never extended beyond Skaneateles and Marcellus, and as there is no increase in the demand from year to year it probably never will.

The teasel is a biennial resembling the thistle, and during its first year forms a plant, and during its second grows into a bush, which sends out branches six feet high. The teasel grows wild all over America, but the heads are soft, with pliable petals. The cultivated teasel is stiff as wire, wherein lies its commercial value, for the heads are clipped off and set in frames, which, thus equipped, are rubbed over finer grades of woollen cloth to remove the nap from the wool and leave the surface soft and rough as desired. Machines with steel teeth have been invented to do this work, but have not taken the teasel's place. The teeth break soon, and the machine is worthless, and to replace steel teeth costs more than to replace teasels.—New York Sun.

Sure of One Thing.

The boy, who was toiling up the long and devious hill, turned out hurriedly when near the top to make way for a fat and frantic wheelman, who had lost control of his machine. "Say, bub," yelled the bicyclist, "how far is it to the bottom of this hill?" "I don't know exactly what the distance is," the boy called out after him, "but you'll be there in about four seconds, and there's a creek at the bottom of it."—Chicago Tribune.

What He Missed.

"I've missed more fun this summer than you could shake your tail at," mused the bull.

"How?" asked the family horse.

"To-day, for the seventh time, I let one of those new women get across the field before I realized she wasn't a man."—Answers.

Endlich wurde einer Firma die Benutzung eines solchen Wagens auf den Straßen gestattet. —Das Schöffengericht verurtheilte einen Schuhmachergehilfen zu vier Wochen Gefängniß; er hatte in einer Schuhfabrik einen Mitgehilfen zum Anschluß an einen ausgebrochenen Streik veranlassen wollen und dabei Ausdrücke gebraucht, durch die sich der Mitgehilfe beleidigt fühlte, das ursprüngliche Strafmandat hatte nur auf eine Woche gelautet. Der Verurtheilte hatte Einspruch erhoben.

Der Referent sprach dabei die zuversichtliche Erwartung aus, daß man nächstes Jahr auf 100 Prozent werde zurückkehren können.

CHAPTER IV.

Georges Adolphe Francois Baradat, Comte de Lacaze, was seated in a small room at the left of the main office of that world renowned and excellently conducted sheet, the Figaro. Outside the walls were hung with photographs of celebrities newly arrived in the gay capital. A bronze bust of Villemessant, the Figaro's illustrious founder, stood in a conspicuous corner. Two liveried servants passed to and fro, carrying missives from a patient crowd of advertisers, persons desirous of registering complaints, seekers for place and divers small boys in buttons, who awaited in the vestibule their turn to see the managing editor.

Inside, the Count de Lacaze cursed the weather, nibbled his highly polished nails, and yawned undisguisedly. For the fiftieth time that morning he realized how much more than usual he was down on his luck.

The Count de Lacaze was fond of saying that, were the republic an empire, he would be, at the present day, instead of languishing in durance vile as reporter on the Figaro at 400 francs a month, enjoying the hunt with his satellites at Rambouillet, giving chateau parties in Touraine or gambling furtively with a few kindred souls at his private baccarat table in his own magnificent hotel in the Faubourg St. Germain. He found means to circulate pretty generally that he was a great personage wronged. His friends apparently accepted his statement, good humoredly patting him on the back fraternally when they met him, and bidding him have courage, only to smile wickedly afterward at what they denominated "De Lacaze's little delusion," for, whereas the count related vividly the history of his great-grandfather's once superb possessions, which their present heir recounted mournfully to have melted away in the time of the revolution like snowflakes before the sun, his listeners were masters of the fact that his ancestor's gold had played a hide and seek game with so called honor on the green baize tables of Monte Carlo and Baden-Baden both before and long after the date he mentioned.

The door opened, and a young man entered, dressed in the height of fashion. An eyeglass was gripped spasmodically within the recalcitrant muscles which surrounded the faded blue of his congested orb. A fancy walking stick with a heavily carved knob, a pair of immaculate spats, which pronounced their wearer a blood of the first water, and a general air of the Paris gommeux—half sport, half dandy, wholly a type of the present generation—completed the picture. This scion of a noble house seated himself on the arm of a chair, removed his immaculate tile from his overheated brow, and for several instants silently sucked the inoffensive knob of his cane. His eyes were fixed inquiringly and a trifle humorously upon the frowning countenance of the little room's unhappy occupant.

Then he proceeded to light a cigarette, and having glided from the arm of his chair down into its luxuriously cushioned leather seat he remarked with perhaps superfluous cheerfulness:

"Well, old man, what are you going to do about it?"

It may not be inconsiderate to explain that the aforesaid nobleman had in a moment of unguarded sympathy three months before loaned to his dejected friend the "reporter count," as he was known among his sporting contemporaries, a large sum of that filthy lucre man or woman is considered so insignificant without in the world's eyes, and so disproportionately significant are they so lucky as to be born with its flashing promise in their mints.

The night before at a world renowned club—a club which contained a private room in which fortunes were made and lost and with greater rapidity than on the New York Stock Exchange—the little duke, he of the spats and the knobbed cane and the eyeglass, had looked his last upon his louis and had realised in the night hours, which in French parlance are said to "carry good counsel," his reporter count friend's absolute inability to make good to him a very serious loss. The duke had therefore concluded to beard the lion in his den. That the lion had the appearance of a shorn lamb that had spent a hideous night on the bald hillside of despair was to the little duke a matter of the most profound indifference. He proposed to have his money by fair means or foul. Debts of a like nature were "debts of honor," he had only a few moments ago remarked piously to a friend to whom he had confided the entire lamentable occurrence. If De Lacaze had not "the decency to realize his obligations," the duke proposed to remind him that in aristocratic circles such debts were wont to be considered a disgrace did their assumers not appreciate the responsibility their appropriation involved.

"Patience," began the Comte Georges Adolphe Baradat de Lacaze feebly. "I will pay you when I can look about me and realize where I stand."

The duke laughed cynically.

"No need to look around, mon vieux," said he, with a fine smile. "You will find nothing. I can offer but one suggestion. That is either to blow out your brains or wed an American heiress."

"The first suggestion is concise and not devoid of your usual bad taste. The second is impossible."

"How impossible?"

De Lacaze shrugged his shoulders. They were narrow and a trifle bent. Then he raised his meager eyebrows suggestively.

"I have no acquaintance with American heiresses. If I had, who of them would be desirous of exchanging her millions for my title?"

"But that is what they are doing every day," remarked the duke, rising and beginning to pace the narrow room energetically. "Look at the past ten years' record. American girls give youth, their birthright, to marry the man of their heart, their money and their future to secure a title. Why not you as well as ——?" He mentioned the names of several well known French and Italian noblemen who had in this spirited fashion redressed their attenuated fortunes, thus altering their future into an established and roseate surety instead of a dark descent into the ignominy its projectors had done their best to attain.

"Listen," urged the duke. "I have a friend, a dramatic critic on the Eclair, a bright specimen of nineteenth century methods, who has analyzed the present situation and names it simple justice, an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, so to speak." The duke was unaware that he was quoting from the Scriptures. He was merely repeating what he considered a clever saying of his friend Desmoulins. "Desmoulins knows to a die every American heiress in Paris," he continued. "He was telling me all their names yesterday at the Cercle—read them out of a book, figures-vous—and has sent already to New York to an agency there, Brown's agency, I think it is called, where any one can make a calculation of the dot the daughter may expect from summing up her papa's possessions. It is as easy as A B C. Come with me. We will see Desmoulins. It is the hour for breakfast. We will meet him at Durand's."

"Done," said Lacaze.

He seized his hat and cane, walked briskly toward the restaurant, which faces the classical facade of the Madeleine, and found Desmoulins, a type of the modern boulevardier, a man some 30 years of age, with merry, laughing eyes, thick lips and a shifting expression as little to be trusted as it was undefinable.

In a few moments the subject was opened and discussed.

Desmoulins therewith drew out his little book from his pocket and began to turn the leaves, accompanying his act with a running fire of adjectives, side remarks, darts pithy and pertinent toward De Lacaze and amused glances in the direction of the duke, who was lazily discussing some hors d'œuvres while consulting the wine list.

"H'm," said Desmoulins, "here is just our affair. On the Avenue Montaigne, No. 53, in a magnificent apartment, dwells a ravissante Americaine. Arrived one year ago. Complexion blond, like white lace over pink silk," this last with a wink at the duke, who, broadly amused, was listening attentively, and a side glance at De Lacaze, who, scowling heavily, had bent his muddy eyes upon the floor.

"The young lady is just of age. Having pursued her studies at home, she comes abroad to accomplish herself in music. She is at present a pupil of Purrini, the great Purrini."

"H'm," interrupted De Lacaze, still scowling. "The most arrant humbug of the age. I knew him when he was starving in Marseilles. His father was a pork butcher, and his mother was a washerwoman."

Desmoulins smiled delightedly. "Exactly," said he. "That goes to prove that the young woman in question, who is traveling with her aunt and little sister, is no more capable of understanding the true inwardness of Life with a capital L than nous autres Francais can comprehend this little Americaine's mad desertion of her own country, so rife, we are informed, with opportunities for development and money making, neglecting it for ours, which her countrymen, also gratuitously, inform us to be old fashioned and out of date."

"As yet, monsieur, I am unable to afford you that information au juste. But I am positive I can obtain it in a few days. I have at present a cousin in New York"—Desmoulins omitted to state that the aforesaid cousin was pursuing the modest calling of lifting trunks in a large caravansary on lower Fifth avenue—"who weekly forwards me a package containing such information. I will be able to give monsieur his facts within ten days. The young woman's father is a justice of the supreme court and enjoys a modest fortune. The young woman's mother is immensely wealthy and is notably ambitious. Indeed it is whispered that she has been said to have stated openly she was desirous her daughter should form an alliance with a noble French house."

"And where is she to be met with, this paragon of beauty, innocence and wherewithal?" De Lacaze had drawn himself up and was buttoning his shabby coat over his now well filled stomach. The wine and food had given substance to his fainting courage. Hope rushed into his veins. He looked as though once more there was a future ahead of him which promised almost forgotten prosperity.

"At the pension where I live," whispered Desmoulins, "there is a little girl named Constance Brilla, who is studying for the operatic stage. She told me of her friend quite artlessly. I listened just as artlessly. Then I made my calculations. Tonight there is a ball at the pension. We are requested each of us to invite our friends. You will come as my friend, and I will present you to Miss Priscilla Delno, the friend of Miss Brilla."

"Done," agreed De Lacaze.

"Softly, softly," murmured Desmoulins, his fine smile suddenly degenerating into a diabolical grin. "The agreement must be drawn up and signed, monsieur."

"What agreement?"

"An agreement that if monsieur succeeds he will pay into my hands the sum of 50,000 francs."

"And if I fail?"

"There is no such word as fail."

"Would it not be as well, De Lacaze," drawled the duke, who had been a cynical onlooker at this remarkable transaction and who was now smiling and rubbing his palms together delightedly—"would it not be as well to insert a clause in that little agreement—the clause that you refund me also my dues when the transaction is carried out?"

De Lacaze scowled fiercely. Then he lifted himself from the leather seat upon which he had lounged for the past half hour. In his face lurked no evidence of shame. It was indomitably resolved.

"My friends," he said ironically, "follow me to my office. We will make a note of this transaction, and in due time your appetites shall be appeased to their complete satisfaction."

Nutritive Value of Sugar.

Experiments of an interesting nature have lately been made at the instigation of the Prussian war office, to endeavor to decide the question as to whether the consumption of small quantities of sugar renders the tired muscles capable of renewed exertion. In order to obtain a practical result, the person who was made the subject of the experiment was kept totally ignorant of the object of the experimenters. On one day a sweet liquid was administered, containing thirty grams of sugar; on the next day a similar liquid, containing a sufficient amount of saccharine to render it indistinguishable from the other as regarded taste. After a very large amount of muscular work had been performed, it was found that better results could be obtained on the days when the sugar was given than on the days when saccharine was given. Wanted a Bottle of X-Ray.

An amusing story is told in Wilson's Photographic Magazine of the misapprehension of "a well-dressed, sensible-looking woman" who had strolled into Roosevelt Hospital not long ago and asked if they had any "X rays." "I've read a lot about them," she said before the astonished attendant could reply, "and how much good they are, so I just thought I'd like to try them. I haven't been well for some time now, and I've tried most everything else. Can you let me have a bottle of X rays?"

Counterfeiting American Goods.

The counterfeiting of certain lines of American manufactures is reported to be a new industry in Germany. But as a rule American goods are like American girls, and cannot be successfully imitated.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

HER THEORY.

The house party at Westwood were dawdling over their coffee on the moonlit piazza. It was a merry crowd; everybody knew everybody else, and there was much laughter and talk, but suddenly a silence fell. Then it became patent to all that the couple seated on the steps leading to the lawn were engaged in a quiet but bitter altercation. The girl's listless air was in striking contrast to the man's eagerness.

"Your idea is an absurd one," he exclaimed.

"Oh, fie!" she said, "to speak so rudely to a woman."

"It is not rudeness but truth."

"Then they are apparently synonymous."

"I can't help it; it exasperates me to hear an intelligent girl like you—"

"Now, where," she broke in, "did you pick that up? I am not the least bit intelligent! If I were, I would know better than to argue with you; it is so perfectly hopeless—sighing—and you do get so excited."

"And who wouldn't—listening to such impossible theories!"

"What is your theory, Kate?" called out her cousin.

"One you have heard me express thousands of times before."

"Shall I tell him, Miss Doane?"

"Certainly."

"She says that a man doesn't like to feel too confident of a woman's affection; that it is the element of uncertainty in love affairs that makes them interesting; that he enjoys being puzzled and played with, and that a clever woman has only to appear indifferent to first pique and then attract him."

"Heresy!" exclaimed a chorus of manly voices.

"Mr. Stewart has omitted a very important clause," said Miss Doane. "I added that to do this the woman must necessarily be good to look at and not lacking in this world's goods."

"Oh, Kate, Kate!" sighed her cousin, "would you insinuate that the masculine fancy is influenced by worldly advantages?"

She shrugged her shoulders.

"I have stated my case; you can make it what you choose."

The hostess, who had been listening idly, now put in a word,—

"The trouble with you all is that you analyze too much," she said. "Why not take things as they come, without worrying over their possible causes? It is so much simpler and healthier."

Miss Doane turned around.

"Isn't Madge charming?" she said, amiably. "To hear her you would suppose that she had never seen the inside of a drawing-room. She always gets like that when she comes to the country; something in the air, probably."

"And you," said Stewart, when the laughter following her speech had died away; "has it no effect on you?"

"The country? Oh, yes, it makes me—if that is possible—more indolent than usual," and she leaned her head against the pillar and looked, not at him, but past him to the stretch of rosy sky.

"What an actress you are!" he said. "You are not the least bit indifferent, really, but it has amused you to pose as such so long now it has almost become second nature."

"Still wrangling?" asked Carl Ainslie, lounging down the steps. "My dear young friends, it grieves me to the heart to see such a display of unchristian feelings. 'Let dogs delight to bark and bite.'"

"Blame Mr. Stewart and not me," said the girl. "You know, Carl, that I haven't the energy to quarrel with any one, especially in this weather."

"Oh, of course not. Miss Doane only says the things that make other people want to row."

"A charming character you have given me! After that I think I will abandon the field to you. Come, Carl," with a quick change of manner, "Let's go down to the lake for a row."

Stewart watched them with wrath in his heart—the girl was talking gayly, her soft laugh floating back to him.

"Kate," said young Ainslie, resting on his oars, "I'm your cousin and have a right to tell you when I think you are doing wrong, so I say—do leave old Stewart alone."

"Of course, now, you know very well what I mean. It's all right for you to trample upon Herbert, Reade, and myself; we're used to it—been broken in too long to protest—but Stewart is another sort; he cares awfully about things."

"Oh, indeed, so he 'cares awfully,' and the rest of you are only amusing yourselves, I suppose."

"How you tease a fellow! No—what I mean is that he is so terribly 'all there,' that if he lets himself be hard hit it would knock him out completely if you threw him over."

"So terribly 'all there'—what a graphic expression. Yet undeniably true in this case; but why do you take it for granted that I will throw him over?"

Mr. Ainslie's face expressed the utmost consternation.

"Well, really, I don't know, but I thought, I somehow concluded—"

"What?"

"Why," a brilliant idea striking him, "that you didn't care for anybody and wouldn't until you had seen more of the world, for you are very young, Kate, in spite of your many experiences."

"Carl," said Miss Doane, solemnly, "the bar had lost a shining mark in you, but I am proud to claim you as a relative."

It was a fortnight later; the house party would disperse on the morrow, and Miss Doane, to whom Westwood was dear, was taking a farewell stroll through the gardens. She was idling down a path, when, catching sight of Stewart over the tops of the rose bushes, she ostentatiously put up her parasol and turned in the other direction.

But he was not to be so easily thrown off; with a curl of the lip (for he had recognized the manoeuvre) he hurried to her.

"Miss Doane," he cried, "will you spare me a few moments?"

She turned her head.

"I am not in a pleasant frame of mind. Uncle forwarded me my dressmaker's bill this morning, with certain pungent comments of his own appended, and my best manuscript has just been returned to me as 'unavailable,' so the atmosphere is not rosy."

"Never mind about that. I will not detain you long," and he pulled up a bench.

"I suppose you know you are very beautiful," he said. "Doubtless your mirror has told you that already, so I need not worry you with repetitions, but I feel sure that you do not realize how absolutely charming you are."

She looked at him wonderingly; it was a favorite method of hers and usually worked well, but now it failed to produce the effect she intended.

"Don't look like that," he said, "or I shall think you are not sincere, and I don't want to think that. I want to carry away the kindest thoughts of you."

"You have changed," she said. "Ten days ago you told Mary Fair I was thoroughly heartless."

"Did I? Well, that only shows I was a fool. I know you better now; and what is more, I understand you."

A slight pause.

"I heard up at the house that you were engaged to your cousin, and while the news could not but hurt me, it was in one sense a relief, for I knew at once why you had avoided and almost ignored me. You wanted to save me pain. Experience has taught me that if a man saw much of you he generally cared for you, and you tried to ward me off. But you cannot keep the moth from the candle and I loved you in spite of your coldness. It almost looks as if there was something in your theory, doesn't it?"

Miss Doane gathered herself together. Stewart did not know it, but she was summoning courage to tell him the truth about herself. She loved to be well thought of, and it was a genuine sacrifice to speak, but she could not, in common honesty, allow him to remain under his delusion.

"You must not think too well of me," she began.

"I could not," he cried. "One rarely sees so much of youth and beauty and simple goodness united as I find in you."

Simple goodness! The words scorched her.

"You are all wrong!" she cried, with burning cheeks. "I am not the least bit like that. Don't you see? Can't you understand? It vexed me to have you laugh at my theory, so I determined to make you an example of its truth. It was from no good motive—not to 'ward you off,' or 'to save you pain,' but with the distinct intention of making you care for me, that I pretended to be indifferent."

Stewart got slowly to his feet.

"And so," he said, "in support of a theory, for the sake of proving yourself in the right, you could play with a man's heart and make havoc of his life? Fool, fool that I was, not to understand!" and he struck one palm sharply against the other. "Well," with sarcastic courtesy, "the point is gained, the poor dupe at your feet. I hope you are content?"

"Content!" she cried. "I was never so sorry in my life. It seems strange I should care, doesn't it? As you say, I have gained my point—and yet—"

"Yes," he said, "and yet?"

Instead of replying she turned her head swiftly away, but not before he had seen that her eyes were full of tears. He stood irresolute, overcome by surprise, then he approached her.

"Don't cry like that," he said. "You never meant to hurt me; it was a pretty bit of acting to you, and if I was stupid and overdid my part you are not to blame. There, look up! What will your cousin say if he learns I distressed you?"

"What is it to me what my cousin thinks?"

Mr. Stewart stared.

"Pardon me, but I thought that, being engaged to him—"

"I am not engaged to him. Nothing is further from my intention."

A silence followed. Then Miss Doane rose to depart, but Stewart, whose mind had been adjusting itself to the changed situation, put out a detaining hand.

"Kate, if you are not going to marry your cousin, perhaps there might be a chance for some one else."

"Perhaps."

He drew nearer.

"I know I'm a perfect fool to rush on my fate, but what's worth having is worth asking for. Kate, will you marry me?"

She smiled, but her eyes were very tender.

"I believe you do love me," she said.

"Well, a little."

"And if I marry you I know I shall be happy. You are so strong and true, and have my confidence so utterly, but I have been horrid to you—so rude and disagreeable that I don't see how you can bear me."

"Why, you are going back on your theory."

"The girls will certainly laugh, and Carl will never leave me alone about it, but I don't care," lifting her face resolutely. "I love you, and there's no use pretending I don't."

A little while later she looked up.

"I always said I would never care for anybody," she remarked. "What will this prove?"

"That you are a woman," he said.

BASKET BALL.

The plan that has been observed this winter by the management of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. basket ball team of playing only the best teams in this section is very commendable. It was in a measure forced on the management unless they cared to pass out from under the protecting wing of the A. A. U. The local team is registered with the A. A. U. and can therefore only play registered teams under penalty of being suspended. The smaller and weaker teams have not, with very few exceptions, registered this year and so Plainfield is compelled to play the strongest teams of the country if it is going to play at all. This has given Plainfield audiences a chance to see some good playing, and while the local team has not won so many victories as it might otherwise, the result is far more satisfactory.

The interassociation basket ball tournament was continued at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last evening with a match between Teams A. and B. The A. boys wen the match by a score of 9 to 4 after a lively encounter. Teams A. and B. now stand tie for first place in the tournament, each having won two games and lost one. Team C. has lost two games and won none.

At the end of the first half the score stood 4 to 2, in favor of A. The teams lined up as follows:

TEAM A.		TEAM B.
Carroll	right forward	M. Moraller
Cutting	left forward	P. Suffren
E. Moraller	centre	Smith
Brokow	right guard	Overton
Perrine	left guard	McDonald-Zimmer

One of the most successful basket ball teams in the Metropolitan district this season has been the "Rubber Five," as they are called, from the Greenpoint Y. M. C. A. The team has been playing together for several years and their team play is something remarkable. Monday evening they will meet the team from the local Y. M. C. A. in the Plainfield Association gymnasium. The game is likely to be a particularly good one as the home team has braced up wonderfully this winter and is expected to make things lively for the Greenpoint boys who have heretofore always defeated the Plainfield five. Plainfield will be represented in the game by its veteran five.

Another basket ball game will be played in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Monday evening when the Rubber Five of the Greenpoint Y. M. C. A. will meet the local team. Heretofore the visitors have been successful in their contests with the Plainfield team. The latter are now in hopes, however, that their recent improvement will put them in the same class with the Greenpointers and perhaps give them the victory. The visitors are hard and fast players but they play a clean game that is very commendable and well worth witnessing.

The girls team from the Senior class at the Plainfield High School is considerably handicapped at present owing to the loss of its coach, George Proctor Smith. Mr. Smith has accepted a position in New York and is no longer able to give his time in the afternoon to directing the girls in their favorite sport.

The interclass contest among the girls of the Fourth Class at the High School will be continued next Wednesday by a match between teams A. and C. The girls are taking a decided interest in the contest. It is now planned to have the contest include nine games, each team meeting each of the others three times.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Thomas U. Smith will captain the Plainfield team in the roller polo match at the Crescent Rink Thursday evening next.

This evening, the third section of the indoor athletic contest in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium will be held. The events to be contested are standing hop, step and jump and the quarter mile run.

Almost every afternoon for the past week has seen an exciting game of hockey in progress at the New Market pond. There were no regular team matches played, however, the players present merely dividing themselves into two sides and playing one against each other.

The first of the roller polo games will be played in the Crescent Rink Thursday evening, January 19, when a team composed of Elizabeth young men, playing under the name of the Elizabeth Athletic Club, will meet the local team from the Plainfield A. A. The Rink will be thoroughly heated and special arrangements will be made for ladies.

Much interest is now being shown in the indoor athletic contest at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, the next two events in which will be contested tomorrow night. Berry Egan and Raymond Corroll are now in the lead, and from present appearances one or the other is likely to carry off the coveted medal. Both will probably be present this evening to defend their chances.

CYCLING COMMENT.

A. M. Griffin will continue to handle the Wolf-American wheels this season. The company will have a handsome new chainless model equipped with the Humber roller gear by the first of next month. A model of the ladies' chain wheel for 1899 is already on exhibition in Mr. Griffin's store on East Front street.

RIP VAN WINKLE'S INCONGRUITY.

Jefferson Discovers Something About His Celebrated Play.

Joe Jefferson calls attention to an interesting fact regarding Rip Van Winkle. He says:

"There is one incongruity in Rip Van Winkle which is seldom criticised. Possibly none of you ever noticed it. Indeed, I will confess that until recently the fact never occurred to me with any force. Well, you could never guess, so I will tell you. It is this: Rip Van Winkle is the only person in the play who speaks English with a slightly broken Dutch accent. All of the other characters are obliged to content themselves with ordinary English.

"It heightens the effect for Rip to speak as he does in broken accents, but if all the other characters were to attempt a dialect there would be such a variety of accent that the effect would be incongruous and ridiculous. All the feeling and sentiment of the play would be lost in this polyglot attempt at dialect.

"Several years ago a man engaged to play Nick Vedder came on at rehearsal and commenced to talk in the broadest low Dutch accent. I stopped him at once, but in his own defense he exclaimed:

"'But, Nick Vedder would talk that way, wouldn't he, if Rip Van Winkle did?'

"'Yes,' I replied, 'he would, but you mustn't,' and no doubt the man thought me very unreasonable. But this only illustrates the point that many things apparently illogical must be done on the stage to secure effect by inspiring the imagination. Absolute realism would be fatal. Under certain conditions it is the necessity of dramatic art to make the impossible seem real."—The Milwaukee Wisconsin.

How Dead Horses Are Useful.

The leg bones, which are very hard and white, are used for handles of pocket and table cutlery.

From the tail and mane are made the horsehair cloth for furniture covers, while the ribs and head are burned to make bone-black, the vapors arising being condensed and forming the chief source of ammonia.

The short hair taken from the hide is used to stuff cushions and horse-collars, and the hide itself furnishes a waterproof leather known to the trade as cordovan, and is used for the manufacture of high-class hunting and wading boots.

The hoofs of the animal are removed, and after being boiled to extract the oil from them, the horny substance is sold to the manufacturers of combs and fancy toothpicks.

The Pneumetophor.

A highly ingenious apparatus called the "pneumetophor" has been invented at Vienna. Its object is to enable miners, firemen and others to breathe without difficulty when surrounded by after damp, smoke from fires, or other noxious fumes. In its satchel ready for use, it weighs only four kilogrammes, furnishes sufficient air for a period of three-quarters of an hour, and has been subjected to severe tests by the Vienna fire department and in Silesian coal mines, with the utmost success. Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Manila News Via Madrid.

Madrid, Jan. 14.—A dispatch received here from Manila says that the American troops awaiting an opportunity to land at Iloilo have failed to receive re-enforcements owin gto a mutiny which occurred at Manila just prior to the proposed sailing of an additional force to join General Miller.

It is officially denied that Germany ordered her consul at Iloilo to undertake the care of Spanish interests when General Rios abandoned that place.

The ministers are preparing a bill for presentation to the Cortes, dealing with the future administration of affairs in Spain's remaining colonies.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—It is said at the war department that the statement in the Manila dispatch by way of Madrid that the troops on transports destined to re-enforce General Miller at Iloilo had mutinied is an absolute falsehood.

Fatally Burned by Gas Explosion.

Scranton, Pa., Jan. 14.—George Pentley, a barrowman on the cupola of No. 3 furnace of the Lackawanna Company, was set on fire and hurled forty feet by a gas explosion yesterday.

He fell among the other workmen a mass of flame. He was fatally burned before the flames were extinguished, and died soon afterward at the Moses Taylor Hospital.

The exploding gas set fire to the furnace building and a large part of the roof was burned before the firemen got the fire under control.

PROPOSED LEGISLATION.

SENATOR M'DERMOTT WORRIES THE G. O. P. MEMBERS.

Among the Bills to be Introduced Will be One Aiming to Curb the Wholesale Formation of Trusts—New Jersey Has Filed a Big Claim With the Government for Money Expended.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, Jan. 16—The inauguration of Governor-elect Foster M. Voorhees at noon tomorrow will be the only important incident of the second week of the Legislative session. In accordance with Mr. Voorhees' wishes the ceremonies will be plain and formal. Political clubs from Hudson, Essex, Camden, Passaic and Union counties will be here, but there will be no civic or military parade. The programme includes a dinner to the new Governor after the inaugural exercises, at which the guests will include only State officers, the inauguration committee and a few others.

Considerable interest is being manifested in the threat of Senator McDermott to move in the Senate tonight for an investigation of the charges of fraud in connection with the last election in Hudson county, in case the Republicans as a body have so far given the subject no consideration, but some of the leaders have expressed the opinion that if Senator McDermott asks for an investigation it will be granted, but that the resolution as adopted will be broadened to permit inquiry into other matters in the county besides the election.

Among the bills looked for is one legislating against trusts, declaring them unlawful, against public policy and void. Assemblyman Sturr, of Paterson, is credited with being the champion of the anti-trust measure. Heretofore it has been the policy of both parties to encourage the organization of corporations under the New Jersey laws, with the result that what are known as "miscellaneous corporations" are now paying the State annually more than $800,000. This, with the taxes received from the railroads, practically pays the State's expenses and has for several years made unnecessary the levying of a State tax on private property.

Quartermaster-General Donnelly has reported to the State Comptroller that New Jersey has filed with the Treasury Department at Washington claims for $93,903 33 for money expended in aiding the Government by organizing, equipping, transporting and maintaining volunteer troops from this State during the past year. In addition to this claim there are unsettled expenditures aggregating about $115,000 which will not be paid until the State receives the amount of the claims filed or the Legislature makes special provision therefor.

Back to Work Again.

Leonard Smith, of Duer Street, went to business in New York today for the first time in two weeks, having been confined to the house that length of time as the result of a bad fall he had about New Year's day. Last summer Mr. Smith met with an accident while out wheeling and cut a great gash in his thigh. The wound healed nicely, but a fall on the ice reopened it.

Big Sum of Money Involved.

BOYS OF THE THIRD WANT TO RETURN AS THEY LEFT.

WANT TO BE MUSTERED OUT NORTH.

The Volunteers Prefer Leaving the Army in Elizabeth Rather Than Georgia.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, Jan. 16—Complaint is made by friends of the Third New Jersey Volunteers, now at Athens, Ga., against the plan of the Government to muster out the regiment at Athens, instead of allowing the command to return in a body to Elizabeth, where it was first mobilized. The volunteers do not want to be disbanded eight hundred miles from home, and be compelled to return as individuals, without equipment or arms. A petition may be prepared and sent to the War Department asking that the desire of the soldiers in this matter be gratified.

A committee composed of representatives of twenty civic organizations in New Brunswick is arranging for a reception for the members of Company D, 3d N. J. Vols., and for New Brunswick soldiers in other companies in the regiment, on their return to this city from Athens. The day will be observed as a holiday and factories, stores and schools will be closed. When the company leaves Elizabeth Chief Engineer Banker, of the fire department, will sound twelve taps on the fire alarm and the organizations will gather at the Pennsylvania Railroad station to receive the boys. There will be a parade, a banquet at Zimmerman's Hall, and in the evening a reception at Columbia Hall.

FUNERAL OF JOHN K. DALLEY.

The funeral services of the late John K. Dalley were held yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Levi C. Kline, on Somerset street, and were largely attended by relatives and friends. Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., pastor of Trinity Reformed church, officiated. During the service prayer was offered by Rev. G. W. Gardner, pastor of Grace M. E. church. Another impressive part of the service was the singing by Elmer E. Runyon, who rendered "When the Mists Have Rolled Away," and "Nearer My God to Thee."

This morning at 8 o'clock the remains were taken to Readington, where a funeral service will be held in the Reformed church at that place. The interment will be in the family plot at Readington.

Trust in the Lord and be Prepared.

Yesterday morning at the First Baptist church Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes preached a forcible sermon, in which he cited the recent wreck on the Lehigh Valley Railroad at West Dunellen. The doctor deplored the disaster with an evident sadness, and he spoke at some length about safety in this world. He said that a person that places their trust in the Lord is the one that will always be safe. He said that under the circumstances the head-on collision could not have been avoided owing to the gross negligence and blunder of someone, but the Lord did take care of those who were in the wreck.

Evangelistic Meetings to Continue.

It has been decided to continue the evangelistic meetings at the Park Avenue Baptist church this week, and Rev. M. H. Pogson, who has been conducting the services, has consented to stay and will preach each night. Rev. Mr. Pogson addressed the Sunday-school yesterday afternoon for a short time.

INCH AS BIG AS A MILE.

BOUND BROOK OFFICIALS AFTER THE BRUNSWICK TRACTION COMPANY.

It is Claimed That the Railroad Company is Not Living Up to Its Contract in Laying Tracks on Main Street.

(Special to The Daily Press)

Bound Brook, Jan. 16—The Borough Council and the New York and and Philadelphia Traction Company are at odds over the laying of the trolley tracks on East Main street.

The Company was to lay the track twelve and one-half feet south of the centre line of the street according to ordinance, but in order to avoid filling in on the south side the borough officials claim the track in some places falls eleven inches short of the distance required from the street centre. An inch in Bound Brook is as big as a mile. The members of Council on discovering this fault notified the foreman in charge of the work to put the track farther south. He refused to comply and this brought trouble.

The Mayor and Council held a special meeting at which Messrs. Radel, Atkinson and Weigel, of New Brunswick, were present. The meeting was held to consider this matter and was not of the most pleasant character, and resulted in the borough counsel being instructed to take all legal measures necessary to hold the company to the ordinance. The matter has not been adjusted as yet, but another conference is being arranged.

Mr. Radel notified the Council that he declined to pay the bill of Engineer Coriell, for service in connection with the building of the trolley through the borough. He claimed that the amount, $450, was excessive.

STOLE A PAIL OF COAL; PAID FOR A TON OF IT.

THE ITALIAN MARVELED AT IT.

Arrested Last Night For Stealing Coal From His Employers—Was Fined $5 for It.

Tony Parello will buy coal by the ton hereafter. It's cheaper. He has been depending on the tracks of the Jersey Central Railroad to furnish his supply. Last night he picked up a pailfull. This morning he paid $5 into the city treasury. "One ton," quoth the son of sunny Italy as he counted out the greenbacks.

Now Tony is in the employ of the Jersey Central railroad. His command of English is limited. Patrolman McCarty found him roaming about on the railroad tracks with his pail filled with coal that he had appropriated. McCarty arrested him.

This morning, Tony was arraigned before City Judge Runyon with Patsy Christmas as an interpreter. Of course, he took the coal, Tony said. Then the Judge remarked $5 or ten days, and Tony marveled that he should have to pay for a ton when he only took a pailfull.

Prosecutor Voorhees Investigating.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, January 16.—Prosecutor John S. Voorhees will go to Easton today to begin his investigation as to the cause of the fatal wreck at West Dunellen, on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, on Monday last. He will inspect the official orders and schedules upon which the wrecked trains were run.

He stated Saturday that the wreck was due to one of three causes, wrong orders, disobedience of orders on the part of the engineer of one of the trains, or a blunder on the part of the operator at South Plainfield. He had already said that if investigation disclosed proof of carelessness he would endeavor to obtain indictment by the April Grand Jury of Middlesex county.

The Railroad Investigation.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Easton, Pa., Jan. 16.—Superintendent Spriggs and Trainmaster Harleman, of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, last night finished the investigation into the case of the West Dunellen disaster, but the result will not be announced until the testimony has been submitted to higher authorities.

JUSTICES OF PEACE MAY BE ABOLISHED.

But the Dogberries are Going to Make a Fight.

WILL TRY TO THROW VOTES.

THEY ARE ORGANIZING THROUGH THE STATE FOR PROTECTION.

Justices and Constables Calculate to Oppose All Men Who Want to See Them Retired to Oblivion, and They Think They Will be Able to Control 20,000 Votes—Organization Non-Partisan.

One of the measures which it is proposed to pass at the present session of the New Jersey Legislature is one abolishing the office of justice of the peace, and substituting for it a system of recorders or district judges. A proposed requirement for the office to be created is that the man holding the position shall be learned in the law. It is proposed to give to these men powers greater than those now held by the justices of the peace, and to permit a wider range of judgment in dealing with cases. The bill will carry with it what will amount almost to the abolition of the office of constable.

Justice of the Peace is an old and time honored office in the State. Usually the "Squire" is a pretty big man in his community, and while he has knowledge of the law beyond what he takes from some hand book or gleans from his interpretation of the statutes, he wields great power. Some of the holders of the office at the present time have been Justices of the Peace for scores of years. Next in importance is the office of constable, the man who carries into execution the findings of the "Squire." Now both the Justice and his man are to be abolished.

The justices and constables are not, however, going to go out of official existence without a struggle, and from end to end of the State they are organizing to fight the passage of the bill. They calculate that properly organized they can control votes enough to make of themselves a power in politics. They say they can control, at a low estimate, 20,000 votes among their friends and swing the State either way by controlling doubtful counties. The organization which is being perfected is to be non partisan and is to use its political influence only for and against man who will pledge themselves against any attempt to abolish the two offices.

The organizations have been effected in several counties and calls for meetings in others are out. In Monmouth county every justice has enrolled himself in the association, which has effected a temporary organization, and which proposes to elect permanent officers February 6th in Freehold. Other counties are in a similar state of organization, but within a month it is expected at least fifteen of the twenty-one counties will be fully organized. Politically, the justices are nearly evenly divided, as they are elected by local districts and are not greatly affected by political changes.

OTHERS ARE MISSING.

GEORGE WALDRON WILL STAND TRIAL ALONE.

Charged With Putting Telegraph Pole on Car Track Which Resulted in Wrecking of Trolley Car—The Trial Tomorrow.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Market, Jan. 16—George Waldron, a young man living in this place, will appear before Judge Strong and a twelve-man jury in the Court of General Quarter Sessions of Middlesex county at New Brunswick tomorrow. He is charged with malicious mischief.

Last November, it is alleged, four young men raised a big disturbance at Dunellen one evening. They carried a large telegraph pole from the side of the road and laid it across the tracks of the Brunswick Traction Company near Taylor's Hotel, Dunellen. A trolley car from Bound Brook came along, crashed into the pole and was badly wrecked.

Waldron and three others were indicted by the Middlesex county Grand Jury on the charge of having a hand in the mischief. The other three skipped and Waldron was arrested. He was held in $900 bonds for his appearance in court tomorrow.

New Chairman of Social Committee

A short business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist church was held Friday night, at which the resignation of Miss Margaret Harold as chairman of the social committee was accepted, and Miss Susie D. Woodland elected to take her place.

LOST PART OF HIS EAR.

FRACAS IN THE ITALIAN COLONY AT SCOTCH PLAINS.

Capaliaso Went Calling, Played Cards and Was Thrown Out—Lost Section of His Ear En-route—Prisoners Discharged.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Jan. 15.—"It's a King," remarked Michael Ricardo.

"It's a Jack," howled his guest, Joseppa Capaliaso. The remarks were made in Italian but they are translated for the benefit of The Press readers. They were made in Ricardo's shanty in the Italian colony near Scotch Plains, Friday night.

There followed thereafter a lively fracas in which a large section of Capaliaso's ear mysteriously disappeared. He recived in return a black eye and a quantity of bruises.

Saturday, the maimed Italian called on Justice Clark, loudly calling for vengeance and warrants were issued for Mike Ricardo, Joe Ricardo and another Italian named Scissio, on the charges of assault and battery and mayhem.

Saturday afternoon Justice Clark held court in the parlors of Emory's Hotel. The entire population, men and women, old and young, of the Italian colony, turned out to see that justice was done. The only trouble was that they couldn't agree how it should be done. Capaliaso lost some of the wicked spirit of revenge and he tried to clear two of his alleged assaulters.

The lack of an interpreter caused the Judge no end of trouble, as he was not well up in Italian. He finally came to the opinion that the complainant was probably as bad as any of them and so discharged the prisoners. Regarding the circumstances of the affair, they still remain a mystery.

ANOTHER WRECK VICTIM LEAVES THE HOSPITAL.

MT. CARMEL MAN RETURNS HOME.

Other Patients are Doing Exceedingly Well—Borreco Child is Improving.

George Linuski, of Mt. Carmel, Pa., one of the victims of the Lehigh Valley Railroad wreck, was discharged from the hospital, he being able to return to his home. His injuries consisted chiefly in a lacerated chin and a few bruises. He also suffered from shock.

All the other patients at the hospital are doing well. The Borreco baby is quite well today and those in charge feel quite confident that he will recover. Improvement is noticed in all of the other patients.

IN BOROUGH COURT.

Several Disturbers of the Peace Across the Brook.

There was quite a little court business this morning in the borough. James Cashen and Henry Burnett, partners in an outing last Saturday evening, were arrested by Marshals Wise and Schenck. The prisoners were guilty of causing a disturbance on Somerset street, and when told to keep quiet they continued to make more noise. This morning Recorder Long fined Cashen $5 and Burnett $10. The latter fine was paid and the other one will be.

Michael Ricker and Antonio Dee, two Italians residing in the borough, engaged in a fistic encounter Saturday night while somewhat under the influence of liquor. The fight attracted the attention of Special Marshal Wyckoff, and he succeeded in arresting Dee. The other fellow got away, but was arrested early this morning by Marshal Schenck. When arraigned they entered a plea of guilty and were both fined $10. As they are both employed in Washingtonville cutting ice no doubt their fines will be paid. Their services are needed very much at present.

BRICK STRUCK HIS HEAD.

Carpenter Working in Hotel Grenada Building Had His Head Gashed.

Garret Mattis, a carpenter working in the Grenada hotel building on North avenue, was struck by a falling brick this morning, and cut on the top of the head. Mattis was working around the wall, and a loose brick at the top toppled off and fell on him. As he had his head down, and a derby hat set a little back, the force of the blow was broken, and only the scalp was cut.

Mattis went into Armstrong's pharmacy where the wound was dressed. William Claassen, the barber, was sent for to shave off the hair from the top of the head so that the wound could be dressed.

AGED COUPLE WERE NOT PARTED LONG BY DEATH.

PNEUMONIA FATAL TO THE STELLES.

Husband and Wife Pass Away Within a Few Hours of Each Other—Daughter Critically Ill.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Stelton, Jan. 16.—The residents of this village and vicinity were shocked Saturday when they learned of the sudden death of Auguste Stelle and is wife, Mrs. Mariah Stelle. Mr. Stelle died Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock and his wife passed away at 12 o'clock midnight. Death in both cases was due to pneumonia. Mr. and Mrs. Stelle had only been ill a short time.

They were both about 80 years of age, and have always lived at Stelton. Mr. Stelle was a prosperous and well-to-do farmer and both he and his wife were influential members of the First Baptist church at this place. Mrs. Stelle was born in Piscataway township and was the daughter of John Stelle, who died many years ago. Four children survive them. J. Newton and Spencer Stelle, both of whom reside in Pennsylvania, and Miss Angeline and Miss Julia Stelle, who reside at the old home.

Mr. and Mrs. Stelle were uncle and aunt to John D. Runyon, of the firm of Boice, Runyon & Co., of Plainfield. They were similarly related to Randolph Stelle, of Stelle aveue.

A double funeral service will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

WIVES SECURED LICENSES

Two Clark Township Hotel Keepers Were Barred Under the Law.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, January 16—The thirsty inhabitants of Clark township who, since last October, have not been able to imbibe anything stronger than tea and coffee, can now rejoice, for Saturday Judge Vail, of the Union County Court of Common Pleas, removed the embargo he had placed on the sale of spirituous liquors in the township. The Judge did not go half-way in the matter either, but where only one license was expected, he granted two.

Under the license law, where an application is refused the applicant must wait a year before he can seek a license. In October George Andelfinger, formerly a chief of the Rahway fire department, and Albert H. Moffett were both denied permission by the court to conduct hotels in Clark township. Andelfinger's application was refused because he did not have a stable erected adjoining his new hotel, and Moffett's because he had a signer on his application who was not a free holder in the township. There was only one way in which they could get out of the dilemma, and that was by their wives applying for a license. So the new applications were made in the names of Mrs. Anna M. Adelfinger and Mrs. A. H. Moffett.

Judge Vail said that he had intended to refuse both applications, but had changed his mind and he would not show any partiality.

MAD DOG KILLED SHEEP AND PIGS.

Washingville Farmer Loses Live Stock Valued at $40.

Jerard Underhill, of Washingtonville, recently suffered a loss of sheep and pigs which will amount to about $40. A mad dog effected an entrace into his fields and viciously attacked Mr. Underhill's sheep. In some instances the ears were completely torn off, and they were otherwise horribly mangled. Several of the sheep lived only a short time, while others were killed outright.

The pigs fared worse for most of those attacked were killed on the spot. Not till after the damage was committed did Mr. Underhill learn of it. He then reported the matter to the township committee and the officials immediately made an investigation. It has thus far been impossible to learn what dog did the act, or to whom it belongs. On Saturday the committee went to Mr. Underhill's place and appraised the stock. They found that several hogs were also damaged to such an extent that they will have to be killed. In all Mr. Underhall's loss will fully reach $40.

Visited New Engine House.

Mayor Rockfellow and the members of the fire committee of the Common Council visited the West End engine-house Saturday afternoon in company with the board of engineers. The building was thoroughly inspected and it was informally decided to accept it. The acceptance will be formally made at the meeting of the Common Council this evening.

PURSUIT RACE IN ATHLETIC CONTEST.

Quarter Mile Run Contested in New Method.

IN THE INDOOR CONTEST.

EXCITING FEATURE OF CONTEST IN Y. M. C. A. GYMNASIUM.

J. H. Green, Jr., Won the Event, But Failed to Lower the Record—New Method Very Successful—Exciting Finishes—Raymond Carroll Broke Record in the Hop, Step and Jump.

Two more events in the indoor athletic contest for novices at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium were contested Saturday evening. Twelve contestants were out and made things interesting. The most exciting part of the evening's sport was the running of the quarter-mile run. The contestants started two at a time in a sort of pursuit race, and the lively finishes that resulted aroused the audience into enthusiasm.

The runs were held on the running track gallery, which is not wide enough to allow starters to run together. So the contestants started from opposite sides of the gallery. The track was nine and a half laps to the quarter of a mile. With such short turns and so little straight away runs, it was impossible to make anything like good time.

The first two to start were Walter Dreier and Edgar Sheppard. They ran very evenly, Sheppard getting the lead at the start. Dreier ran rather heavily but pulled up toward the last and crossed his finish line the fraction of a second before Sheppard completed the distance. Dreier's time was 1 minute, 35 2-5 second, Sheppard's 1 minute, 36 seconds.

Berry Egan and Albert B. Meredith ran together. Egan gained on the start, but lost some by a collision with the wall on one of the turns. Egan won by a short distance. His time was 1 minute, 28 4-5 seconds, which gave him third place in the event. Meredith did the quarter in 1 minute, 30 4-5 seconds.

William Townsend and William Morgan had a lively finish. Townsend made a strong effort to lap his rival and was close behind him at the finish. Townsend's time was 1 minute, 29 2-5 seconds, Morgan's was 1 minute, 33 seconds. Townsend was fourth in the contest.

The race between J. H. Green, Jr. and Hervey Doane was expected to be quite exciting as both men have reputations as runners. Green set a fast pace from the start. Doane seemed afraid of the corners and his long stride, successful on a dirt track, was not adapted to indoor running on such a small course. Green caught him after seven laps but the two runners tangled up in Green's effort to pass. Green lost his stride while Doane almost stopped. Both lost several seconds. Green continued, however, and finished in 1 minute, 25 3 5 seconds, winning the event. But for the trouble on the passing, he would have undoubtedly lowered the Y. M. C. A. record for the distance of 1 minute, 22 2-5 seconds, now held by George Proctor Smith. Last year, Green ran to within 1-5 of a second to the record. Doane's time was 1 minute, 31 seconds.

Raymond Carroll and William Brokaw ran a lively quarter. Carroll turned his foot at one of the turns which lost him a little time. He finished in 1 minute, 27 1-5 seconds, however, getting second place in the contest. Brokaw's time was 1 minute, 30 seconds. The last match was between Walter Sampson and Henry Pierce. Sampson showed good form for indoor running and lapped his adversary, making the quarter in 1 minute, 30 4-5 seconds. Pierce's time was 1 minute, 36 4-5 seconds.

In the standing hop, step and jump, Raymond Carroll finished first, clearing 25 feet, 9½ inches, breaking the Y. M. C. A. record of 25 feet, 2 inches, made last year by George Proctor Smith. William Townsend was second with 23 feet, 10 inches. Hervey Doane third with 23 feet, 7 inches, and Berry Egan fourth with 23 feet, 6 inches. The other competitors followed in this order, A. B. Meredith, William Morgan, William Brokaw, Henry Pierce, Walter Sampson, J. H. Green, Jr., Edgar Sheppard and Walter Drier. C. E. A. Heywood and Walter L. Long acted as officials of the events.

Irregularity of the 8:38 Train.

Commuters are again complaining about the irregularity of the morning train to New York that reaches this city at 8:38 o'clock. It seems that this train is hardly ever on time, and it causes a great deal of trouble to business men who try to depend on it.

LET US ARM YOU!

It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

President McKinley to Send Commission to the Philippines.

DEWEY TO BE AT ITS HEAD

Gen. Otis, Prof. Schurman, Col. Denby and Gen. Whittier Also Asked to Serve—Prof. Shurman Called to Washington by the President.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 16.--President McKinley has decided to send a commission to the Philippines to make a thorough study of the situation and advise him as to what the policy of the United States should be regarding those islands. He has asked these gentlemen to serve on the commission:

Professor J. G. Schurman, president of Cornell University.

Brigadier General Charles B. Whittier of New York, recently on duty at Manila.

Admiral Dewey will be president of the commission.

It is now only a question as to whether or not the gentlemen named will consent to serve, and as to the date when the commission will start for the Philippines.

The fact that Professor Schurman has been summoned to Washington to confer with the president indicates that Mr. McKinley contemplates appointing the commission immediately, although there is a probability that he may wait for the ratification of the peace treaty.

The president desires not only Professor Schurman's views regarding the future attitude of this country toward the Philippines, but advice as to the phases of the question that ought to be considered by a commission. Should he consent to serve, there will be little difficulty in making up the rest of the personnel of the commission, as all of the other men named are thoroughly familiar and interested in the subject, and will doubtless be glad to accept the service.

The entire administration takes it for granted that the present Senate will ratify the pending treaty of peace. When this is done Congress will naturally look to the president to outline a policy of some kind for the future control of the Philippines

Thus far the president has refused to commit himself officially any further than to urge the ratification of the treaty, which will give the United States complete sovereignty over the islands, and to favor military control until the situation can be studied.

President McKinley is not averse to the Filipinos having independence if it can be proved that they are capable of maintaining it.

He is not averse to accepting all responsibility of maintaining sovereignty and control of the Philippines permanently. But he wants to be sure of his ground before taking any definite stand.

It is believed that the determination to appoint a commission will have a good effect on the situation in the Senate.

Those senators who have been disposed to oppose the treaty on the ground that the president had been given no advice as to the future control and disposition of the islands will see that he has determined to obtain all the facts through the medium of a non-partisan commission composed of competent men before making any recommendations.

Dervishes Defeat Egyptians.

"Rumors are in circulation here that on December 28 the Dervishes, under Emir Fedil, on the Blue Nile, defeated the Egyptian forces, the Tenth Soudanese battalion being entirely destroyed. It is reported that reinforcements are being hurried up to the scene and that another battle is imminent."

According to a dispatch from Cairo on January 5 Colonel Lewis, with a Soudanese regiment, and a detachment of irregular troops, attacked Fedil, the last remaining formidable Dervish chief, while he was crossing the Blue Nile, on December 26, at the cataract south of Roseiro, storming the island on which Fedil took up his position and capturing fifteen hundred Dervishes. Fedil, however, escaped with three hundred followers.

Spanish Islands for Sale.

Madrid, Jan. 16.--The government, on the reassembling of the Cortes, will immediately ask, says La Reforma, authority to sell the Marianne, (Ladrones,) Caroline, and the Pelew or Palau islands, since Spain is powerless to maintain a sufficient force to defend them.

The government arrived at this decision in consequence of advices from General Rios that an army of four thousand men, a man of war and two gunboats would be necessary for the purpose.

The Albany Launched.

Newcastle, Eng., Jan. 16.--The United States cruiser Albany was successfully launched here Saturday afternoon in the presence of the United States naval attache, Lieutenant Colwell and many Americans.

The Albany is a sister ship of the New Orleans and was formerly the Brazilian cruiser Admiral Abrouall. She was purchased about the middle of March last by a representative of the United States government at the same time the New Orleans was purchased.

The last named also was originally intended for the Brazilian government and was first christened Amazonas.

DEPEW AND FAULKNER.

Two Notable Senatorial Contests to Occur During This Week.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 16.--The senatorial elections this week will attract the attention of the entire nation. Of all of them three are particularly notable, those of Pennsylvania, New York and Virginia.

In New York the legislature will elect as successor to Senator Murphy Dr. Chauncey M. Depew, who has been a war horse of the Republican party but has not held an elective office since he was chosen secretary of state of New York during the civil war.

Dr. Depew's biography need hardly be retold, for it is familiar to the entire American public. He will retire after his election from the office of chairman of the Vanderbilt systems to which he was only recently elected.

The West Virginia contest is for the seat now occupied by Senator Faulkner, and if the Republicans hold their small majority he will probably succeed himself.

NELSON DINGLEY'S DEATH.

Public Funeral To-day in the Hall of the House

Washington, D. C., Jan. 16.--An unusually large attendance of members marked the opening of the House Saturday. Chaplain Couden's opening prayer was devoted exclusively to the death of Mr. Dingley, whom he described as "a leader among men, one who had left behind him a clean record, a spotless character, and a career that shall live in history and be worthy of all emulation."

After the journal had been read Mr. Boutelle, Republican of Maine, was recognized to make the announcement of Mr. Dingleys death. The speaker's emotion almost overpowered him and his voice trembled as he spoke. He offered resolutions of respect, which were agreed to, and Speaker Reed announced the following representatives as members of the committee to go to Maine with the body: Messrs Boutelle, Payne, Dolliver, Tawney, Hilborn, Evans, Clark of New Hampshire, Bailey, Dockery, Bell and McClellan.

As a further mark of respect to the memory of Mr. Dingley the House adjourned.

In the Senate Mr. Dingley's death was the subject of the chaplain's onening prayer. He spoke of the dead representative as "a prince and a great man," and as a man who had led a life of unswerving integrity and of supreme usefulness.

When the message from the House announcing Mr. Dingley's death was read, Mr. Hale, Republican of Maine, offered resolutions expressive of the deep sensibility with which the Senate had heard the announcement and providing for the appointment of a committee of nine to join the House committee to take order for superintending the funeral. The resolutions were adopted.

In accordance with Congressman Boutelle's resolution, appropriate services will be held in the hall of the House of Representatives to-day at 12 o'clock.

Unlike the recent funeral ceremony of Senator Morrill, which was held during a recess of Congress, this will be official in character and invitations will be sent to the president and members of the cabinet, the chief justice and justices of the United States supreme court, senators, representatives and members of the diplomatic corps.

Shafter on Eagan's Tirade.

San Antonio, Tex., Jan. 16.--Major General W. R. Shafter spent Sunday in this city. Asked as to the Eagan-Miles controversy he said:

"The press reports quote General Eagan as saying that I approved of the beef furnished the troops. I never made such a statement. I know nothing of the beef in controversy. I can only speak of the beef I saw myself at Santiago, and I can say that it was good. I have expressed no opinion on any other beef.

"The tirade of General Eagan against General Miles is indefensible, and the affair has taken such a serious turn that I have no inclination to express an opinion in the matter or discuss the details. I have made it my policy to keep hands off in the controversies in which these fellows in Washington are indulging."

EAGAN TO FACE A COURT

He Will Be Arrested Before the Trial Occurs.

THE PENALTY IS DISMISSAL

President McKinley and Secretary Alger Determine to Order the Commissary-General Tried for His Violent Attack on Major-General Miles.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 16.--It has been decided by the president and the secretary of war that Brigadier General Charles P. Eagan, commissary general of subsistence, will be court martialled without delay for his defamation of Major General Miles.

Before the trial of General Eagan occurs that officer will be relieved from duty as commissary general and placed under arrest.

This decision is the result of the careful consideration given of the matter by the president and secretary of war, who foresaw immediately after the submission of the statement that there could be no other course than to direct the court martial of the officer who so flagrantly violated the principles of a gentleman and an officer of the United States army.

It has developed that, rather than prefer the charges against Gen. Miles which General Eagan proposed to make in his statement before the commission, the chief clerk of the commissary and subsistence department threatened to resign.

The chief clerk is William A. Decaindry, a member of the Cosmos Club of this city and well known in literary and scientific circles. Mr. Decaindry and the commissary general have not been enjoying cordial relations, and the trouble culminated when General Eagan desired the chief clerk to prepare the charges against General Miles.

The clerk refused to obey his chief, and wrote out his resignation, but by the advice of friends he has not presented it.

The determination to court martial General Eagan was formally reached Saturday, after the president had been in conference with several public men and had consulted with Secretary Alger, who was at the White House for more than an hour.

It is not intended to let the beef controversy creep into the trial. So far as the president is concerned, he has no desire to permit the controversy to continue, and he will accept the report of the war commission as final.

General Eagan will be tried on charges arising out of the violent language he employed in attacking Gen. Miles. The most important charge will be "conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman in violation of the sixty-first article of war," the penalty for violation of which is dismissal.

He will probably be also tried for "conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in violation of the army regulations."

There is every reason to believe that the president and secretary of war have given serious consideration to the character of the charges which will be preferred against General Eagan, and it is understood orders will be given to Judge Advocate General Lieber early this week to prepare the necessary specifications to support the charges.

Secretary Alger, after returning from the White House, sent for General Eagan, and it is said informed that officer of the condemnation by the administration of his action in uttering such vituperative language.

General Eagan has been engaged in carefully revising the statement he read befort the commission and eliminating the remarks to which the commission took exception. The revised paper will be transmitted to-day and will contain an apology to the commission for the language he employed, but General Eagan will explain that he was led to it by the seriousness of the charges preferred against him by General Miles and the officers of his Porto Rican command.

There is no reason to believe that General Eagan will apologize to General Miles, and if he should do so the commanding general will not accept the apology.

General Miles makes no secret of his belief that General Eagan should be dismissed from the army for his undisciplined, unmilitary and ungentlemanly conduct, but for the present he is determined to leave his vindication in the hands of the president and the secretary of war.

The Rebellion in Bolivia.

Lima, Peru, Jan. 16.--Reliable advices from Bolivia say that General Caceres is detained at Uyuni by order of President Alonzo.

According to the same advices, General Camacho, the head of the federalist troops, left La Paz with two thousand men and has taken up a position at Quenco, two leagues from La Paz, on the heights on the road to Oruro. President Alonzo's troops were outflanked by the federalists and his advance guard was defeated.

The foreign consuls at La Paz have decided to act as mediators between the government troops and the insurgents, with a view to averting bloodshed.

Kenosha, Wis., Jan. 16.--E. C. Simmons, ex-mayor of Kenosha, has offered to build and present to the city a library building and to purchase 25,000 volumes for the new institution. He will also construct a park in which to place the library, which he will build as a memorial to his son, Gilbert M. Simmons. The gift will involve an outlay of over one hundred thousand dollars.

Will Not Fill Dingley's Place.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 16.--It has been practically concluded not to make an appointment of a commissioner on the Canadian joint commission to fill the place vacated by the death of Representative Dingley.

It is felt that the commission has progressed so far toward the end of its work that it would not be feasible to take in a new member.

"We use so many of the Tabules, please send them by return mail," writes the matron of a large establishment in Pennsylvania where many servants are employed. This lady says that she has found that when housemaids complain of feeling "out of sorts," "didn't seem at all well although not sick," but the work dragged along, then she too would become nervous and on such occasions would take a Tabule and was so much benefited thereby that she decided to try what virtue there was in Ripans Tabules for the servants as well as for herself, and so one time about a week before house-cleaning she administered three Tabules a day to each housemaid. "I did not," she says, "depend upon their taking them, but after each meal I handed them around and saw that they were taken." Before the week was over every girl "was ready to clean with a vim," and now she always administers the Tabules when there is extra work to be done or when the weather is unsettled. "Once in a while," she says, "a girl will say 'I believe I am getting a headache,' and ask for a Ripans Tabule. I always say: 'Of course! As many as you feel you need. Don't hesitate to ask at any time for them.'" This lady further said: "I wish I could tell all the housekeepers in the country to provide Ripans Tabules without stint for their help. They will be more than repaid by the way the work is done. Servants often neglect seeing a doctor till too sick to drag along (on account of the bill), but in my experience Ripans Tabules prove a cure-all for nearly every small illness that besets a household."

A new style packet containing TEN RIPANS TABULES in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at some drug stores—FOR FIVE CENTS. This low-priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (120 tabules) can be had by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (TEN TABULES) will be sent for five cents.

PRESCRIPTIONS FILLED DAY OR NIGHT.

A GREAT DANDY.

IN A YEAR HE DISCARDS MORE THAN TWO HUNDRED PAIRS OF BOOTS.

Prince Albert of Thurn and Taxis is Immensely Rich—Constantly Employs Twenty Tailors—Dresses on an Average Six Times a Day.

The greatest dandy now living is Prince Albert of Thurn and Taxis. He is a mediatized prince—that is, one who is entitled to sovereign rank in the courts of Germany and Austria, although he has lost the power which originally belonged to that rank. He is fabulously rich, so that he can indulge his eccentricity of never wearing the same suit of clothes twice without having to levy taxes on his twelve subjects.

The Almanach de Gotha accredits him with the title of "Serene Highness," but it is a delusion and a mockery. What serenity can a man enjoy who never relinquishes command of a standing army of valets, tailors, bootmakers and haberdashers, who plot, plan and strategize to keep their master the best-dressed man of modern times. He has able aides-de-camp and spies stationed in every capital of Europe, who lie in wait and pounce on new designs in scarfs and waistcoats, and then see that every scrap left from these things is destroyed, so that the Prince may never have the mortification of meeting a duplicate waistcoat or cravat.

Twenty tailors are kept working day and night to keep the Prince's wardrobe up to the proper standard. Granting that it takes nine tailors to make a man, the Prince employs the services of a sufficient number of tailors to make two and two-ninths men.

His cast-off boots number over two hundred pairs a year. He hails with delight any new or revived sport that will enable him to add another costume to his wardrobe, though his dressing and undressing preclude his ever engaging in it. In this way he has bicycle suits that have never biked, golfing suits that have never golfed; hunting suits that have never hunted; fishing suits that have never fished. He changes his clothes on an average six times a day. His family is one of Europe's oldest.—New York World.

A LARGE MAGNET.

Is Used in Searching for Metal which May Have Gotten Into the Eye.

Almost everybody knows that the best way of extracting metal particles from the eye is by the use of a hand magnet. The idea, however, of employing for this purpose a magnet of sufficient power to lift 16 pounds seems at first somewhat hard to comprehend, but such an eye doctor has been found the best adapted to the requirements of a New York hospital. The eye is brought close to the magnet, which is 24 inches long, and if the particle of metal is merely adhering to the surface of the eye-ball, instead of penetrating the tissue, it leaps in a twinkling from the eye-ball to the magnetic surface. It is, however, in cases in which the metal is imbedded in the eye that the special usefulness of the powerful magnet is seen. In such cases the gouge or bistoury has to be used, and formerly the surgeon was unable to locate the speck, and often had to cause the patient great pain, even when the eye had been cocainized, before the extraction could be made. Now the whereabouts of the foreign substance is told in a second. The attraction of the magnet causes the surface of the eye-ball beneath which the bit of metal is lodged to bulge out, showing the exact position of the particle, and the surgeon inserts his instrument without the slightest fear of having made a mistake.—St. James Globe-Democrat.

Whales are Hard to Find.

The motive which has begun a new period of Antarctic explorations is very evident and definite, indeed. The supply of right whales has practically given out in the north, owing to the over-demand caused by the high price of whalebone. The oil, to be sure, is not worth nearly so much as in the palmy days of New Bedford and her sturdy whalers, by reason of the cheap production of its rival, petroleum. But the bone is sold at $5 per pound, and a right whale may have in his capacious jaws a whole ton of the precious commodity. With each animal furnishing a small fortune for a seafaring man, it is not surprising, in these days of harpoon guns and steamships, that the Arctic Ocean has been plundered of its whale wealth. So whalers are turning their attention to the waste of unexplored waters.—Scribner's.

A Beautiful Piece of Silk.

The Empress of Germany has had the material for a gown made which, when completed, was so beautiful that she would not allow it to be desecrated by the scissors of a dressmaker. The material is of silvery white silk, upon which is a raised pattern of flowers, foliage and bright-plumaged birds. The whole stands out in bold relief, and is such a masterpiece of work that the Empress immediately gave orders to have it made into curtains. The work was done by one skilled weaver, who worked months on it. He received twenty dollars a yard for the work, in addition to his regular pay, and the price of the silk when it was completed was $120 a yard.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Six Rich Women.

The following women are said to be the wealthiest six in the world: Senora Isidora Cousino $200,000,000; Hetty Green, $50,000,000; Baroness Burdett-Coutts, $25,000,000; Mme. Bartos, $15,000,000; Miss Mary Garrett, $10,000,000; Mrs. Woleska, $10,000,000.

DREYFUS DECISION AT HAND.

Belief That Verdict Will be That Dreyfus Was Not Proved Guilty.

Paris, Jan. 16.--The termination of the inquiry into the Dreyfus case by the court of cassation is expected any moment.

The Matin and the Gaulois express belief that the verdict will be that a traitor existed, but that it was not proved that the traitor was Dreyfus, who will consequently be sent to another court martial for trial.

The Matin says that Dreyfus believes that the revision of his case was due to the exertions of the general staff and that he has even thanked General de Boisdeffre and his former comrades in the army for their efforts in his behalf.

M. de Beaurepaire, writing to the Echo de Paris, expresses the opinion that Thursday's debate in the Chamber of Deputies renders it impossible for the court of cassation to proclaim Dreyfus innocent.

The court of cassation has again examined ex-Lieutenant Colonel du Paty de Clam.

It is stated that the court will be asked on January 17 to give a decision upon the question whether Colonel Picquart shall be held under civil or military jurisdiction.

Launch Lost in the Gulf.

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 16.--Lawrence Jones, the distiller, has become convinced that his naphtha launch Paul Jones has been lost in the Gulf of Mexico, and that all on board were lost.

On the launch were Colonel Harry Yocum of St. Louis, and Miss Florence Yocum, his daughter; Miss Marjorie Woodland of 335 Oakland Boulevard, Chicago; Miss Florence Taggart, the daughter of Mayor Taggart of Indianapolis, and a crew of four men, one of whom was oseph Brinkman of Louisville.

The launch, loaned by Mr. Jones to Colonel Yocum, left Louisville early in December for a trip to Florida. The launch, which was yacht rigged, left New Orleans for Pensacola January 3, since which time no tidings have been received.

Mr. Jones has exhausted every resource to obtain news. Every gulf port has been notified and every incoming vessel met with inquiries.

A yacht has been chartered by Mr. Jones at one hundred dollars a day to cruise along the coast. Mr. Jones says that he has given up all hope although the search is still going on.

The launch cost $18,000. It was sixty-five feet long and ten feet beam, and had a speedof twelve miles an hour. It had three lavishly furnished state rooms, hot and cold baths and an electric light plant.

Largest Steamship Afloat.

Belfast, Ire., Jan. 16.--The new White Star line steamship Oceanic, the largest vessel of that company's fleet, was successfully launched here Saturday afternoon.

The Oceanic was built for comfort and regularity rather than for speed. The ship's lines are perfect, but her engines are not powerful enough to constitute her a racer. Still, it is not likely that she will be much behind the record.

The Oceanic is now the biggest vessel in existence, and the longest ever built. She was exceeded in size by only one ship that ever was launched, and that was the Great Eastern. She exceeds the Great Eastern in length by twenty-four feet, but is neither so wide nor so deep.

Successor to Dingley.

Augusta, Me., Jan. 16.--The general opinion among politicians is that Chas. E. Littlefield of Rockland will be the successor of the late Mr. Dingley as the representative from the Second Maine Congress district.

Mr. Littlefield has been a member of the legislature and was attorney general of the state for four years. He was also one of the delegates to the last Republican national convention, where he was a staunch advocate of Speaker Reed's cause.

The Second district comprises six counties, and each county has its quota of Congress timber. According to the Republican policy of rotation in office, Androscoggin county, the home of Mr. Dingley, cannot have the representative. Before Mr. Dingley, Senator Frye represented the district in the lower house. It requires thirty days' notice after the voting lists are prepared and posted, before an election can take place.

The Hon. Herbert L. Shepherd of Rockport, in Knox county, may decide to enter the field against Littlefield. Shepherd can give Littlefield a hard tussle.

Aguinaldo's Spanish Prisoners.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 16.--The Spanish government has again called the attention of the United States government to the provision of the treaty of peace that the United States will use its efforts to secure the release of Spanish subjects who are held as prisoners by Aguinaldo's forces in the Philippines, and has asked what has been done to comply with that agreement.

A reply has been sent to Spain that this government is doing all that can be done to secure their release.

This is the second inquiry of the kind made by Spain. Owing to the attitude of Aguinaldo it is impossible to secure the release of the Spaniards held by his troops, but Major General Otis is not relaxing his efforts to carry out the instructions of the war department to make every endeavor to have the prisoners released.

Bark Turned Turtle.

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 16.--The British bark Andelana, Captain Stalling, "turned turtle" in Tacoma harbor between midnight and four o'clock Saturday morning. Her crew of sixteen were drowned.

She had discharged all ballast preparatory to loading wheat and went over during a wind squall. Her hatches were open, causwing her to fill rapidly while the crew was asleep.

The Andelana left New York on May 9 for Shanghai with a cargo of case oil and arrived here in ballast last week.

WEST INDIES FOR US?

Would England Give Them For a Foothold in the Philippines?

AN EXCHANGE TALKED OF

The British Public Manifests No Repugnance to the Suggested Exchange—An Intimation That the Question is Already a Subject of Official Consideration.

London, Jan. 16.--A subject which will engage the attention of Ambassador Choate immediately upon his arrival in England is one which links the political fate of the Philippines and that of the British West Indies.

Several public hints have been made within the past few weeks as to the great mutual advantage that would accrue to the United States and Great Britain from the latter's relinquishment of her principal possessions in the West Indies in exchange for a foothold in the Philippines.

The suggestion has not met with the outburst of opposition which might have been expected. This is perhaps due to the fact that it is not taken seriously by the British public.

The idea of surrender of a foot of soil anywhere which has long been under the British flag, is deeply repugnant to the British heart, no matter how obvious the advantages of an exchange may be.

British opinion, however, has undergone some radical modifications in the past few months; the desperate, almost hopeless, financial and commercial condition of Jamaica and other islands has been fully explained by the English newspapers, and in fact it has been admitted that the only way to re-establish prosperity is through a political union with the United States.

On the other hand, the enormous political and material value of the Philippines has been clearly pointed out.

The great difficulties of administration on the basis of liberty and free institutions will in no way discourage British statesmen or laymen.

It is probably true, therefore, that if a proposition of an exchange of the British West Indies for the Philippines is made after these considerations have fructified in the public mind it will not cause the uproar with which it would have been greeted six months ago.

An assertion that there have already been important discussions of the subject and that consultations and an exchange of papers bearing thereon between the foreign and colonial offices have taken place would probably call out a prompt and official denial of the same.

It is affirmed, however, that such a project will encounter no serious opposition in either of those departments of the British government.

This is one of the possible solutions of the Philippine problem which are within the range of practical politics.

RUSSELL HOYT COUNTERFEITER.

Danbury, Conn., Jan. 16.--Russell Hoyt, the former New York business man, whose country residence at Bethel was discovered to be the headquarters and workshop of a gang of famous counterfeiters, several years ago, died Saturday in the hospital in this city of infirmities brought on by prison life.

Hoyt was a member of an aristocratic family, and spent his summers at his place in Bethel. He had been engaged in various enterprises in New York and Brooklyn and was thought to be wealthy.

United States secret service officers who were watching Big Murphy, a famous counterfeiter, followed him to Hoyt's place in Bethel, and the detectives became convinced that they had discovered the headquarters of a gang of counterfeiters who had been circulating the finest imitation of a $20 bank note they had ever seen.

Hoyt's brother, Lorenzo, one of the solid citizens of the village, was also arrested. It has always been supposed that he gave the information that led to the discovery of the counterfeiting plant and the arrest of the members of the gang, for he was released soon afterward and his brother was sentenced to a long term in prison.

The plates from which the counterfeits were made and the presses and a large quantity of a remarkably fine imitation of the bank note paper used by the government, were found buried in the yard of Hoyt's house.

It is believed that Hoyt discovered the secret of making the government paper and that the secret died with him.

The officers never discovered where the paper come from, and its striking similarity to the genuine paper caused them a great deal of uneasiness. A few months ago Hoyt was pardoned by the president because he had paralysis and could live only a short time.

Admiral's Cousin Kills Herself.

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 16.--Miss Anna Mary Hoke Schley 25 years old, daughter of Colonel William Louis Schley, poet, lawyer and veteran of two wars, and second cousin of Rear Admiral Schley, committed suicide yesterday in her home.

Since the death of her father, to whom she was much attached, just a month ago, Miss Schley had been inconsolable. A week ago her mental condition became alarming to her friends, and attendants were almost constantly at her bedside.

Yesterday afternoon her sister, who had been chatting with her, went down stairs for a few moments, and when she returned found Miss Schley lying on the bed with a bullet hole in her left breast. She had shot herself in the heart with one of her father's revolvers.

Residence of Russell Alger, Jr., Burned.

Quebec, Jan. 16.--The residence of Russell Alger, Jr., at Grand Mere, has been destroyed by fire. The pulp and paper mills adjoining, and in which Secretary of War Alger is interested, were saved.

PHILIP IN COMMAND.

The Commander of the Texas Assumes Charge at Brooklyn Navy Yard.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Jan. 16.--Commodore John W. Philip assumed command of the Brooklyn navy yard Saturday. Rear Admiral Bunce retiring from the service on account of age, after forty-seven years of service.

Commodore Philip arrived at the Sands street entrance to the navy yard a few minutes before 10 a. m. He was met at the gate by Lieutenant Henry F. Bell, Admiral Bunce's junior aid, and was escorted to the Lyceum. A battalion of marines presented arms as the new commander appeared, and the band played "Hail to the Chief."

G. W. Sumner, captain of the yard, welcomed the commodore, who then was presented to Admiral Bunce. The admiral was surrounded by his officers and those of the warships now at the yard. All were dressed in full uniform. Admiral Bunce stepped forward to meet the commodore and after a hearty handshake, the two officers compared orders.

The cannon on the Cob dock fired a salute of thirteen guns in honor of the departing admiral, and his flag was hauled down from the peak of the Vermont. Again the guns on the Cob dock boomed this time in a salute of eleven guns for the new commander, and his flag was run up.

Admiral Bunce bid farewell to his officers and went to his home, and Commodore Philip, commandant, began arrangements to hove his family to the navy yard.

Commander James J. G. Kelly has been appointed senior aid and Lieutenant George R. Evans junior aid to Commodore Philip.

GOOD BYE TO THE HORSE.

New York, Jan. 16.--In thirty days the beginning of the end of the horse will have arrived.

The Thirty-fourth street cross town line will have done away with him by that time. As soon thereafter as possible, the Fourteenth, the Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth streets, the Chambers street and the Belt Line railroads will be using compressed air motors, and in ninety days wagons run by air motors will have started a wholesale replacing of the horse in the trucking business.

Back of the plans to do away with the horse and control the trucking business in New York city and elsewhere are two big companies, incorporated Saturday in Trenton N. J., with a capital stock of $17,000,000. One company is to manufacture compressed air motors, trucks, etc., the other is to operate them.

In the operating company are Richard Croker and other Tammany men, who, it is said, will control the trucking of New York city. Mr. Croker's company is the Auto-Truck Company.

With the news of the incorporation of the two companies came the announcement that Joseph Leiter, the young man who made the Chicago wheat corner, is back of the International Air ower Company.

Gen. Sanguily in a Huff.

Havana, Jan. 16.--General Julio Sanguilly, accompanied by four aids, has sailed for Tampa, Fla., whence he purposes to proceed to Washington to protest against the attitude assumed toward him by Major General Ludlow, military governor of Havana.

General Sanguilly called upon Major General Brooke, governor general of Cuba, and for the first time gave his version of the Albisu theatre affair. He showed General Brooke General Ludlow's letter ordering him (Sanguilly) to stay out of the city and not to wear his uniform.

Sanguilly, who had not seen General Ludlow, got a note of introduction to him from General Brooke and sent it to General Ludlow by a Cuban aid, together with an inquiry as to when it would be convenient for General Ludlow to see him.

To this General Ludlow replied that he could not see Sanguilly, and the Cuban, before leaving here for Tampa, wrote to the governor general a full statement of the case. General Sanguilly considers that the Cuban army has been insulted in his person.

Payne to be House Leader.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 16.--The death of Chairman Dingley of the ways and means committee makes a New York man, Sereno Payne, the leader of the Republicans on the floor of the House of Representatives and the chairman of the great ways and means committee of Congress.

It will be remembered that Mr. Payne was the ranking member of the committee when the present Congress was organized and that Mr. Dingley's selection by Speaker Reed was somewhat resented by the friends of the New York man. Mr. Payne, however, made no protest against the selection and has always kept up the friendliest relations with the speaker.

Mr. Payne's elevation to the chairmanship of the ways and means committee will necessitate his retirement from the chairmanship of the committee on merchant marine and fisheries, which he now holds.

Many Starving in Havana.

Havana, Jan. 16.--Captain Greble, General Ludlow's adjutant, found 30 families in one tenement, most of them absolutely without food, the children naked and many of them sick.

The patrols report hundreds of cases of destitution, all of which will be relieved by the systematic distribution of rations by the authorities.

The rations as issued consist of eight ounces of bacon, twelve ounces of flour and meal, with coffee and sugar. It is possible, however, that a ration of rice, beans and vegetables may be substituted.

Health Without a Stomach.

Boston, Mass., Jan. 16.--Dr. Maurice H. Richardson of this city, who is assistant professor of clinical surgery in the Harvard Medical School, removed the entire stomach from a woman on May 31 last and the patient is now in good health, eating well and thriving with a new lease of life.

There have been only two successful operations of this kind in the world before this operation.

Nervous Dyspepsia

To Gain Flesh, to Sleep Well, to Know What Appetite and Good Digestion Mean.

MAKE A TEST OF STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS.

No trouble is more common or more misunderstood than nervous dyspepsia. People having it think their nerves are to blame and are surprised that they are not cured by nerve medicines. The real seat of the mischief is lost sight of. The stomach is the organ to be looked after.

Nervous dyspeptics often do not have any pain whatever in the stomach, nor perhaps any of the usual symptoms of stomach weakness. Nervous dyspepsia shows itself not in the stomach so much as in nearly every organ. In some cases the heart palpitates and is irregular; in others the kidneys are effected; in others the bowels are constipated, with headaches; still others are troubled with loss of flesh and appetite with accumulations of gas, and sour risings and heartburn.

It is safe to say that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will cure any stomach weakness or disease except cancer of the stomach. They cure sour stomach, gas, loss of flesh and appetite, sleeplessness, palpitation, heartburn, constipation and headache.

Send for valuable little book on stomach diseases by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich. All druggists sell full-sized packages at 50 cents. Prof. Henry W. Becker, A. M., the well known religious worker and writer of St. Louis.

Public Secretary for the St. Louis School Patrons' Association, and the District Conference of Stewards of the M. E. Church; also takes an active part in the work of the Epworth League, and to write on religious and educational topics for several magazines. How he found relief is best told in his own words.

"Some weeks ago my brother heard me say something about indigestion, and taking a box from his pocket said 'Try Stuart's Tablets.' I did, and was promptly relieved. Then I investigated the nature of the tablets and became satisfied that they were made of just the right things and in just the right proportions to aid in the assimilation of food. I heartily endorse them in all respects, and I keep them constantly on hand." 19eod 9

Governor Roosevelt's Good Idea.

Governor Roosevelt has given a warning to the New York Legislature that will bear an application to the New Jersey Legislature by Governor-elect Voorhees when he gets into office. It is that unless important measures of legislation are introduced into either the Assembly or Senate within the first eight weeks of the session they will receive but slight consideration at the hands of the chief executive, unless the need of proposed legislation has developed suddenly at a later period than the first two months. Governor Roosevelt realizes that many of the bad laws that are now on the statute books are those put there in the last days of a Legislative session when there was not the time nor opportunity to investigate them. In nearly all instances of this kind the measures were under consideration by their promoters for a long time and could have been introduced early as well as late in the session. Of course, ofttimes it is a studied plan to spring mischevious legislation at a late day because it is realized that if there was time to look into it thoroughly it would never be enacted. Governor Roosevelt's stand in this respect is admirable, and will tend to lessen the public evils that are perpetrated in the last days of hurry and bustle of a legislative session.

Mayor Wilson's letter printed in The Daily Press Saturday, with reference to the collection of delinquent taxes and what might happen to the debtors to the borough if they do not settle up, was a straight-forward explanation of the position taken by the borough officials. Mayor Wilson and his official colleagues are not going to work to work hardships to any of their constituents if it can be helped, but, as His Honor points out in his communication, most of the delinquents are able to square up their tax bills without great inconvenience. Where mitigating circumstances surround cases it is not at all likely that a failure to pay will result in the delinquent being thrown into jail in a summary manner, as many seem to think will be the practice.

Hobart Tuttle, who has been acting as private secretary to New Jersey's trio of Governors who have followed each other in quick succession since Mr. Griggs became the chief executive of the State, will probably be retained by Mr. Voorhees when he again takes up the reins of State. Mr. Tuttle has has a knowledge of the details of the office that fits him for the position, and besides he is a brother-in-law of Vice-president Hobart. That makes a strong combination in Tuttle's favor.

The New Brunswick Fredonian is trying hard to stir up civic interest in that city, and to that end is printing a series of symposiums in which well-known citizens in various walks of life contribute ideas aimed to improve and build up the city. The Fredonian has undertaken a monstrous job, and it is doing some excellent work. We have never entertained high hopes of New Brunswick amounting to much, but Fredonian's agitation may result in surprising things.

A prominent North Plainfield politician observes that the political pot "across the brook" is simmering, but it is far from the point of boiling over. Incidentally, it also noticed that the leaders of the two factions of the G. O. P. are holding quiet little conferences that break up in the early morning hours, which seems to indicate a determination on their part of having a Republican Mayor succeed Mayor Wilson. However, it will take a good one to beat the Colonel.

CHICAGO'S STREET RAILWAY FIGHT.

For years there has been no such excitement in Chicago as that occasioned by the attempt of the street railways of the city to secure the passage of an ordinance extending their franchises fifty years. In 1897 the state legislature passed a bill permitting such extension by ordinance, but Mayor Harrison, supported by most of the newspapers and a majority of the citizens, took a decided stand in opposition.

The killing of a man who was trying to board a New York street car by the conductor furnishes a new view of the latter individual. The surprising thing about the fatality is that the conductor was able to see the prospective passenger. We have always been under the impression that street car conductors were blind when it came to seeing a man who wanted to board their car.

It will be a week yet before the Legislature settles down to earnest business, as the Gubernatorial inauguration will be the most notable event of this week in State affairs and it will take the Honorable Assemblymen and Senators at least the rest of the week to get in shape for good work.

Senator Quay is thinking seriously about abandoning his fight for re-election in Pennsylvania. Perhaps the example of a certain Mr. McCoy has induced the Pennsylvania statesman to think twice before going too far.

The bones and muscles of the human body are capable of over 1,200 movements. The movements that a Plainfield politician is capable of are not on record, and we doubt if they could be counted.

With the borough election in March, National, County and State election in November and City election in December, Greater Plainfield is able to keep reasonably busy in a political way.

The formation of trusts under the New Jersey laws still continues at a lively pace, but that does not prevent the people from mistrusting the whole business.

It is not expected that there will be any need of enlarging the Congressional Record on account of John Kean entering the United States.

It is evident that President McKinley needs to do some brisk, clean sweeping in the Alger end of his administration.

General Egan seems to want to make the trite statement "war is hell" as nearly realistic as possible.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Senator Reed will make an exceptionally good presiding officer for the Senate. He is a clear-headed, clean-cut man, able and determined to facilitate the business of the Senate. His speech to his fellow Senators in thanking them for the honor shown him is clear and to the point.—Newark Sunday Call.

The Newark News fears that the money received by the State for the incorporation of trusts will be the great obstacle to remedial legislation. The people of New Jersey pay more money to the trusts than the State government gets out of them, and if they did not, they could not afford to sell their honor for dollars.—Trenton True American.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

The humorous comedy drama, "Joshua Simpkins," accompanied by two bands and an excellent orchestra will be seen at Music Hall Friday night of this week. It is a rural play in four acts, bound together by an interesting plot and produced with special scenery carried by the company. In the third act a realistic saw mill scene is introduced, when a real buzz saw is seen cutting through a real log at a terrific speed, upon which a human being has been helplessly bound by his enemies and left to an evident death. There is an abundance of comedy in the play, while there are many fine singing and dancing specialties incidentally introduced

"A Runaway Girl," the attraction at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, will doubtless fill all of the fourteen weeks of the current season which Mr. Knowles has allotted Mr. Daly. The melodies in this musical play have become thoroughly popularized, and Miss Virginia Earle, Cyril Scott and James T. Powers have established themselves as favorites with theatre-goers.

Chauncey Olcott has made a hit at the Fourteenth Street Theatre as Dick Bonyane, the hero of "A Romance of Athlone," Mr. Pitou's new play. He has evidently entered on a long engagement. Thus far Mr. Olcot has drawn overflowing audiences and the demand for seats indicates that his new play is well liked by his admirers.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Westfield, Jan. 16.—Steward H. Foote, of this place, had a narrow escape from injury and perhaps death while returning from work with a number of other employees of the Hall Signal works located at Garwood. Foote and his friends were walking the railroad track just west of the depot when a coal train passed. As the caboose neared the county road bridge Foote attempted to jump aboard. He grabbed the handles of the car and in the efforts to jump on the step was thrown against the iron abutment of the bridge. He bounced like a rubber ball, but held on to the handles, and managed to keep close to the car till the bridge was passed. Luckily he escaped injury, but when he did get off the car he was so frightened that his friends had to assist him home.

John Pfeifer broke his arm Saturday. Pfeifer is perhaps one the oldest and most noted residents of the town. He is employed at the Westfield Hotel and was on his way to the post-office at the time the accident happened. Pfeifer slipped on the glass grating in front of the First National Bank. In the fall he cut his head and broke his arm.

A critical operation was performed upon the back of Edward Hall, of this place, yesterday morning by Dr. Fred A. Kinch assisted by Dr. Harrison. The operation was a most successful one and was performed at the home of the young man's parents on Central avenue.

WHITE'S. WHITE SALE
THE WHITE GOODS EVENT OF THE SEASON.

Encouraged by the marked success which has attended our previous Muslin Underwear sales, we have made a large purchase for this occasion. Our orders were placed during the makers' dull season. The work has been most thoroughly done, materials and trimmings are of the best, the fit, finish and size generosity is the same as if the garments were made under your own supervision—by your own home seamstress—and the prices are less than you would pay for bare materials.

NIGHT ROBES.

Every feature of this sale is special, but more special than other features will be the nightgown selling. They are among the best creations of master makers and are daintily trimmed with the prettiest laces, ribbons and embroideries. Prices 25c, 49c, 75c, $1 and $1.25.

WHITE SKIRTS.

Some plain with rows of tucks, some with cambric and embroidery flounces with lace insertions; all cut very full, nothing scant about them but the prices—25c, 35c, 49c, 75c to $1.25.

CORSET COVERS.

Trimmed with embroidery, torchon laces, or clusters of tucks with insertions, perfect fitting, high, square or V shape necks, made of fine cambric. Who would bother to make them when you buy at these prices—15c, 25c, 29c, 39c, 50c

DRAWERS.

Made with yoke bands, deep hamburg embroidery, umbrella, flounces or rows of tucks. As some of the best numbers are somewhat limited as to quantity it is advisable that you be among the early choosers as these lots cannot be duplicated at these prices—17c, 25c, 39c and 50c.

A PLOVER ON GUARD.

Oh, little plover still circling over
Your nest in clover, your house of love,
Sure none dare harm it and none alarm it
While you are keeping your watch above.

It is she doth love you and well approve you,
Your little love-bird so gray and sweet;
If hawk and falcon swept down above you,
It is she would trust you the twain to meet.

Now let me pass, sir, a harmless lass, sir,
With no designs on your eggs of blue.
I wish your family both health and wealth, sir,
And to be as faithful and kind as you.

But not a shadow steals o'er the meadow
That he will swoop not to drive away;
The bee in clover and Wind the rover
He fears mean ill to his love in gray.

The showers so sunny and sweet as honey
Have power to trouble his anxious breast.
Now light one purchase for love or money
That watchful heart and that pleasant nest!

—Katharine Tynan Hinkson.

STORY OF A SCAR.

Our yacht was running free from the coast. Dick Duncan, Max Lyon and I lay upon the low roof of the house, or cabin. A little silence which had fallen was broken by Max, who turned to me and said,—

"Major, how about that scar across your forehead? You promised to tell me how it was caused some time. This is a good opportunity. Let us hear it."

"Yes," cried Duncan, throwing away his cigar and rising to a sitting posture, "major, tell us all about it."

"Ten years ago," I began, "I lived in the city of San Francisco, and was cashier for the Northern California Land Company an organization owning two hundred thousand acres of land in that section of the State.

"We were continually engaged in the purchase and sale of lands, and such transactions necessarily brought large sums of money into our possession, mainly gold coin.

"In order to protect this money, and to avoid the necessity of being obliged to deal exclusively with the bank, I had had built a vault in the side of my office, constructed of solid masonry, and closed by an enormous chilled-iron door, and within which stood a small but exceedingly strong safe, with a time-lock. In this safe we stored our gold when not desiring to deposit the same. The vault generally remained open during business hours.

"I am thus particular in my description of this vault that you may understand the remainder of my story.

"I had been cashier of the Land Company two years, when we arranged a very large sale of property in Humboldt county, and received the pay for the same. I remember that the amount was about forty thousand dollars, and all paid in gold.

"The bullion arrived by the steamer on the morning of Saturday, and I was busy for several hours, so that when I completed the task of counting it after dinner, which I always did personally, it was too late to deposit, and I was obliged to place the same in the inner safe spoken of until Monday.

"I had done this, and executed a receipt for the gold to the special messenger who came with it, and was about to close the outer vault door when the messenger spoke to me.

"'Do you keep that money here?' said he, in some surprise.

"'Oh, yes,' I replied. 'We consider this as secure as a bank safe. I shall deposit Monday, however.'

"'But the bank has a guard over Sunday,' said the man, 'and you do not. Your vault might be blown open to-morrow, in this desolate part of the city, and no one be the wiser until Monday.'

"I laughed as I closed the outer doors and locked them.

"An hour later I closed the office of the company and went to my hotel.

"I think the theatre drew me that evening—certain is is that I was engaged until nearly midnight, and it was not until I was again in my own room, prepare to retire, that the conversation of the afternoon flashed across me. As it did I became instantly worried.

"As the messenger had said, our offices would be vacant until Monday morning, and were located in an unfrequented part of the city. The possibility of robbery became almost a probability as I ruminated.

"'I will go down there now and see that all is right,' I suddenly exclaimed.

"Re-dressing myself, I placed a revolver in my overcoat pocket, took my hat and cane and left the room. As I passed through the hotel office I said to the clerk.—

"'I may be gone until breakfast time.'

"Out into the night, clear and starlit, but cold, I walked. The streets were comparatively empty, and I met no one whom I knew as I journeyed toward our offices.

"When I reached the building I paused. Was it worth while to go in? I examined it closely from without. The shutters were all closed, the door evidently fastened. I went up the steps and tried the door.

"'Locked all right,' I said to myself, 'but I think I will go in.'

"I did so, closing the door and fastening it behind me; then passing into the inner office, I lit the gas and looked about me. Everything was just as I had left it last night. I listened and heard no noise but the moan of the wind, and the puffing of a far-away tug upon the bay.

"'What a fool to have this walk at midnight because I grew a little nervous!' I growled; 'but one thing, I won't walk back now,' I continued, throwing my overcoat on a chair. Here's a good sofa, and I'll sleep until morning,' and suiting the action to the words, I turned out the light and lay down.

"In three minutes I was asleep, and not until the rattle of the carts without disturbed me did I awake.

"I sprang up and pulled out my watch.

"'Half-past eight! Here's a nice go!' I exclaimed. 'I'll not go to the hotel for breakfast now, but wait and do a little writing and get an early dinner.

"With this resolve I lit a cigar, opened two of the upper blinds, unlocked the vault doors, and took out some of the books and began to busy myself.

"A half hour passed, when, as I paused a moment in my labors I imagined I heard a step behind me. I turned quickly, half-rising, but not quickly enough, for at the same instant I was struck a tremendous blow upon the head, and sank unconscious in my chair.

"But that's not the manner by which I got the scar. That came later. How long I remained insensible I do not know, but when consciousness returned I found myself lashed to my chair before my desk, while opposite, working at the door of the inner safe, was a man. As I groaned—for my head pained me terribly—he turned and I recognized him.

"It was the messenger of the day before.

"'Hello, you fool!' he growled. 'I caught you, didn't I? Do you know that I stirred you up on the danger of leaving this money here alone in order to bring you to the office to-day, so that I could force you to open the outer doors? I knew the smaller safe was locked by a time-lock; but I am going to explode that. If I'd been obliged to risk two explosions, one on each door, I might be taken. I've been hiding all night for you, and saw you when you came. Now don't make me any trouble,' he concluded, turning again toward the inner safe, 'or I shall have to hurt you. I am preparing to blow this door open. When I do, and get the gold out, I'll bid you good-day; if you raise a row I'll tap you on the head again. Remember.'

"He knelt within the outer doors, and began again to charge the other hole.

"Suddenly, as I moved uneasily, my foot touched an electric button under my desk, which had been so arranged that by pressing it it would shut the outer door.

"'There!' said the robber, at length, half rising. 'Now for a match!'

"And he prepared to light the short fuse he had made. I slid my foot on to the electric button. I saw him lean closer; I heard the fizz of the match and the fuse; I saw him rise and step back, and I pressed the button.

"Silently but swiftly the great door began to move, and the next instant had crushed him, with one arm and one leg within the opening, where writhing and screaming in pain, it held him with its mighty weight.

"'Open the door—open the door! Quick, for Heaven's sake!' he gasped. 'The mine will explode!'

"I saw the blue smoke curling up behind the man, and then a dull roar filled the room. When I opened my eyes it was to find my friends about me. The man who sought the gold was a crushed and blackened mass at my feet. My head had been cut by a flying bolt, and that is how I came by my scar."

Rufus's Valid Excuse.

On one of the country plantations were employed, among a score of other colored field hands, a couple of typical darkies. They were man and wife. The man, in addition to his work in the field, was called upon to attend to the horses and do chores about the house. He was well on in years, but was one of the most faithful of his race that ever followed a plough or curried a horse. His wife officiated as cook and helped with the housework.

One day the aged negro did not appear in time for work, and, as the master had counted on his early presence about the stables, he took Rebecca to task for the tardiness of her spouse.

"Hev to 'scuse Rufus dis mawnin', boss; hev to 'scuse him——"

"What's the matter with him? Why ain't he here on time, eh?" the master put in testily.

"Hev to 'scuse him dis mawnin'. Rufus died jes 'for sunup, boss."

The quaint manner of her putting the matter and her faithfulness to her work acted somewhat on the master's good qualities, and, quickly telling her she could have a holiday, he turned away, possibly to conceal his feelings. —New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Teacher—Well, Billy, did you give any Christmas presents this year?

Billy—Oh, yes, lots. I gave papa a train of cars, mamma a jack-in-the-box, grandpa a kite and grandma a rocking-horse.

Teacher—Did they seem to enjoy them?

Billy—Well, I guess they did. You ought to have heard them laugh when I said I'd let them keep their things in my nursery.—Harper's Bazar.

"But in time the bills for them will come in."

"Oh, well! perhaps something else will be invented by that time."—Tid-Bits.

WHERE OUR IMMIGRANTS GO.

Three Eastern States Absorbed About Two-thirds in the Last Fiscal Year.

Present immigration to the United States amounts to nearly a thousand a day. In the last fiscal year the total number of immigrants was 343,000 and the rate at which immigration is increasing makes it likely a total for this fiscal year of about 365,000 or 1,000 a day, though, of course, immigration is larger in summer than in winter, and varies according to the conditions of the times and the climate.

The general impression is that the great bulk of immigrants to the United States find homes "in the great West," notably those from England, Wales, Germany, and the Scandinavian countries. The contrary, however, is shown by recent figures to be the case. The states into which immigrants go by preference are those on the Atlantic seaboard. Of 343,000 immigrants who landed in this country during the last fiscal year covered by the Treasury report, 127,000 meant to remain in New York state. Some 61,000 others had Pennsylvania for their destination, and 36,000 Massachusetts; so that these three states absorbed about two-thirds of the whole immigration to the United States. Minnesota, long a favorite among the Scandinavian and German farmers arriving in the United States, got less than half as many as went to Connecticut. For North Dakota the number of immigrants was only 1,080; for South Dakota, 613; for Nebraska, 1,043; for Kansas, 690; for Montana, 920; for Wyoming, 226; for Utah, 206, and for Idaho, 118. On the other hand, nearly 3,500 immigrants found homes in Maryland, a state which has not been in previous years regarded as offering many inducements to immigrants. Indiana got 1,944 immigrants, and Missouri 2,485. Kentucky attracted only 330, and North Carolina only 87 immigrants. West Virginia absorbed 37, but the number that found homes in Florida was surprisingly large, 7,159. The explanation of this increase is to be found in the fact that consequent upon the hostilities in Cuba, there was an immigration of more than 6,000 Cubans from that country to the United States last year and a large number of them found homes in Florida.

Among the states of the West into which there was a considerable movement of foreigners last year was Illinois, which got 22,000. Nearly 5,000 immigrants, many of them Italians, settled in California, and the population of Colorado increased 1,500 by immigration. In only one state of the union did the number of female immigrants arriving exceed the number of male immigrants. That was New Hampshire. Only 600 immigrants went to Arkansas and 38 to Oklahoma.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHTS.

The Smile of Greeting.

Why do we not always smile whenever we meet the eye of a fellow-being? That is the true recognition which ought to pass from soul to soul constantly. Little children in simple communities do this involuntarily, unconsciously. The honest-hearted German peasant does it. It is like magical sunlight all through that simple land, the perpetual greeting on the right hand and the left between strangers as they pass by each other, never without a smile.—Helen Hunt.

My Character To-Day.

"My character to-day is, for the most part, simply the resultant of all the thoughts I have ever had, of all the feelings I have ever cherished and all the deeds I have ever performed. It is the entirety of my previous years packed and crystalized into the present moment. So that character is the quintescence of biography; so that anybody who knows my character—and there is no keeping character under cover—knows what for forty or more years I have been doing and been thinking. Character is, for the most part, simply habit become fixed. —Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst.

Where We Meet Jesus.

In various places and on many occasions does Jesus pledge us to meet Him in this life at the cross, in the sacrament, in the crises of joy and sorrow—and now once again He appoints us a meeting place. It is in the Valley of the Shadow, where, in the quietness and seclusion as in a lover's glade. He will expect us one day. Is there any spot on earth so common or so wild that it has not been transformed by love? Are there any places in our thought so beautiful as those where we kept tryst with those that were dearer than life? So Jesus put a fair face on death, so that it becometh but His dark dream as He returneth to receive us home.—Ian Maclaren (Dr. John Watson.)

Private Morals in the Public Service.

The way to purify the public service is to improve the private morals of men. The time and place to begin is in childhood. Let the home and the school be kept pure; and from these pure fountains will come forth pure streams. They may become defiled and unwholesome in spite of their origin, but they are not likely so to do. Water will become pure unless polluted by that with which it comes in contact. As a rule, when a child is trained up in the way he should go, he will not depart from it when he comes to maturity. But at the same time that child is safer not to come in contact with evil companionships. The greatest care should be taken to protect him from contaminating influences. Even those who have been vaccinated had better not expose themselves to smallpox. "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."—The Christian Instructor.

Ludwigshafen. Die pfälzische Handels- und Gewerbekammer befaßte sich mit der Errichtung kaufmännischer Fachschulen, für die in Bayern bis jetzt vom Staate gar nichts geschehen ist. Es wurde ein Beschluß dahin gefaßt, daß die Errichtung kaufmännischer Fortbildungsschulen durch die Städte mit Besuchszwang in Tagesstunden und unter staatlicher Aufsicht für die Ausbildung der Lehrlinge unbedingt anzustreben sei. Ferner hielt die Kammer es für wünschenswerth, daß ein weiteres Volksschuljahr behufs größerer Vertiefung der Schulkenntnisse eingeführt und die Sonntagsschule abgeschafft wird.

Ellwangen. Josef Rumpf, Buchbinder aus Eichstätt, stand vor dem hiesigen Schwurgericht, angeklagt des Mordes. Er soll die Ehefrau des Forstwarts Ring von Mergelstetten im Walde bei Heidenheim ermordet haben. Der Angeklagte leugnete Alles ab. Wegen Zopfabschneiderei in München und Regensburg und anderer Vergehen war er schon zu längerer Gefängnißstrafe verurtheilt; 30 Zeugen waren zur Verhandlung geladen. Die Geschworenen verneinten die Schuldfrage und der Angeklagte wurde freigesprochen.

Friedrichshafen. Der alljährliche Massenfang einer der besten Bodenseefische, der Blaufelchen, ist dieser Tage beendet worden. Diese Fische sammeln sich in der Laichzeit (Ende November bis Mitte Dezember) vorzugsweise gern im Obersee in der Höhe von Langenargen bis Kreßbronn, wo sie dann mit Schwebnetzen gefangen werden. Die hiesige Großfischhandlung, welche mit den meisten Fischern von hier und Umgebung einen Vertrag über die gesammte Fischlieferung abgeschlossen hat, erhielt in der Zeit vom 12. bis 18. Dezember mehr als 18,000 Blaufelchen geliefert, eine Zahl, welche bisher noch nie erreicht wurde. Man schreibt dieses günstige Ergebniß hauptsächlich dem Umstande zu, daß seit ein paar Jahren die Fischer gesetzlich verpflichtet sind, den den Blaufelchen entnommenen Laich abzuliefern, welcher sodann in besondere eingerichteten Brutanstalten hier ausgebrütet und wieder in den See eingesetzt wird. Auf diese rationelle Weise vermehrt sich der Fischreichthum des Bodensees von Jahr zu Jahr.

Ulm. Die bürgerlichen Kollegien faßten kürzlich folgenden Beschluß: Um das charakteristische Straßenbild der innern Altstadt in mittelalterlichem Stil zu erhalten, sollen ortsbaustatutarische Vorschriften gegen die Verunstaltung der Straßenansicht und des Stadtbildes überhaupt erlassen werden, wonach Bauten, die das alterthümliche Straßenbild stören würden, nicht zugelassen werden sollen. Zu diesem Zweck soll sich das Stadtbauamt mit mittelalterlich gebauten Städten, zum Beispiel den alten Reichsstädten Württembergs, in Verbindung setzen.

Baden.

CHAPTER V.

The Pension Picaud, with its stale, bouillon scented corridors, narrow and dark, its musty salon, its slippery parquet floors and ornaments under glass, its tiny piano rented by the month at 10 francs and its bedrooms whose windows overlooked dingy courts black as Erebus, roofed, among its other boarders, three maiden ladies who were known to their long suffering if merciless fellow boarders as "the World, the Flesh and the Devil."

Six years before the Misses Bigbee had come to Paris from Bangor, Me., and had elected to throw in their prejudice with the hard lines of their compatriots who frequent foreign shores for culture and learning and neglect personal adornment, home ordinances and individual dignity in the process, for between lights they lend their tongues to the discussion of unworthy littleness concerning their neighbors' affairs, thus exemplifying unconsciously that strange anomaly, so often met with in foreign pensions, of the weary physical degeneration rather than amelioration under an unwisely administered treatment of art too strenuously absorbed, plus economy of congenial company too sternly ignored.

Sophronia Bigbee was called the World. She was a busy, perpetually occupied little spinster, who knew to a dot every omnibus line in Paris, concerning which she never hesitated exhaustively to enlighten newcomers, willing or unwilling. She had also mastered the difficult if insignificant questions of when and how to administer fees, what to see and how to see it. She spent her evenings, after having poured out a record of the day's doings at table, recounting them to the boarders, who frequented the dingy salon in order to economize in light and fire in their own bedrooms, scouring the newspapers for the free exhibitions to be opened to the public the following day, and usually retired early, so as to rise with the lark for the forthcoming campaign.

Miss Catherine Bigbee, whose pseudonym was the Flesh, was a superlatively corpulent personage, carrying a gentle dignity in the wag of her good natured head, which head was surmounted by a frontispiece which, its owner fondly believed, so closely resembled nature's hirsute adornment that nobody suspected its counterfeit presentment's undeniable infidelity to any hair in color or texture ever fashioned before or since, happily, on land or sea. Her pale eyes were placid and furtive. Her plump hands were invariably folded over that portion of her anatomy which was presumed to contain her digestive organs. Her tongue was a mild echo of her more active sister's peregrinations—a course of things which never failed to annoy Miss Sophronia to a very perceptible extent. Miss Sophronia and Miss Catherine, however, were tolerably good friends, whereas the third sister, well named the Devil, was their proclaimed backbiter and enemy, to the intense amusement of every member of the pension and the devil's own unmitigated satisfaction.

Miss Penelope Bigbee, in Bangor, Me., some 30 years before, had been known as "the beautiful Miss Bigbee." Then tall and slender, she was now skinny and spare. Then fine featured and delicate, she was now the epitome of a knife blade ancestry as to physiognomy. Her countenance, too, was impregnated with a contemptuous sneer, which, in her palmy days, had been designated as carrying the indelible impress of the Bigbee pride.

Today all that remained of that aforesaid pride was a pitiful record of incarnate spitefulness, which never lost an opportunity to flash forth from Miss Penelope's lips at the smallest provocation, cutting like a two edged sword both ways as it marched on its triumphant way. She had a large following of persons who had not the courage of their convictions, but who took every auspicious occasion to rejoice openly in a person who had the courage of theirs and her own. They regarded Miss Penelope's utterances as proof of rare strength of character in telling the truth, of undeniable perspicacity in rooting out and exposing fraud, and they laughed shrilly over her so called witticisms, which, had her followers been wise enough to discern it, were very inadequate attempts at that sort of accomplishment indeed.

Mme. Picaud was the widow of a diplomat. At least so she advertised herself in the newspapers in the columns which were most likely to fall under the eyes of gullible foreigners in search of a French family which combined with the comforts of home the discomforts of a foreign language radically administered in allopathic doses at the hours of breakfast and dinner.

Mme. Picaud wisely refrained from mentioning in what her defunct partner had been diplomatic, but nobody ever dared to doubt that M. Picaud had once existed in that capacity if only from the marvelous talent his widow displayed in her emulative policy. Having made his mark, he had gone out, leaving his widow to languish under the shadow of his greatness, her sole visible inheritance the aforesaid diplomacy.

The butcher could have told of it, but he did not. The baker might have done so, but being wise in his generation he refrained. Once a recalcitrant foreigner, struggling frantically with a strange tongue, was caught gossiping, whereupon Mme. Picaud swooped down upon him—this was whispered in the pension with bated breath—like a vulture upon carrion and bore him off to the juge de paix, who "forced the wretched creature to pay 200 francs, my dear, for his impudence and go without his trunks"—until Mme. Picaud had handed them over silently after a pertinent visit from the American vice consul.

This goes to show that it was pretty generally considered safer to bear with Mme. Picaud's diplomacy. It consisted of meager fires for mellow prices, bad wine for good money, inferior candles in return for honest gold, meat which was evidently as fresh as paint as well as tougher than sole leather, and vegetables which had long ago seen their best days.

Perhaps, therefore, the little pension was more to be pitied than blamed for having deteriorated into a gossip caldron instead of a mere innocent lodging for man and beast, a scandal bureau instead of a registry office.

Thursday night was ball night. That evening the pension rejected its dingy weekday curtains, to replace them with stiffly starched epitomes of the washerwoman's art; a frotteur came in shirt sleeves and felt slippers to polish the freshly waxed parquet floors, one of the boarders played the role of the visiting pianist who hammered out a mixture of waltzes and polkas according to orders, in return for innumerable cups of weak tea saturated with feebler rum and brioches made of last week's butter, and all went merry as a marriage bell with the gold left out.

Constance Brilla in a faded ball dress, with her dazzling neck and arms revealed, her soft hair knotted low in her neck and her pathetic eyes eagerly watching the door, brightened up as the little party from the Avenue Montaigne made its way into the room.

Priscilla was radiant in a white satin gown embroidered with pompadour flowers, a blue velvet knot in her sunny, burnished hair and a vivid smile flashing forth from her eager eyes and nestling in the dimples about her moist, half parted lips.

Aunt Mildred was resplendent in black velvet, with a magnificent diamond crescent holding a jabot of priceless lace at her full, handsome throat, and a huge bunch of violets which had arrived that afternoon from no less a person than Stornmouth, who with it informed her on his card that he was in town, had run over for a short stay and was stopping at the Bristol. "Mr. Stornmouth. How charming!" cried Aunt Mildred, to which perfectly natural exclamation Priscilla, flushing vividly, had vouchsafed no response.

So, leaving a message with her valet de chambre that if Mr. Stornmouth called that evening he would find them at the little pension in the Rue Lincoln, Aunt Mildred, without making Priscilla aware of this peremptory blow at that willful niece's outspoken intention to "see as little as possible of that disagreeable Mr. Stornmouth," had come away with a subdued smile in her eyes and a puzzled wonder in her soul.

Of late Priscilla had worried her not a little. From a simple little bundle of New York girlhood, charged with sparkling quips and pranks of harmless coquetry, she had suddenly developed into a cool and dignified young woman, with the impress of a great resolve in her countenance and the silence which was said to be golden—a silence which Aunt Mildred denoted as "of lead" as regarded her niece's personal convictions—on her lips. Priscilla wrote long letters to her mother, whose answers Aunt Mildred was not permitted to peruse. She spent hours reading French stories about imperialistic Paris, the doings of royalty and chateau life, to Aunt Mildred's unmitigated and outspoken despair, "since," as she piteously avowed, she "did not know French, never would, and for all she could tell to the contrary Priscilla might be absorbing fire and brimstone without her knowledge."

"Not many men, are there?" remarked Priscilla.

"Not many men, are there?" remarked Priscilla, looking around brightly. This was her first ball at a pension. She wondered how Constance could bear the contact with all these miserable looking persons in perceptibly made over toilets and look so happy in the process.

"M. Desmoulins is coming," whispered Constance.

Aunt Mildred had been ushered across the room by Mme. Picaud, who was obviously aware that it was not often her portion to receive so perceptibly prosperous a personage, in consequence of which poor Miss Mildred was seated next and presented, without as much as "by your leave," to the World, the Flesh and the Devil, to those Three Graces' extreme discomfiture and Mme. Picaud's intense satisfaction, for only that afternoon it had been reported to Mme. Picaud that they had been laughing over her inability to obtain any boarders except their august selves who "in the slightest degree represented American aristocracy."

"Who is M. Desmoulins?" asked Priscilla, wondering indifferently why a little blond Irishman near her was gazing at her so persistently.

"M. Desmoulins is a very good friend of mine," explained Constance. "He is a journalist. I am obliged to make friends with all the journalists, because if I ever make a debut here they could do a great deal for me."

Priscilla smiled dreamily. "What a bore all that is!" she remarked. "I never knew one was obliged to make up to a lot of low people like that to get on. I thought it was just a walk over and that foreigners recognized real talent and were only too delighted to get it."

Constance did not answer her. Her eyes were fixed upon the door. "There they are!" she said breathlessly.

"Who?"

"M. Desmoulins and the Count Baradat de Lacaze."

"Which is the count?" asked Priscilla. "The big man with the dark eyes and fine figure and thick red lips or the little old one with the bent shoulders and the ugly face? Ugh! What a horrid face! It is like a bird of prey!"

"His face is not handsome," said Constance, "but M. Desmoulins wrote me this afternoon in a little note he sent me asking if he might bring him; that his friend De Lacaze 'belongs to one of the oldest families in France and is a real nobleman.'"

Priscilla drew a long breath.

"Go and seat yourself by your aunt, quick," said Constance, "and I will bring them both over and introduce them."

"Introduce them here."

"Oh, no," objected Constance in quite a shocked voice. "It would not do at all. In France a girl must always be seated by her chaperon. When a man dances with a girl, he returns her to her chaperon just as soon as he has finished."

"What a bore!" said Priscilla. "Fancy any such nonsense in our dear old America," and then she burst out laughing. The laugh was so fresh and full, it held so rich a suggestion of real fun, and Priscilla looked so bewitchingly pretty giving vent to it, her stately head thrown back a little, showing all her lovely, pearly teeth, her hand raised to adjust a flower which nestled in the coils of her hair, that the Count de Lacaze, who was not far from her, pricked up his ears suddenly and cast a swift, piercing glance in her direction.

"Is that she?" he whispered to Desmoulins. "Sapristi! You were right. She is a beauty. Present me."

Desmoulins smiled quietly. "Make it 50,000 francs, and I will do it," he said.

There had been a stormy interview that afternoon in the little room at the left of the Figaro office. The Count de Lacaze had exhibited a stubbornness his managers had not expected from him in the drawing up of the agreement. He had absolutely declined adding his signature to any paper which would hold him responsible for a larger sum than 20,000 francs were the transaction his tempters proposed carried out to his satisfaction. He had totally denied the duke's right to demand his dues until his—De Lacaze's—fish was landed.

Desmoulins had finally appeared to acquiesce that half a loaf was better than none and had accepted the decree, viciously determining to get the best of this wily adversary did that personage nibble a bigger bait than Desmoulins had bargained for.

"Twenty," scowled De Lacaze, with a ferocious expression. "Present me or I will present myself."

"Priscilla," said Constance, "allow me to introduce my friend M. Charles Desmoulins of the Eclair and his friend the Count Baradat de Lacaze."

Priscilla bowed. Aunt Mildred had already gone through the introduction and withdrawn with flying colors, with the assistance of Constance, from the painful experience of exchanging compliments with a Frenchman who spoke the vilest English imaginable, but who politely pretended to make up for deficiencies by a knowing smile which his new acquaintance designated afterward as "perfectly detestable."

"Mademoiselle will dance?" said the count to Priscilla in French.

"With pleasure."

And then that unwise young woman was swept into the vortex of lilting figures, mercilessly pirouetting in what they fondly imagined to be the measures of the waltz, instead of which it was a whirl in one spot, with no reversing, which is considered bad form in France. An arm like an iron vise around her yielding waist, and an olive skinned, horrid little countenance, lighted by strangely congested orbs which seemed to be devouring her inch by inch, burned out of Priscilla any natural power of enjoyment and rendered her very miserable instead.

"Oh, stop!" cried Priscilla.

"Why, mademoiselle?"

"You go so fast, and it is all so funny, and I am so dizzy."

"That will soon vanish, mademoiselle."

"Let me go," said Priscilla in a strange, breathless voice. "I wish to stop. Let me go."

The count stopped violently, nearly losing his equilibrium in the process. Puffing stertorously, he leaned up against the back of a sofa and mopped his face.

Priscilla was crimson. Her eyes were full of tears.

"Shall I take mademoiselle to her aunt?"

"If you please."

They found the way back in stern silence through the whirling couples to her seat.

"Mademoiselle is as beautiful as an angel," whispered the count in Priscilla's ear as he seated her. Then, with a bland smile, he withdrew.

"What's the matter?" asked Aunt Mildred.

"Nothing," returned Priscilla defiantly.

"Yes, there is," said Aunt Mildred. "Don't attempt to deny it. You look perfectly furious over something. Did that horrible little man say anything disagreeable?"

"Well, no, not exactly," answered Priscilla dubiously. She was still trembling a trifle, and her fists were clinched.

"What did he say, child? I insist upon knowing."

"He told me," said Priscilla, her eyes beginning to fill again, "that I was as beautiful as an angel."

Aunt Mildred burst out laughing. "You are a perfect child, Priscilla," she said when she could speak.

"It was the way he said it," argued Priscilla indignantly. "If any other man had told me I was as beautiful as —that, I should have been glad, very glad indeed. But the way he said it, and the way he looked when he said it —ugh!"

"How did he look?"

"He reminded me," said Priscilla, with a scornful uplift of her curved childish upper lip, which was supremely characteristic, "he reminded me of a snake I once saw when I went quail shooting with dad down on Long Island. He put his head out between the bushes as we passed and hissed at me. Dad drew his gun and shot his head off on the spot."

Then, quietly, with intense resolve, she murmured these memorable words, which started over the ocean two days later, indited by Aunt Mildred with intense delight, to be read a week afterward with great gusto by a doting paterfamilias to his wife:

"I wish I had a gun."

Praying Bicycles for Buddhists.

To so great an extent have the Japanese adopted European methods and models that an enterprising Buddhist has adopted the bicycle to serve the needs of the praying wheel as used by the followers of his creed. Instead of attaching the written prayer to the customary wheel which is generally turned by a convenient stream of running water, the new vogue is to fix the prayer to the hub of the bicycle wheel, so that the faster the rider can pedal the better he can pray. Although there appears to be a spice of sacrilege in the practice, it is apparently catching on, for rumor has it that American firms are already preparing machines with Buddhist collects embossed on the tires, so that the bicycle will become an instrument of pleasure and a prayer book combined.—St. James Gazette.

Culture in Arkansaw.

One cannot be surprised at the slow progress of education in certain parts of Arkansas, where a visitor to that State recently heard a rural school teacher say to his pupils:

"Come, come, young uns, can't you set up a little more erecter?"

And when a tardy pupil came in and left the door slightly ajar, the teacher said sharply:

"You go back and shove thet there door shet," after which he said apologetically to the visitors:

"I try to learn 'em manners, but it's durned uphill work."—Harper's Bazar.

Silk Worm as a Help to Marry.

It appears that in Japan one factor entering into the problem of the choice of a daughter-in-law is her skill in raising silk worms. The thread spun by the silk worm is said to be regular and even in proportion, as the worm has been regularly and carefully fed. The prospective mother-in-law carefully and minutely examines the evenness of the silk thread in the matrial of the garments worn by the young lady before giving her assent to the betrothal.

HIS BETTER SEVEN-EIGHTES.

A Kentucky Editor's Leading Article on His Wife's Merits.

Many of my friends have asked me, and a few strangers had the curiosity to write and inquire, "Why is it that you always speak of your wife as your better ⅞?" In this brief article I will endeavor to explain, and I use the personal pronoun that the readers of the Herald will the better understand me. In Christian fortitude she is as a fortress capable of withstanding any fusillade; I but a rifle pit with many unguarded gaps in comparison. Her faith is that of a healthy tree in full foliage and fruit; mine like a tree blasted, with an occasional sprout that lends hope of fruition, but so frail that the first cold wave of despondency deadens and withers it. As a neighbor she embodies those qualities expressed in the words of the Master: "Do unto others as you would that they should do to you;" I am content to do by him as well as he has done by me, and too frequently fall short of the standard. As nurse she is a Sister of Charity reared in the Garden of Gethesemane or in a nunnery of Nazareth, shedding sweet sunshine through the sick room; I both impatient and irascible. Endowed with almost superhuman energy, she is a living type of the busy bee; I, not so enriched, am too frequently a drone of disappointment. The day is never so dark but the bright light beyond beckons her on as a beacon of hope; despondency darkens my vision and obscures from view anything favorable the future might show. Thus in all the nobler attributes of life she towers above me as the forest pine above the stunted fig bush. During a continuous companionship of over twenty-two years I have been sensible to these superior qualities, and I have been always honest enough to say so. She combines characteristics quintuple in quality, and in her affections assumes the place of mother, sister, friend. All in all, she is the apple of my eye, my best beloved in whom I am well pleased. Such is my wife as I see her and have known her all these years. She condones my faults, finds excuses for my errors, sympathizes with me in sorrow, and strengthens me in adversity. Hence I say "our better seven-eights; such she will ever be to me.—Hazel Green Herald.

THE WOOD ALCOHOL INDUSTRY.

It Makes Beautiful Dye Tints and Is an Antiseptic.

It is not generally known that over 60 per cent of wood may be converted into liquid. A cord of wood weighing 4,000 pounds produces about 2,650 pounds of pyroligenous acid and 700 pounds of charcoal. The pyroligenous acid from one cord of wood produces nine gallons of 82 per cent crude wood alcohol, 200 pounds of acetate of lime and about 25 gallons of tar, besides about 35 bushels of charcoal.

After the pyroligenous acid is neutralized with lime, the wood alcohol is distilled off, the lime holding the acetic acid in solution. After the separation of the wood spirit, the remaining liquid is boiled down in open pans to a sugar, which is dried, and becomes the acetate of lime of commerce. Acetate of lime is used for making acetic acid. Fully three-fifths of all the wood alcohol and acetate of lime produced in the world are made in the United States. Fully 15,000 acres per year are cleared for this purpose. Wood alcohol affords a perfect substitute for grain alcohol for manufacturing and mechanical purposes, and at less than one-third the cost. It is used principally as a solvent in the making of shellac varnish; in making celluloid, photographic paper, etc. It makes many beautiful dye tints. It is antispeptic, and much used for liniments and for skin rubbing in bath houses.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Shoes and Handkerchiefs.

A lady is said to be shown by these two accessories of her toilet, and few people realize how much the styles in both vary.

The heavily embroidered handkerchief is quite unknown at present, however handsome it may be, and only the faintest touch of work is permissible, unless it be in a monogram, which is preferably simple. The handkerchief oftenest seen is of the sheerest linen cambric, a plain simple square, or bordered with real Valenciennes lace in a very narrow edge.

The spring shoe is round of toe, the point having left us, except for evening slippers. These are almost invariably made of silk to match the gown worn, or are of plain black or white silk or satin. No leather shoe, except a patent leather—and that seldom—is ever worn within doors. The house is the place for silk shoes.

Tan shoes are as popular as ever, and they are made strongly and substantially for walking, with thick soles and round toes. The smart woman will not try to make a pretty, dressy shoe of her tan boot. It is incongruous. When she needs a pretty shoe, the patent leather is at her hand—or foot.

The Parks go to Cranford tonight to play another game in the series.

Pope, of Elizabeth, now leads in the list of highest average scores in the Central Journal Bowling League. Hibbard, of the Parks, who was third, has tumbled way down the list and Captain F. O. Ball is now the highest of the Parks. He is eights but is slowly creeping up.

The Park Club bowling team will go to Cranford this evening to roll three postponed games with the Cranford Casino team. Cranford now holds the unenviable position of "tail-enders" in the league and the Parks are hoping to get three or at least two of the games to give them a more secure hold on second place in the Central Journal League.

Clarence Roome, one of the junior members of the Park Club, has been doing some phenomenal rolling on the club alleys. Two days last week he rolled ten games. Five of them had a score of over 200. Two were 231. His average for the ten games was slightly better than 202. He is now tie with F. O. Ball, captain of the bowling team, for the greatest number of 200 scores during the month, each having rolled five. Roome leads in the contest for the highest score in the month with his 231. He is a younger brother of W. J. Boome, Jr., who has been doing some great rolling at the club this winter, and has had the honor of taking part in a championship game.

BASKET BALL.

The basket ball game in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium this evening is called for 8:30 o'clock. Owing to the new arrangement by the Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A., the visitors gallery will only accommodate eighty people. No one will be allowed to stand there. The remainder of the visitors can stand behind the screen at the entrance or in the vacant space on the main floor.

Manager George Fuller, of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. basket ball team has announced the following schedule for the next two months. There will be several additions later: Friday, January 27th, Plainfield at Summit Y. M. C. A.; Monday, January 30th, Olympics, of Brooklyn, at Plainfield; Friday, February 3d, Plainfield at Hasbrook Heights Field Club; Saturday, February 18th, Plainfield with Olympics at Brooklyn; Monday, February 20th, Hasbrook Heights F. C., at Plainfield; Wednesday, March 1st, Plainfield at New York Institute.

One of the best basket ball games of the season will be witnessed in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium tonight when the local association team meets the "Rubber Five" from the Greenpoint Y. M. C. A., of Brooklyn. The "Rubber Five" have gained the reputation by their excellent playing of being one of the strongest teams in the metropolitan district. The Plainfield boys are playing in fine form now and are much improved since they last met the Greenpoint team. While Plainfield may not win, she is sure to give the visitors a strong fight for victory, and the audience that witnesses the game will see a stirring contest.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver, of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongued coated, pain continually in the back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters;' and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50cts., guaranteed, at L. W. Randolph's Drug Store.

A DELICATE COMPLIMENT.

Among the musical reminiscences of Max Muller, as printed in Cosmopolis, is a good one about Mendelssohn and Liszt. The incident occurred during Liszt's first visit to Germany. His style of playing was then somewhat new, and he was, as he remained, theatrical in his manner. The Leipsic critics were not effusive. Says Max Muller:

Mendelssohn only, with his well-tempered heart, received him with open arms. He gave a matinee musicale at his house, all the best known musicians of the place being present. Well, Liszt appeared in his Hungarian costume, wild and magnificent.

He told Mendelssohn that he had written something special for him. He sat down, and swaying right and left on his music stool played first a Hungarian melody, and then three or four variations, one more incredible than the other. We stood amazed, and after everybody had paid his compliments to the hero of the day some of Mendelssohn's friends gathered round him and said:

"Ah, Felix, now we can pack! No one can do that. It is over with us."

Mendelssohn smiled, and when Liszt came up to him, asking him to play something, he laughed and said that he never played now, and this, to a certain extent was true. He did not give much time to practicing then, but worked chiefly at composing and directing his concerts. However, Liszt would take no refusal, and so at last little Mendelssohn, with his own charming playfulness, said,—

"Well, I'll play. But you must promise me not to be angry."

And what did he play? He sat down and played first of all Liszt's Hungarian melody, and then one variation after another, so that no one but Liszt himself could have told the difference. We all trembled lest Liszt should be offended, for Mendelssohn could not keep himself from immitating Liszt's movements and raptures. However, Mendelssohn managed never to offend man, woman or child.

Liszt laughed and applauded, and admittted that no one, not he himself, could have performed such a bravura.

IRVING TO BARRETT.

A Remark, Showing the Former's Fine Humorous and Critical Sense.

It is reported that shortly after Henry Irving returned to England from his last American tour he met Wilson Barrett. The latter, who always bore considerable resemblance to a turkey, was more ruffled up than usual by the financial success of his scriptural dramas.

At one point in the conversation Irving, using his well known elocution, said:

"Well, Wilson, and what are you going to give us now?"

"I have 'The Sign of the Cross' and 'The Daughters of Babylon,' and 'Hamlet,'" said Barrett in his most sepulchral voice.

"Ah, ha! and so you are going to play Hamlet," returned Irving.

"Yes," said Barrett; "do you think you are the only man who can play Hamlet?"

"No—ah—but I think—ah—that you are the only man who cannot play Hamlet."—New York Journal.

A GREAT VICTORY AT BASKET BALL.

Plainfield Y. M. C. A. Defeated Greenpoint Y. M. C. A.

THE FAMOUS RUBBER FIVE.

BY MAGNIFICENT TEAM WORK AND ACCURACY THE GAME WAS WON.

Plainfield Defeated One of the Best Teams of This Section by a Score of 20 to 16—A Closely Played Game Throughout—Visitors Braced Up in Second Half and Began to Gain—Lead Too Much for Them.

Plainfield's basket ball experts scored their greatest victory of the season last evening by defeating the famous "Rubber Five," of the Greenpoint Y. M. C. A., in a closely played game. Plainfield won by a score of 20 to 16. The game was played in the gymnasium of the local association, and was witnessed by an enthusiastic audience numbering about 100.

The "Rubber Five" has made a great reputation for itself in the metropolitan district by its fine team play and general lively work. The team is considered one of the best in the district, and divides the honors of Brooklyn with the team from the Eastern District. The victory of the Plainfield team, after so many repeated trials, is all the more prized.

There wasn't anything slow about the game. That was apparent at the very start. Plainfield had its strongest combination on the floor and the boys were at their best. Now the critics have said that all Plainfield lacked to make it a winning team was accurate goal throwing. And they were right. In the first half Plainfield clearly outclassed the visitors in accuracy. It was nip and tuck at the start and then there came three goals for Plainfield in rapid succession. It was good, clean playing that won them and it continued through the first half.

Both sides played a hard snappy game but the home team showed up together better. Smith and Long did some wonderful blocking. Smith had a faculty of following the ball that counted well although it was a trifle rough. Eric Moraller played with a desperation that was remarkable and kept his opponent somewhat in awe with him.

The second half showed a relaxation in the pace of the Plainfield boys. They didn't keep together as well as before and the visitors began to get more openings for the goal. The score had stood 16 to 6 at the end of the first half. Greenpoint began to score. Ten points were rolled up before the half was over, while Plainfield made but four. The good playing of the first half gave too great a lead to overcome, and Plainfield won by a slim majority of four points. Had there been ten minutes more of play the result might have been different.

In the second half the "Rubber Five's" appeared in red jerseys instead of white as in the first half. The Plainfield boys had been wearing red, but they made a change on learning of the visitors' intention. It is one of the "Rubber Five's" favorite tricks to rattle their opponents by wearing the same colored jerseys.

It was altogether an excellent game and too much cannot be said in praise of the local players who so distinguished themselves. It wasn't a case of individual work, but the best kind of team work, combined with accuracy and quickness, and every member of the team is deserving of great credit.

The teams lined up as follows:

PLAINFIELD.		GREENPOINT.
Long	right forward	Bark
E. Moraller	left forward	Johnston
Egan	centre	Mackie
M. Moraller	right guard	McNiel

Score—Plainfield, 20; Greenpoint, 16. Goals from the field—Long (4), E. Moraller, Egan (2), M. Moraller, Smith (2), Bark (6), Johnston, Butterfass. Goals on fouls—None. Fouls—Plainfield, 1. Referee—C. E. A. Heywood, of Plainfield. Umpire—John Barker, of Brooklyn. Timekeepers—J. R. Doane and Philip Suffren. Scorer—L. I. VanAlstyne.

ELDER SUES A CHURCH.

BENJAMIN HAND SAYS FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST OWES HIM $70.

Case Brought up in Justice Mattison's Court—Church Will Fight the Claim, as They Say They Do Not Owe It.

Suit has been started in Justice Mattison's court by Benjamin Hand against the First Church of Christ. The amount involved is $70, the balance due on a note given by the trustees of the church to Mr. Hand July 18th, 1898.

The plaintiff in the case was formerly an elder in the church, and preached there regularly. The church got into financial difficulties, and Mr. Hand claims to have loaned the trustees about $90, $20 of which has been paid.

Counsellor Angleman represents Mr. Hand and instituted the suit which will be tried this afternoon. Counsellor S. S. Swackhamer represents the church. He says that the organization is willing to pay the debts if Mr. Hand will satisfy them that they owe it, and will give them an itemized account. They say that the note was given by the trustees for no consideration, and is therefore void. They also say that the note is one which the trustees are responsible for. The case will be tried before a jury.

FAST EXPRESS TRAIN CAME TO SUDDEN STOP.

DRIVING ROD ON ENGINE BROKE.

Accident Occurred Near Fanwood Last Night, But No One Was Hurt.

The New York express from Philadelphia, which leaves Plainfield every evening at 6:45 o'clock, narrowly escaped a disastrous wreck last evening on its run to New York. The train had reached Fanwood and was traveling at a high-rate of speed when the connecting rod to the drivers on the engineer's side broke, and the big driver was also wrecked. The accident resulted in much damage to the cab on the engineer's side, but fortunately no one was injured. The engineer quickly had the engine under control and the train was brought to a sudden stop. The passengers in the train were somewhat shocked, but the accident was handled so efficiently that it was some little time before they really knew what happened. The train was run on a side track and the passengers transferred to the train which leaves this city at 7:03.

It was two hours later when the disabled engine was removed and taken to the shops, where it will be repaired. The only cause assigned for the accident is that there must have been a flaw in the connecting rod, and in the breaking of this the damage to the big wheel resulted.

On the train were a number of Plainfielders who were on their way to Elizabeth to attend a meeting of the Order of Elks.

TWO MORE LEAVE THE HOSPITAL.

Victims of the Lehigh Disaster Are Gradually Improving.

Oliver Schaffer, of Easton, Pa., who was one of the injured victims of the Lehigh Valley Railroad wreck last week, was discharged cured yesterday from the hospital. Wm. Cheshire, of Bound Brook, fireman on the local train, who was also injured, was discharged today cured and he returned to his home. The remaining patients at the hospital are all improving and there seems to be no doubt but what they will all recover.

A Surprise Party.

A surprise party was given to Miss Evelyn D. Benton, of College place, Saturday evening by ten of her friends. The affair was arranged by Miss Bessie Randolph. The guests met at the home of Miss Jessie Little, of East Ninth street, and then went in a body to the home of Miss Benton.

THE CITY CLERKSHIP BONE OF CONTENTION.

Attempt Made in Council to Make a New Appointment.

CAUSED A BIG SURPRISE.

MR. LIEFKE THINKS THAT MR. MACMURRAY'S TERM HAS EXPIRED.

After a Lively Discussion the Matter Was Laid on the Table—Mr. Barrows Introduced an Ordinance to Provide for Surface Drainage in Business Centre of City—Macadamizing of New Streets.

When does the term of City Clerk MacMurray begin and when does it end? This is a question that seems to puzzle the members of the City Council. It was thought that this question was settled at the first meeting of the new Council, but when Mr. Liefke offered a motion at the adjourned meeting last evening that the Council go into nomination for a city clerk everyone looked in amazement at him. At first President Andrews declared the motion out of order on the ground that the opinion asked for and given by Corporation Counsel Marsh seemed to cover the point in question. Mr. Marsh's opinion was to the effect that the law which made the term expire last year was in his opinion unconstitutional, and the Council accepted the opinion without any voice on the matter.

Mr. Leifke's stand seemed to be well taken and in the main was agreed to by several of the members. He stated that he did not think that Mr. Marsh had any right to declare a law unconstitutional. It was for the Supreme Court to decide that matter.

Mr. Hetfield agreed with Mr. Leifke and also stated that Mr. Marsh could not legally declare a law unconstitutional and he did not think it was right for the Council to accept the opinion as final.

Mr. VanHerwerden said that inasmuch as the clerk's time expires this year, according to Mr. Marsh's opinion, he thought it would only complicate matters more if a clerk should be elected at this time.

President Andrews finally agreed to accept Mr. Leifke's motion, but Mr. Barrows offered a substitute which resulted in the matter being laid on the table until the next meeting.

The Council received a communication from the members of Alert Hose Company, in which they asked the city to purchase their hose wagon. Residents of Grant avenue and Fourth street asked to have a fire-alarm box located at the corner of the above streets.

A petition was received from W. C. O'Donnell, W. C. Dobbins and H. C. McVoy, a committee from John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., asking the Council to appoint a committee of three from the Council to co operate with the above-named committee for the purpose of securing for Plainfield the erection of a suitable soldier's monument. The Council voted unanimously to have such a committee appointed.

Mr. Coriell moved for the acceptance of the new engine house in the West End. Mr. Coriell stated that the fire and building committee together with the board of engineers and the building inspector, had thoroughly examined the new house and found it to be all right. The Council accepted the house unanimously.

Mr. Barrows introduced an ordinance to provide for the surface drainage of Park avenue, Front street and Somerset, and the ordinance was read for the information of the Council. Subsequently a resolution was offered which set Monday evening, February 6th, at 8 o'clock as the time when a public hearing will be given on the matter. Mr. Barrows stated for the information of the Council that the cost of the work could be merged into the sewer construction account and thus it would not appear as though the Council was issuing bonds for such a small amount as will be required to do the work.

Mr. Hetfield objected to the scheme and stated that he still felt as though it would be establishing a bad precedent. He asked to be excused from voting, but President Andrews called for his vote, and Mr. Hetfield voted in the negative as did also Mr. Leifke.

A very important step taken by the Council was that in regard to starting the work of macadamizing West Fourth street, between New street and Monroe avenue, and West Third street, between Madison and Monroe avenues, except in such places where the above named streets are already macadamized.

Mr. Barrows stated, by way of explanation, that the work would cost

GOVERNOR VOORHEES' INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

New Chief Executive Enunciates His Ideas of Government.

BRIEF AND TO THE POINT.

EXPRESSES A HIGH VIEW OF THE OFFICE HE HAS ASSUMED.

He Says That Except in a Few Notable Instances the Legislature Will Have to Deal With Matters Mainly Local in Character—Urges a Satisfactory Codification of Municipal Laws—Tribute to Soldiers.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, Jan. 17.—The following is the complete text of the inaugural message delivered this afternoon by Governor Voorhees:

Gentlemen of the Senate and General Assembly:

The duties of the office upon which I am about to enter are assumed with a deep sense of all that is implied in the words of the oath just taken. I shall strive to observe it both in letter and in spirit.

Although chosen through the favor of my fellow citizens as representing one of the great political parties of the state, I am not unmindful of the obligation to devote my services to the common good of all. I have no apology to offer for being a partisan. Under a republican form of government parties will of necessity arise. A people free to learn and free to think for themselves can only find in organization the instrument to enforce their wishes respecting government. Political parties are not to be considered as unmixed evils. Their existence is an evidence of active interest in public affairs. Their adherents are quick to assert their individual rights and to exact a full and faithful performance of every public duty. Through their agency the ends of government are best to be secured. But governments do not exist merely for the sake of parties. With public power comes the duty to exercise it for the public good. Viewed from a selfish standpoint, I believe that they best serve a party who in the conduct of their office pay heed to the interests of the greatest number. This duty is especially imposed upon the executive by the oath of office which he takes. In his acts he is not to seek partisan advantage only. He is to promote the peace and prosperity of the state and maintain its lawful rights. He is to see that its laws, civil and criminal, are enforced alike for all and against all. He is to secure equal protection to rich and to poor. Violators of the law are to be punished without distinction. He must demand honesty and economy and oblige public servants to render a faithful and efficient service. Personal prejudice or passionate partisanship has no place in the discharge of his duties. On the contrary, everything which will promote the honor, the happiness and the common welfare of the state is to be the object of his solicitude and care.

Such, in brief, are the views I entertain of the office which I now assume. At all times and under all circumstances I shall, to the best of my ability, act in accordance with these views, indulging the hope that to the commonwealth which I serve there may come no harm and that its happiness and prosperity may be advanced.

The limitation which custom has put upon an address of this character prevents me from making more than a brief reference to policies or measures which I think should especially engage legislative attention. As occasion may arise it will be my privilege to communicate to the legislature special recommendations upon those subjects which I may deem worthy of consideration.

It is fortunate for the interests of the state that there are no subjects of a purely partisan character likely to present themselves. Matters can be considered dispassionately and without party bias, and all can claim an equal share in the credit and responsibility for what may be done.

The reforms inaugurated within recent years have removed many subjects which formerly called for and received legislative action.

The policy, so recently begun, of managing our state institutions upon a non-partisan basis has during the short time of trial demonstrated the wisdom of those who favored it. It has received the emphatic approval of the public and cannot now be abandoned without injury to the public service. Legislative interference with local self government is contrary to the spirit of our institutions, and the fate of those who have offended in this regard in the past warns us against future violations of our duty. In these days, when independence of thought characterizes the average voter, when party allegiance is quickly shifted, when those who prefer good government to success of party can by their action affect the results of an election, higher considerations than those purely partisan must influence the lawmaker if he would win public confidence and favor for himself and those whom he represents.

Except in a few notable instances, the legislature will have to deal with matters mainly local in character and without political significance.

The recommendation of the distinguished governor who immediately preceded me—that legislative action should be restricted—has been wisely followed. It is known and observed by all that the volume of laws has notably decreased without prejudice to the interests of the general public. For the most part such measures only have been enacted as were demanded by some pressing and general necessity. The reform thus auspiciously begun in our own state and so urgently recommended in others has the approval of all, irrespective of party. I trust that

THE BOARD OF TRADE ELECT NEW OFFICERS

Eleven Out of Ninety-one Members Attend the Meeting.

MR. LOUNSBURY PRESIDENT

QUORUM WAS NOT PRESENT UNTIL AFTER 9 O'CLOCK.

Several Members Resigned From the Organization—E. M. French, Secretary of the Transportation Committee, Makes a Report on Trolley Extension—What the Board of Trade Has Done.

The annual meeting of the Board of Trade came near not being held after all last night because a quorum was not present until long after 9 o'clock. A few of the members met at 8 o'clock, then spent the balance of the evening waiting for the others. Out of the ninety-one members of the organization, eleven finally got together, and at 9:30 o'clock the meeting was called to order by James C. Pope, first vice-president, in the absence of the president, Fred C. Lounsbury.

One new member, E. D. Barrett, was elected, and the application of Oscar S. Rogers was referred to the committee on membership. Mazo Edwards, G. Q. Packer, Frank W. Runyon, E. V. French and B. A. Hegaman, Jr., sent in their resignations as members of the Board of Trade. All being members in good standing their resignations were accepted.

The election of officers for the new year followed. W. B. Codington, E. M. French and W. A. Woodruff were appointed judges, and H. C. Runyon and E. M. Laing inspectors of the election. For president Fred C. Lounsbury and Fred W. Dunn were nominated and balloted for. Mr. Lounsbury received the vote. James C. Pope was elected first vice-president; L. B. Woolston, second vice-president; Harry C. Runyon, secretary; and E. M. Laing, treasurer.

The terms of E. M. French, Charles Hand and W. A. Woodruff as trustees expired, and they were re-elected. L. B. Woolston, also a member of the board of trustees, was declared ineligible by the presiding officer on account of having been chosen to hold a higher office, so Horace Sherwin was elected to fill his place. W. B. Codington was re-elected counsel.

E. M. French, secretary of the committee on transportation, was called upon to give a report of their work in regard to the trolley to Scotch Plains. Although called upon unexpectedly, he gave a clear statement of what the committee had done towards getting the Common Council and the representatives of the street railway together to agree upon a franchise.

The secretary's report showed that the organization numbered 91 members. There were 84 charter members and 20 new members had been added during the year. Thirteen were lost through death or resignation, leaving a total number of 91 members on their roll.

Inclosing his report the secretary mentioned a number of things which the Board of Trade has done for this city during the past year. They succeeded in lowering insurance rates; secured storm sewers for Plainfield avenue and Richmond street, and a drain pipe for Clinton avenue; revised the building ordinance; got the stores to close early; fought the Martin Act; secured the trolley for Scotch Plains, and persuaded the Chichester Chair Company to locate here. Before adjourning a vote of thanks was extended to The Daily Press and the News for leaving free copies of their papers at the rooms each day.

Found Unconscious in a Ditch.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, Jan. 17—The motorman of the first car on the Bound Brook line this yesterday discovered a poorly dressed man lying in a ditch near the landing causeway. The conductor of the car sent a telephone message to the local police and Detective McCann was sent out with the ambulance to pick the body up. It was found that the man was alive, but insensible. He was taken to the Wells Memorial Hospital, where he is still unconscious. He is apparently about thirty years of age. It is feared he will die.

Want a Crosswalk.

The residents of Codington avenue, while not of a complaining nature, would like to have a crosswalk laid across their avenue at the corner of Somerset street. The people on that avenue all pay their taxes and they feel as though they deserve a walk.

POLICE RAIDED A FLAT.

THREE DISORDERLY CHARACTERS WERE ARRESTED THERE.

One Man Escaped—The Women Were Sentenced by Judge Runyon to Pay a Fine of $50 and go to Jail Fifty Days.

Last night the police raided a disorderly establishment in the Manning flats, West Front street. Two young women and one man were arrested. Another man made his escape when the police entered the place. This morning the three offenders were sent to the county jail by City Judge Runyon.

The offenders were the same ones who were driven out of the borough two weeks ago by the persuasive powers of Mayor Wilson. They then came across the brook. The rooms were rented by Miss Susan Stephenson and her married sister. Their father boards at a local hostelry. A week ago Sergeant Kiely, now acting-chief, warned Miss Stephenson that they must leave the city as well as the borough. They refused and the raid followed.

Roundsman Frederickson and Patrolman Totten entered the Manning building last night at midnight. They gained entrance to the Stephenson apartments at the exit of a man. He escaped. Miss Susan Stevenson, Miss Annie Nelson and E. F. Titus were arrested. Titus was formerly a resident of the borough where he conducted a bakery. He has lately been employed at Wilmington, Del., and was home on a visit.

The prisoners were arraigned before City Judge Runyon this morning charged with being disorderly. They pleaded guilty. Titus was visibly affected. Miss Stephenson wept throughout the trial, while her companion glanced diffantly about the court room. The Judge sentenced the women to pay a fine of $50 and go to jail for fifty days. Titus was sentenced to pay a $50 fine, which he did.

FAKE RUMOR THAT WILL DARLING IS ARRESTED.

ECHO OF A COLD-BLOODED MURDER.

Report That the Murderer Has Been Caught in the West Lacks Verification.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, January 17.—A report has been current for more than a week that William Darling, of Plainfield, the murderer of Henry Dunham, who was killed at New Market about three years ago, had been captured in Nevada or California. Prosecutor Voorhees, however, when seen said he had not received any information to that effect and thought the report was groundless. Detective Oliver, who was at work on the case, was of the same opinion.

Briefly the circumstances of the murder, which was a cold-blooded one, are these: Henry Dunham, whose home was in Hornelsville, N. Y., while visiting friends at New Market, in August, 1895, became acquainted with Darling. They got into a quarrel while playing pool at Dentz's hotel, which ended in Darling drawing a revolver and shooting Dunham through the heart. Darling returned to his home and rode on his wheel to South Plainfield where he boarded a train and made his escape. The wheel was found a South Plainfield pond.

The authorities were on his track for some time and at one time thought they had him. He, however, succeeded in escaping.

MRS. BRADSHAW'S FUNERAL.

Large Number Attended the Obsequies Yesterday Afternoon.

The funeral services of Mrs. Sarah Bradshaw took place yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the residence of her son-in-law, A. L. Force, 82 Duer street. The house was filled with friends and relatives who sought to thus show their respect to the memory of the deceased, who appeared, as she lay in her casket, as in a natural sleep, so life like was her countenance.

Rev. Dr. Schenck, her pastor, conducted the services and selected the beautiful text of the Psalmist, (127 2) "So He Giveth His Beloved Sleep," as the foundation for his remarks touching her life and death. The tender and comforting words he spoke were very gratifying to all and helped to heal the aching hearts of relatives and friends.

The floral display was modest, but very beautiful, consisting of a wreath of green studded with English violets, lying on crossed palms, tied together with purple ribbon. A beautiful bunch of pinks, veriagated colors, was sent by a neighbor, and a large bouquet of roses and pinks from Brooklyn relatives also lay on the casket.

Interment was made in the North Plainfield cemetery, the following friends and neighbors acting as pall-bearers: L. E. Barkalew, Daniel VanWinkle, A. J. Leader, T. O. Doane, W. H. Shotwell and J. P. Laire.

VOORHEES IS MADE JERSEY'S GOVERNOR.

Great Times at the Inauguration Today.

BIG CROWD AT TRENTON.

PRESIDENT REED OF THE SENATE PRESIDED AT OPERA HOUSE.

Plainfield Had a Big Representation in Trenton—Many Politicians There—Will Kline, Doorkeeper, Was Admired—Senator Reed Had a Word—Enthusiastic Reception to Governor.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Trenton, January 17.—The trainload of enthusiastic Union county Republicans arrived here this morning, just in time to hurry to Taylor's Opera House for the first scene of the inauguration ceremonies. The city is thronged with politicians from all over the State and everybody looks happy. The Trenton House has been the headquarters for the visitors but many have been at the capitol where the Assemblymen and Senators have had their hands full looking after their constituents who have come here to see the fun and incidentally to make plans and pull wires.

Senator Charles A. Reed, of North Plainfield, the new President of the Senate, is a busy man, indeed, and received a whole army of visitors during the morning hours preceding the opening of the Legislature. He didn't fail, however, to have a kindly word for all his friends and neighbors.

Roger F. Murray, Plainfield's Assemblyman, was running about, buttonholing and being buttonholed.

Will Kline, now the smiling doorkeeper of the Assembly Chamber, is a hero in the eyes of his friends and backers about the city. There was a host of other Plainfielders here, but they are so scattered about the city that it is almost impossible to give any estimate as to their numbers. Among those who have been noticed by the writer during the morning are Postmaster E. H. Bird, City Judge Wm. N. Runyon, Councilman J. F. Buckle, City Clerk J. T. MacMurray, Commissioner of Appeals J. B. Coward, Former Street Commissioner Robert A. Meeker, Surrogate Newton Spencer, Former Councilman P. A. Emmons, Former Freeholder Andrew Lutkins, Former Councilman W. A. Westphal, Freeholder J. Frank Hubbard, A. B. Beers, School Trustee J. B. Probasco, C. E. A. Heywood, L. I. VanAlstyne, Daniel Galbraith, W. W. Ocriell, Geo. W. Moore, Martin Lance, James Morrison, George J. Tobin, Justice J. E. Mosher, J. H. Tier, Jr., Thomas Doud, D. W. Littell, J. O. Pope, Garret Dunham and many more whose names were not familiar.

At 11:30 o'clock the Legislature convened at the State House and, after roll-call, the members were taken to Taylor's Opera House, where seats were provided for them and the guests, including the State officers and judiciary, on the stage. The exercises at the opera house were called to begin at 12 o'clock. They were only a few minutes late. President Reed, of the Senate, acted as chairman of the meeting.

Then came the appearance of the Governor-elect, escorted by a committee from the Legislature and many friends. There was a wild demonstration in the opera house at his appearance, and the audience yelled itself hoarse over him. Voorhees took it all calmly and bowed and smiled in response to the loud cheering from every side. The noise finally quieted, and Rev. Francis L. Patton offered the opening prayer.

Then Chief Justice William J. Magie, of the Supreme Court, administered the oath of office, after which the salute of seventeen guns by the Camden gun detachment outside was drowned by the cheers of those within.

Speaker Watkins next delivered the Great Seal of the State to the new Governor in a neat little speech, which was answered by Governor Voorhees in a few words.

Then followed the formal introductions of the Governor to President Reed and to the members of the Legislature. Governor Voorhees delivered his inaugural address which took the place of a formal message to the Legislature. The full text will be found in another column.

The exercises came to a close with the benediction by Rev. J. Richards Coyle, of Trenton, after which the enthusiastic Republicans again had a chance to yell and cheer.

Governor Voorhees was immediately escorted to the banqueting hall of the Trenton House where dinner was served. There was no formal speech making but the man from Union county was congratulated on all sides and had to make a short speech. The reception to the Governor in the executive chambers begins at 3 o'clock and will be followed by another this evening.

THE NEW BATTLE SHIPS.

Progress on the Kearsarge, Kentucky and Illinois.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 17.--Portions of the mounts for the thirteen-inch guns of the first class battleships Kearsarge and Kentucky have arrived at Newport News. They will be put on at once.

The ships were to have been turned over to the government on the second of this month, but unforeseen delays occurred and now the builders say that they will be completed on July 1.

The machinery of both vessels is 95 per cent. completed, and the hulls 85 per cent.

All the larger armanent of the ships will be placed before the vessels are turned over to the government. This is necessary in the case of the thirteen-inch turret guns. The turrets for the eight-inch guns are built on top of the turrets in which the thirteen-inch destroyers are placed, and before this can be done the larger guns have to be put in position and the turrets built over them.

The Illinois is about 75 per cent. completed.

Canned Beef Killed a Cat.

Newport, Jan. 17.--The "embalmed" beef controversy in the army recalls the sickness of half the members of a battery of the Fourth Artillery, which returned early last fall to Fort Adams from Santiago, via Montauk Point.

A few weeks after their arrival at Fort Adams, the battery mess was served with canned roast beef at one of its noonday meals, and before four o'clock of the same day about fifty members were either under treatment at the post hospital or had been supplied with an antidote.

After the patients had suffered from various maladies, supposedly the effects of canned beef, a number were discharged from treatment during the same evening, while others were carried a longer time on the sick list. A test of the canned beef was made at the post hospital by confining a cat over night with a good sized portion of the same beef which had made so many of the battery men ill.

The next morning the cat was found dead, and quite a portion of the beef had been eaten by the animal. At the time of this incident it was currently reported that the artillerymen's illness was due to overloading their stomachs while in their weakened condition after the Santiago campaign.

Miners Want Higher Wages.

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 17.--This week will witness a battle royal between the coal operators and the United Mine Workers over the inter-state agreement.

It is understood that the operators will energetically oppose an advance in the price of mining and will fight to the end any agreement looking toward an increase in the present rate of wages.

The business, they admit, has been better during the last ninety days than for a long time, but they are hampered by a lack of cars for transportation.

Some of the miners' delegates say that they will insist upon an advance in wages and the eight hour day.

Somt hint that if the demands are not complied with a strike of greater magnitude than the country has seen for years will be inaugurated next month.

Cornell's Acting President.

Ithaca, N. Y., Jan. 17.--It was announced last night that the board of trustees of Cornell University will appoint T. F. Crane, present dean of the faculty of arts and sciences, to perform the duties of President J. G. Schurman during the latter's absence in the Philippine islands.

Professor Crane is one of the oldest professors at Cornell, and was a member of the original faculty. At present he holds the position of professor of the romance languages. He is thoroughly familiar with the workings of the president's office and well fitted to perform its duties.

President Schurman's leave of absence will extend to January 1, 1900.

Voorhees to be Sworn.

New York, Jan. 7.--Foster M. Voorhees of Elizabeth, will become the governor of New Jersey to-day. His inauguration will take place in the Taylor Opera House, Trenton.

Over thirty-five hundred invitations have been sent to prominent men, and among those expected are Vice President Garret A. Hobart and Attorney General Griggs who are both Jerseymen.

United States Senator William J. Sewell will be present and so will John Kean, Jr., of Elizabeth, who is to be the other Republican senator from New Jersey.

French Steamer Ashore.

Havana, Jan. 17.--The French steamer Versailles, Captain Villeaumeras, belonging to the Campagnie Generale Transatiantique, from St. Nazaire on December 21 for Vera Cruz, has run ashore between Bahia Honda and Cabanas, in the northern part of the province of Pinar del Rio.

The coast there is rocky and the position of the steamer is considered to be dangerous.

The spot where she is ashore is about ninety miles from here. Tugs have been sent to her assistance.

The Dreyfus Scandal

Paris, Jan. 17.--M. Loew, president of the criminal branch of the court of cassation, in an interview published in the Journal, estimates that three weeks will elapse before the court of cassation will hold a public hearing in the Dreyfus case.

The judge declares that the statement that the court is in possession of documents furnished by Major Count Esterhazy is inexact.

Closing the Camp at Montauk.

Montauk, L. I., Jan. 17.--The army camp here is at last becoming a thing of the past. Five car loads of camp equippages were shipped yesterday. The shipment included fourteen army mules and wagons.

Sixteen bodies of dead soldiers were forwarded to Cypress Hill cemetery and to relatives yesterday.

ROOSEVELT HONORED

Commission Recommends Giving a Brevet.

TO BE BRIGADIER GENERAL

He Will Get This for Gallant Services and May Get Honor Medal Too—Gen. Schaun, Gen. Boynton and Col. Carter Compose the Board.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17.--In the list of brevets handed to the president by the military commission appointed to confer honors for gallant services in the war, is the name of Colonel Roosevelt to be a brigadier general.

A few medals of honor have been awarded to soldiers, but the general question of awarding medals has not come up for final consideration.

It was necessary to dispose of the brevets in the Cuban campaign first, that the requirements of the law might better be observed in selecting candidates for the other distinguishing mark of recognition.

Some personal act of bravery of an unusual character to which there are eye witnesses is the requirement for an honor medal.

The friends of Governor Roosevelt have been zealous in attempting to procure for him such a mark of honor. When the case is reached the testimony of General Wood and other associates of Colonel Roosevelt in the field will get the weight to which it is entitled.

Brevets in the Porto Rican campaign soon will be awarded to be followed also by the distribution of medals and certificates, as in the campaign in Cuba.

The board is composed of Generals Schwann and Boynton and Colonel Carter.

The list submitted in the case of the Santiago campaign includes the names of five hundred and four persons.

The brevets recommended will require not only the approval of the president, but must be confirmed by the Senate.

Earth Sank Without Warning.

Scranton, Pa., Jan. 17.--Saturday evening a cave in occurred in the neighborhood of the Ravine shaft in upper Pittston. There have been a number of cave ins at this place and every time it occurs there is considerable damage.

On Saturday night the earth sank without warning and there was a great deal of commotion and excitement.

This place is undermined, and it is no unusual thing for the surface to crack, walls to crumble and houses to be swallowed up.

Two houses were badly shaken. The cave in also caused the breaking of the water main and for a time it looked as if the whole of upper Pittston would be flooded. The break was repaired, but it was some hours later before the people could again procure water from their hydrants.

This mine has not been worked for some time on account of a fire raging within and beneath the surface.

The damage cannot be estimated at present, but great fears are entertained regarding future cave ins.

Youth Died Far from Home.

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 17.--A cable message received here yesterday announces the death in Shanghai, China, of Irvine Barrett, son of Thomas L. Barrett by whose death, in January, 1897, young Barrett came into possession of $175,000.

The son went to New York and spent money with a lavish hand. He fell in with Grace Garstyn, a subrette at the Olympia, and, after a wine supper and a night of revelry, they were married.

The affair created a sensation in Louisville, where Barrett brought his bride, and he decided not to remain here.

Unknown Man Killed.

Mount Vernon, N. Y., Jan. 17.--A well dressed man, about thirty years old, was struck and instantly killed by the south bound Stamford express on the New Haven Railroad at Rye, yesterday.

Commuters who were waiting at the depot, say that the man made no effort to get out of the path of the locomotive, and believe that he was either out of his mind or deliberately remained on the track, awaiting the locomotive.

His body was badly mutilated. It is at the morgue awaiting identification. Coroner Banning will hold an inquest over the remains.

CZAR AND TOLSTOI MEET.

The Monarch Talks With Him About the Imperial Peace Proposal.

Emperor Nicholas kissed him on the mouth and both cheeks, Tolstoi readily responding.

Then a conversation commenced, the czar asking his guest for an opinion upon the imperial proposal for the limitation of armaments. Count Tolstoi replied that he could only believe in it when his majesty should set the example to other nations.

On the czar mentioning the difficulties of the problem, and the necessity for the united aid of the powers, the count softened somewhat and expressed the hope that his majesty would be able to attain some definite results, or, at any rate, to formulate some workable plan at the conference.

The czar, thanking him for his good wishes, said he would be pleased if Tolstoi could be induced to lend his genius to the solution of the question, and the count rejoined that the emperor might count upon his co-operation, for he was already engaged upon a work dealing with the question in point, which would soon see the light.

GEN. STERNBERG'S RETURN.

Reports to the President the Result of His Official Visit to Havana.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17.--Surgeon General Sternberg of the army returned to Washington yesterday and reported to the president the result of his recent trip of inspection to Havana.

General Sternberg found the American troops in very good condition and expressed himself as satisfied with the general outlook there.

He is to arrange for the establishment of three hospitals in the suburbs of Havana, intended for the treatment of American soldiers in Cuba. One is to be a big structure for the care of sick men, another is to be for officers and a third is to be built exclusively for yellow fever patients and suspects.

General Sternberg says that if the proposed extensive improvements of the sewerage system of Havana is attempted at this time it will result in no end of sickness among our own troops and the other inhabitants of the city.

"If this work is commenced now, he said, "the rainy season will come on and find the streets torn up and all the sewers exposed. A general epidemic of fever would doubtless entail most disastrous results. This work should be postponed until next fall, when an early start can be had."

Hotel Guests Quarantined.

Rochester, Jan. 17.--Great excitement has been caused in this city by the publication of an order by Health Officer Dr. Goler placing the Imperial Hotel and its forty guests under quarantine, and announcing that no one can enter or leave the house for two weeks.

Two cases of small pox were found in the hotel, while a number of additional cases were traced, it is said, to the same source.

The first intimation of the cases was a telephone message received by Dr. Goler from Dr. Bingham of Charlotte. It was to the effect that two cases of small pox had been discovered in the town of Greece, and that the patients had come from the Imperial Hotel in this city.

As soon as Dr. Goler received this news he went to the hotel and made an examination of the inmates. He found two women, a waiter and a sister of the proprietor having unmistakable signs of small pox.

Both women were affected by the disease in a mild form and had almost recovered.

When the regular army officers were here recruiting for the service a number of recruits were sent to the Imperial to board until they could be forwarded to the various posts assigned them.

Among these recruits was Robert Lewis, who was later sent to Fort Niagara, where he is now suffering from small pox.

He was ill over a week before the nature of the disease was discovered.

The Johannesburg Riot.

Cape Town, Jan. 17.--Telegrams from Johannesburg are censored, but so far as can be ascertained no one was injured seriously in the disturbance between the Burghers and Afrikanders and the British residents at the public meeting to ventilate the grievances of the Uitlanders.

Efforts are being made to trace the instigators of the affray.

Two Englishmen were arrested, but were discharged.

May Save the Colon.

Santiago, Jan. 17.--Representatives of a Norwegian wrecking company have examined the wrecks of the Spanish warships in order to see if it is possible to raise them. They consider that the Colon might possibly be floated, but they are doubtful in the case of the Almirante Oquendo.

Reassuring News from Gen. Otis.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17.--General Otis was heard from again yesterday from Manila, and the contents of his cable dispatch were so reassuring as to the situation there and at Iloilo, that the officials here have come to accept without question the correctness of his statement that the critical stage is past and that he has control of the situation.

SUNDAY LIQUOR SELLING

How Senator Raines Proposes to Stop It.

TO WITHDRAW PRIVILEGE

Attempt to be Made to Amend the Law by Prohibiting Sales in Hotels and Restaurants—Serious Difficulties Caused by This Section of the Law.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 17.--Senator John Raines, the author of the present liquor tax law, has announced that he is preparing an important amendment to meet the serious difficulties that have arisen in the cities of the state, and especially in New York, with reference to Sunday selling in hotels.

He proposes to strike out section 31 of the Raines law, which gives authority to hotels, clubs and restaurants to sell liquor with food on Sunday.

This, if stricken out, will stop all Sunday selling, and will prevent absolutely because of the strict penalties provided, any sale of wine, liquor, beer or other intoxicant with meals.

Senator Raines says that the people have upheld his act by their votes at the polls, and that there does not seem to be any other way than this which he now proposes, to end the frequent complaints that Sunday violations are permitted by the liquor law.

He says that he has collected a vast amount of statistics on the subject of Sunday selling under guise of furnishing food with liquor, and that he is satisfied that there is no way in which complaints can be stopped except by taking away the privilege which hotels, clubs and restaurants have abused.

Pay of Mustered-out Troops.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 17.--Governor Roosevelt announced yesterday that he was in correspondence with the United States military authorities in reference to the payment of the First and Sixty-ninth regiments.

The men mustered out of the service after January 1, under the ruling of the federal authorities, will not receive as much as those who were mustered out prior to that date, by the difference between federal and state pay.

The governor proposes that the federal authorities repay to New York state the difference in the money paid to the men mustered out before January 1, and, if this is refused, he asks that the men mustered out after January 1 be paid like the others, and promises that then no rebate will be asked.

If no satisfactory arrangement can be made the governor proposes that the state shall make an appropriation to pay the men.

Dr. Doty Reappointed.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 17.--Governor Roosevelt has reappointed Dr. Alvah H. Doty health officer of the port of New York.

The governor discovered yesterday that Dr. Doty's term expired January 1, and immediately made the reappointment.

Swam the East River.

New York, Jan. 17.--Harry McDonald, sixteen years of age, escaped from the House of Refuge on Randall's island, on Friday night and claims that he swam and floated on ice cakes a distance of a mile and a half in crossing the East river.

After coming out of the river he walked nearly a mile to his aunt's house, where he appeared with his clothing coated with ice and fell unconscious.

He was missed at roll call on Friday afternoon and the guards at the House of Refuge traced his footsteps to the river.

Boats were launched and a searching party started out, but the officials of the institution had no reason to believe that the boy had escaped drowning, even if he had not, indeed, committed suicide.

After the boy's aunt had cared for him she sent for his mother, who had him placed in the House of Refuge. In an interview with her he told her of his swim from the island to the Manhattan shore and she cared for him during Saturday.

It was her intention to return him to the House of Refuge, but he disappeared again on Saturday night and has not since been heard from.

Gen. Wheeler's Visit.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 17.--General Joseph Wheeler arrived here yesterday to take part in the presentation of a portrait of Lee Camp of Confederate veterans.

He was accorded an ovation by all the Confederate organizations in this city. All of these extended invitations for him to be present at their meetings and to address them.

During his stay here General Wheeler will talk with the leading men of the state on various topics of especial interest to the South. The subjects of these talks will no doubt embrace the overshadowing one of expansion, and the future of the South in national affairs.

The Astor Battery.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17.--Orders have been given for the Astor Battery, which recently arrived at San Francisco from the Philippines, to proceed immediately to Fort Schuyler, New York, for muster out.

San Francisco, Jan. 17.--The Astor Battery left for New York this morning. The delay in their departure was caused by the inability to get suitable cars ready.

NEWS FROM HAVANA.

The New Police Force--Arrival of the Manitoba.

Havana, Jan. 7.--General Monocal and Captain McCullagh are examining three hundred applicants for positions on the police force here.

About eighty patrolmen have been accepted so far, and of this number about thirty are Spaniards.

General Menocal is acting fairly toward the Spanish candidates. If physically and morally up to the standard they are accepted. Some former Spanish officers are among the applicants. Two lieutenants accepted appointments as patrolmen Saturday.

The height required, five feet six inches, shuts out many applicants, including a lot of General Menocal's men. The force will be selected, in the main, by the end of the week.

The weakest part of the system is the pay. Fifty dollars a month for patrolmen is regarded as too little money for first class honest men. San Juan de Porto Rico pays $75 a month.

The question of raising the pay of patrolmen here to that amount is under consideration.

The first piles have been driven for the construction of the United States pier at Triscornia. Colonel Hecker was present.

The construction of seven warehouses is beginning at the railroad terminal line. They will be finished in about a month. About thirteen hundred men are at work.

Senor Alfredo Rego has applied to General Ludlow for the privilege of inspecting cattle entering this port and collecting fees for so doing, in Spanish style. His application was not considered.

The United States transport Manitoba from Savannah on January 8, has arrived here.

Mr. Dingley's Funeral.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17.--The funeral services over the body of Representative Nelson Dingley of Maine, late chairman of the committee on ways and means, were held in the hall of the House of Representatives yesterday.

President McKinley, his cabinet, distinguished members of the diplomatic corps, members of the supreme court, senators and representatives, and persons distinguished in military and civil life were present.

The decorations of the hall were simple. Upon and around the coffin, which was placed immediately in front of the rostrum, were placed a few of the most beautiful and most appropriate floral offerings which had been sent to the family.

At the close of the services Mr. Boutelle moved that the House adjourn as a further mark of respect.

The motion was adopted, and accordingly, at 12.55 p. m., the speaker declared the House adjourned.

Great Britain's Attitude.

London, Jan. 17.--Diplomats here refuse to take seriously the revival of the report cabled from Washington, that the United States is willing to exchange the Philippine islands for the British West Indian islands. A high official of the foreign office characterized the statement as absurd. He said that while the continental powers appeared to be willing to permit the United tates to hold the Philippines as spoils of war, they would not be likely to remain passive spectators of a change in the balance of power in the far East which would result from Great Britain's acquirement of those islands, particularly so at this critical time in the struggle for domination in China.

If such negotiations are on foot the officials of the United States embassy here have no knowledge of them.

Old War Claim Just Presented.

Terre Haute, Jan. 7.--Captain William Taylor of this city has forwarded to Washington a claim against the government for $72,500. During the civil war he was engaged in building a canal from a bayou to the Mississippi river near New Orleans, and when Farragut ran the forts and entered the river Taylor offered his services and the use of his light draught vessels. The offer was immediately accepted, for the presence of a pilot who knew the shallow waters was invaluable. He served as pilot for the federal government until the close of the war. He went to Washington once during the war to present his claim, but returned without doing so.

Krupp Guns for Turkey.

Constantinople, Jan. 17.--An imperial order has been issued, ordering the purchase of 162 Krupp field guns and thirty thousand shrapnel shells. This is undoubtedly the outcome of the presentation to the sultan of Turkey by Emperor William on his return from the Orient, of a perfect model of the most modern Krupp field gun introduced into the German army.

The German newspapers at the time commented approvingly on the emperor's shrewdness, which, they predicted, would result in Turkey sending a large order for guns to Germany.

Russian Diet Opened.

Berlin, Jan. 17.--The Prussian diet was opened yesterday with a speech from the throne, in which Emperor William declared that the financial situation continued favorable, the bases of both political and national life being soundly established and the prosperity of the country visibly growing.

He regarded the future with confidence and mentioned the measures which would be introduced to extend the state railroads and navigable canals.

The emperor read his speech and was repeatedly interrupted by cheers.

Rough Rider Arrested.

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 17.--Lieutenant B. T. Waite, who says he was a Rough Rider with Colonel Roosevelt, and who was arrested here on a charge of horse stealing at Hyannis, has been delivered to the authorities of Yarmouth.

APOLOGY FROM EAGAN

But to the War Inquiry Board, Not to Gen. Miles.

SENDS A NEW STATEMENT

The Objectionable Features Eliminated—Defends His Language on the Ground that He Had Great Provocation—Statement Accompanying the Letter Not Made Public.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17.--Commissary General Eagan has sent to the war inquiry commission a revised statement in place of the one originally made in response to General Miles's charges.

The statement is about thirty-five per cent. shorter than that which was ordered withdrawn because of its violent and abusive character.

The commission, after its receipt, went into secret session to read the document and decide whether, in its present form, it had been expurgated sufficiently to permit it to be made a part of the commission's record.

Following is the text of a letter sent by General Eagan to the war commission with the statement:

Office of Commissary General of Subsistence.

Washington, Jan. 14, 1899.

To the Commission appointed by the President to investigate the conduct of the War Department in the war with Spain:

Gentlemen: I have the honor to hand you herewith my testimony which is now resubmitted and revised in accordance with the views expressed by you in your letter to me of January 13, 1899.

The objectionable features and what is considered irrelevant matter to you, in which opinion I entirely agree, are eliminated. In this connection I desire to state that there was never a desire or intention on my part of any disrespect whatsoever to your commission, but in explanation, and in extenuation of the language used by me heretofore, I beg to invite the attention of the commission to the fact that I have been accused practically of feeding the soldiers with poisoned beef, which made them sick—"embalmed beef," so called--that I have furnished meat to the army under the "pretense of experiment," which charge in effect is corruption, or worse, because it jeopardizes the lives of soldiers sent to the front in tropical climates, and who were dependent on such food as was sent to them; that these statements have gone to the whole country uncontradicted; that they have been published, and I have been pilloried in the press of the country as a man who had fed the army on poisoned meat, and corruptly so; that for about three weeks' time I have kept silent for the reason that I was debarred, after talking with the honorable Secretary of War, from preparing charges because of the immunity granted by the president to witnesses before your commission, notwithstanding the gravity of the accusations; that it is unreasonable to believe that such monstrous charges could have any other effect than to work upon an honorable man in such a way as to goad him to a species of desperation, and that it was but natural when the proper opportunity was given him to meet and refute the charges, that he should characterize them in harsh language and in the terms that are deemed improper no matter what the provocation.

I, therefore, withdraw the language and matter so objectionable, and resubmit to you now my sworn statement, with the abiding faith that your commission, having all the facts before you, will decide the points at issue justly.

Very respectfully,

CHARLES P. EAGAN,
Commissary General Subsistence.

The commission, after its executive session, decided for the present to make public only General Eagan's letter, and not the accompanying statement.

Plans for Eagan Inquiry.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17.--It is reported that General Wesley Merritt has been selected as the president of the court that will investigate the Miles-Eagan controversy.

It is not yet definitely known whether a court martial or a court of inquiry will be appointed. The latter would embrace an investigation of the merits of the beef controversy, in addition to trying General Eagan for his language before the war investigating commission. It is possible, however, that only a court martial will be ordered at this time.

Made Governor of Guam.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17.--The formal orders appointing Captain Richard P. Leary governor of the island of Guam were announced by the navy department yesterday. The orders designate Captain Leary as "naval governor."

Boatswain H. H. Hudson has been detached from the Boston navy yard and assigned to take charge of the coaling station at Pago Pago, Samoa. He will proceed to Pago Pago on the collier Abarendo, which will carry the first supply of coal to the new station.

Lewis Henry Boutell Dead.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17.--Lewis Henry Boutell, father of Representative Boutell of Illinois, died here yesterday of heart trouble after an illness of about ten days.

Funeral services will be held at the son's residence in this city to-day, and the body will then be taken to Evanston, Ill., for interment.

Gen. Miles Not to Act.

Washington, Jan. 17.--General Miles has gone to New York on a personal errand. It is stated that he will not prefer charges against General Eagan, but intends to let the war department deal with the matter.

The Governor's Message.

Through the excellence of the news service that The Daily Press obtains, Governor Voorhees' inaugural message, delivered at the ceremonies of making him Governor this afternoon at Trenton, is offered in its entirety in our news columns today. The message of Governor Voorhees possesses more interest to the people of this vicinity than any similiar public document has in a great many years. This is due, of course, to the fact that Governor Voorhees is a Union county man and one of our neighbors to a large extent.

Through the good fortune of political affiliations Governor Voorhees goes into office at this time with a thorough comprehension of the duties that will devolve upon him, his service as an Acting-Governor during a greater part of the past year having particularly fitted him with a ready knowledge of what lays before him in the line of duty. His message indicates that he is in thorough sympathy with the high position, and proposes to use it to bring a good administration to the people of the commonwealth and consequent renown for himself.

Mr. Voorhees takes the reins of government when there is no crying need of great reforms in State affairs, such as greeted the induction of certain of his honored predecessors into office, but this condition of affairs does not by any means lessen the responsibilities of the chief executive. He will find it a tussle at all times to keep the legislation of the State in the straight and narrow path of rectitude.

Briefly and succinctly the Governor reviews urgent public matters, and makes such recommendations as he thinks proper, and as a rule they are quite so. One admirable thing about the message is that Governor Voorhees confines his remarks entirely to State affairs. Of late we have had too much spread-eagleism from the chief executives of other States.

The City Treasurer's Report.

Public reports that are made up largely of figures are usually dry reading for the ordinary person, but the Plainfielders who would know more of the exact cost of conducting the local government in its various departments will find plenty to interest and instruct in the annual report of City Treasurer Arnold, which is printed on the sixth page of today's Daily Press.

The advantage of having a skilled man in bookkeeping to look after the record of city receipts and disbursements, such as Mr. Arnold is, is shown in the concise and clear form of arrangement of the figures which are presented in the report. City Treasurer Arnold has had the report arranged in a neat little booklet, which he presented to the Common Councilmen last night. The form is such that it can be carried about in one's pocket so that it is handy for reference at any time.

To see Mr. Voorhees take the oath of office this noon and contemplate the roseate view of life it must bring to him is one way to regard the Gubernatorial inauguration, but a contradictory and rather unpleasant aspect is to consider the things that now confront the Governor in his official position. Not the least of them is the fact that up to the present time about fourteen hundred men have placed themselves on record as office-seekers. There are still several months before all the officers for 1899 will be named, so that there is still time to extend the list. It is safe to presume that each petition for office brings an additional dozen or more letters of endorsement, so that the Governor will have to ship his letters from his Elizabeth offices to the State House in a dry goods box. There are two particular boards which are coveted by the most men. They are the State Board of Assessors, which pays $2,500 a year and carries with it a big collection of railroad passes, and the State Boad of Riparian commissioners, which pays $1,500 a year for work that does not consume much time.

MONSTER RELIC OF CERVERA'S FLEET.

At the Washington navy yard Uncle Sam has four 5 1-2 inch guns with their mounts and shields, taken from the Infanta Maria Teresa and the Almirante Oquendo. The accompanying picture from the New York Tribune shows one of the Teresa's guns and gun mounts.

This is a good year for the single "gals" in Trenton, for there are some mighty excellent catches in a matrimonial way at the capital. First and foremost, of course, is the Governor. Voorhees is an old bachelor, but we believe Cupid could do fine work with the curly-haired Union county man if he had good material to work with on the other end. He is not the only prominent man of the present administration who enjoys single blessedness, though. Speaker Watkins, who has been the Acting Governor, has been so busy that he has not had a chance to get married, and Senator Stokes, of Cumberland, who will be one of the leaders on the floor of the Senate, is a bachelor. John Kean, who will be elected United States Senator to succeed James Smith, Jr., is also in the same class, having been so busy in politics and business that he has not had time to assume domestic responsibilities. Comptroller Hancock belongs to the group of single statesmen, too.

Through the courtesy of President of the Senate Reed many of his constituents were provided with the handsome and august invitations to the Gubernatorial inauguration at Trenton today. In the height of his glory the Senator did not forget his old friends.

A newspaper heading over an item in reference to the Adams poisoning case says that the police are waiting for something to turn up. From present prospects it looks as though the turnup would revolve itself in a beat for the police.

Chief Joseph Kipley has instructed the Chicago police to "shoot to kill" when it becomes necessary in dealing with highwaymen and bunco steerers. Insurance agents will probably do a land-office business with Chicago Alderman now.

Senator Gallinger calculates that the pensions on account of the latest war will abount to between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000 in the very near future. Gallinger is at the head of the Pensions Committee, and is an expert on the subject.

According to Chinese reports a secret treaty exists between Great Britain and the United States to prevent any further alienation of Chinese territory. That goes to show how a joke appears at times when we least expect it.

Whatever Senater to-be Kean thinks about National expansion we are quite confident that plenty of expansion in the water supply system of Plainfield will strike a sympathetic chord in his mind.

The Newark Advertiser refers to Secretary Alger as a one-horse politician. The Advertiser dignifies the Secretary. In reality he is a jackass of about forty mule power.

"Politics makes queer bedfellows" is being emphasized in the preliminaries of the borough election campaign.

All things come to him who waits, it is said. Verily it is true, for isn't Foster Voorhees a real governor now?

G. L. VanEmburgh, who has been ill for nearly three weeks, was able to go to his store yesterday for a little while.

The "Joshua Simpkins" company, carrying their own special scenery, two bands of music and a fine orchestra, will produce the great pastoral comedy drama of that name at Music Hall Friday night. The piece deals with country life and people, three acts of the play being laid in one of the many quaint villages of Vermont. The second act (in 3 scenes) portrays Uncle Josh's first visit to Washington city. In the third act a sensational saw mill effect is shown, being nothing more or less than a complete saw mill in full operation, cutting up genuine timber. The saw is a genuine buzz or circular saw, and cuts through timber at lightning speed.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence to The Press.)

Dunellen, Jan. 17 — Two Jewish peddlers from Raritan had an upset yesterday afternoon on Washington avenue, and were severely shaken up. One of them was dragged twenty-five feet along the ground, but escaped with only a cut in the forehead. The two peddlers drove too close to the railroad crossing, and attempted to turn around when they saw the gates were down and a train was approaching. The horse, a young animal, grew frightened and upset the wagon. The two men could not disentangle themselves from the wreckage until Abner Coriell, Jr., and some men from the train ran out and caught the horse, and enabled the two men to get up. The wagon was not damaged much, and, after straightening things out as much as possible, they hitched up their horse again and drove on.

Work is progressing rapidly on the water pipe trenches. The men struck water on the corner of Front street and Madison avenue, near Taylor's Hotel, so were obliged to begin to dig at Washington avenue, or below, where it is dry. The men will work along the same direction as the water flows if they strike it again, then it will not interfere with them.

The Plaidfield trolley car, that was run on the Bound Brook branch, gave out yesterday morning, and a Somerville car had to be called into service. Later in the day one of the old South Orange cars, which were run on that branch at first, was got out, and made regular trips until midnight.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

New Market, January 17.—Miss Emma Pizie has taken Miss Lizzie Day's position in the post office, as the latter has resigned.

A special meeting of the members of the Seventh-Day Baptist church was held Sunday evening to take some action in regard to calling a pastor to succeed Rev. Frank E. Peterson who has resigned. Rev. L. E. Livermore, a former pastor, was nominated and received a number of votes, but finally Rev. Martin Sindall, of Verona, N. Y., was chosen, and the call will be extended to him at once.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Jan. 17—Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company held their regular monthly meeting and annual election of officers in their rooms last evening. Arrangements were also made with John G. Cook for the use of his team to pull the hand engine when an alarm of fire is sounded. This will make Excelsior more efficient than ever and is a thing that should have been done before. The following were elected for the ensuing year: President, John Robison; foreman, W. B. Nobb; first assistant, E. L. Hand; second assistant, John G. Cook; secretary, Wm. VanWalkenberg; assistant secretary; W. B. Buckley; treasurer, Wm. H. Lake.

W. H. Carters coachman had rather an exciting time while waiting with Mr. Carters horse and wagon at the Fanwood station Monday evening. In turning around one of the wheels run off and the horse, becoming startled, attempted to get away. He was finally quieted after he had run up on the sidewalk near the station. The break was repaired and the trouble was soon ended.

After regular service in the Baptist church Sunday morning a church meeting was held for the purpose of granting withdrawal cards for Rev. and Mrs. J. S. Braker, who unite with the Beth Eden church, of Waltham, Mass.

The Saturday night sociable held in the Fanwood firehouse was up to the usual standard, and was a very pleasant affair for those attending.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Westfield, January 17—At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the First National Bank the following directors were elected: A. D Cook, Charles G. Endicott, Dr. Harrison, H. L. Fink and Joseph R. Connolly. A. D. Cook was made president; C. G. Endicott, vice president, and Joseph R. Connolly, cashier, at a following meeting of the directors.

Mrs. E. R. Hoadley, of Prospect street, slipped on the steps of the piazza at her home Saturday and dislocated her right elbow. A physician was at once summoned and proper attention was given the injury. After the arm had been set it was painful.

The next meeting of the Township Committee will be held January 27th, at which time the Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railway Company will make application for what is known as the crosstown trolley line, to run from Springfield to Rahway.

The annual election of the fire department for chief engineer and assistant chiefs will take place the evening of Feb. 14th.

WHITE'S WHITE SALE
THE WHITE GOODS EVENT OF THE SEASON.

Encouraged by the marked success which has attended our previous Muslin Underwear sales, we have made a large purchase for this occasion. Our orders were placed during the makers' dull season. The work has been most thoroughly done, materials and trimmings are of the best, the fit, finish and size generosity is the same as if the garments were made under your own supervision—by your own home seamstress—and the prices are less than you would pay for bare materials.

NIGHT ROBES.

Every feature of this sale is special, but more special than other features will be the nightgown selling. They are among the best creations of master makers and are daintily trimmed with the prettiest laces, ribbons and embroideries. Prices 25c, 49c, 75c, $1 and $1.25.

WHITE SKIRTS.

Some plain with rows of tucks, some with cambric and embroidery flounces with lace insertions; all cut very full, nothing scant about them but the prices—25c, 35c, 49c, 75c to $1.25.

CORSET COVERS.

Trimmed with embroidery, torchon laces, or clusters of tucks with insertions, perfect fitting, high, square or V shape necks, made of fine cambric. Who would bother to make them when you buy at these prices—15c, 25c, 29c, 39c, 50c

DRAWERS.

Made with yoke bands, deep hamburg embroidery, umbrella, flounces or rows of tucks. As some of the best numbers are somewhat limited as to quantity it is advisable that you be among the early choosers as these lots cannot be duplicated at these prices—17c, 25c, 39c and 50c.

AN AMERICAN ASPIRANT

CHAPTER VI.

"I just perceived," whispered in horror stricken tones the World in the ear of the Flesh, "it was my unfortunate privilege to witness a most reprehensible proceeding."

"And what was that?" anxiously from the Flesh.

"I just saw that little Frenchman, who entered ten minutes since with M. Desmoulins, squeeze the young lady in the white satin dress embroidered with pompadour flowers."

"My dear," remarked the Flesh resignedly, "have you not been in wicked Paris long enough to recognize that its undeniable demoralization is bound, sooner or later, to communicate itself to all young American upstarts visiting it for the first time?"

"True gentlemen were never guilty of such rudeness in Bangor," remarked the Devil mendaciously. She never lost the racy opportunity of reminding her plainer sisters that she once had been a beauty. Then she added, with superfluous veracity, coupled with unconscious pathos, "And when they were they never followed it up."

Priscilla was arguing hotly with Constance. They had retired into an adjoining room, ostensibly to imbibe some lukewarm sirup which Mme. Picaud had loudly asserted would cool their throats after dancing, but in reality to "have it out" with each other.

"I cannot understand," remarked Priscilla, "how your friend M. Desmoulins dared introduce such a horrid little man to you or to your acquaintances."

"The Count Baradat de Lacaze is not horrid," returned Constance. "If he held you too tight, it was because he was afraid you would fall on the slippery floor; that is all. You can't expect a Frenchman to be exactly like an American, can you? Autres pays, autres mœurs. I am sure he intended no rudeness. On the contrary, he admires you immensely. He told me so five minutes since."

"He took a mighty queer way of evincing his admiration," replied Priscilla hotly.

"Nonsense," said Constance. "If you are going to be such a ridiculous prude, you might just as well renounce any success at the beginning of your career. Count Baradat de Lacaze belongs to one of the oldest families in France. He has the bluest blood in his veins, so M. Desmoulins told me, and he is enormously rich. He owns three or four magnificent chateaux."

"It is a pity he does not stay in them," said Priscilla, still unappeased, her cheeks burning hotter and hotter. "I can't conceive why he came here if he is at liberty to 'frequent the most aristocratic circles,' as I heard M. Desmoulins inform you."

"How unreasonable you are, Priscilla! He breakfasted with M. Desmoulins today, and he brought him here just to fill in a couple of hours."

"I wonder if you have entirely forgotten," said Priscilla, "what a genuine American gentleman is like—a man, I mean."

"I am almost afraid that I have," Constance confessed regretfully.

"They are the cleanest things," said Priscilla inadequately. "They look so well brushed, and they are so magnificently set up. They nearly always wear fresh violets or a new species of chrysanthemum in their buttonholes, and!—"

"There's a man in the doorway," interrupted Constance suddenly, "who looks exactly like one of the perfect creatures you are describing. I wonder who he is. I never saw him before. Why, he is speaking to your aunt."

"There is no possibility of any decent American coming here," cried Priscilla stormily. "The stifling air would suffocate one of them in the first place, and these horrid little greasy Frenchmen would irritate them in the second."

"He is coming this way," said Constance.

"Let him come," cried Priscilla defiantly, and then she continued: "And the way they dance, Constance—oh, it is perfectly divine! I would give a year of my life to have just one waltz with an American man in the Newport casino."

"I can't import the casino," said a merry, memorable, masculine voice in her ear, "but I am willing to try the dance."

Then Priscilla turned. She looked radiantly delighted and undisguisedly surprised. Grimke, to her she was the absolute. Past and future faded out for her in the supreme and unmitigated joy of the present, like a breath off a mirror.

"He is coming this way," said Constance.

"Mr. Stormouth!" She smiled. Then she laughed out loud with pleasure.

"Are you glad to see me?" Her hands were caught fast in two strong, powerful ones. Two piercing eyes were fastened on hers hungrily and held them.

"Yes," said Priscilla softly. Yes, I am."

"Thank God!" returned Stormouth succinctly.

Then Priscilla, womanlike, began, to put it inelegantly, to back water.

"It is the most natural thing in the world that I should be glad to see you," she said. "I have not seen a decent American—a home American, I mean—in a year."

Stormouth smiled pleasantly, with the old, memorable twinkle in his eyes. "There are plenty of them at home," he remarked irrelevantly. "Will you dance, Miss Priscilla?"

"Yes," said Priscilla.

And then she was borne off into a rapturous land of ideal motion which carried in its well remembered measures a gladness Priscilla became conscious right then and there that she had forgotten could exist, so full it was of bounding life and strength and elasticity. She felt the way a colt feels when he sniffs the morning air after a night spent in his box stall. All her healthy nature hailed the promise that dance contained of wind swept days wherein sport predominated and culture sulked, dismally put out for the moment by something essentially more desirable.

"You dance very well," remarked Miss Delno critically, as they strolled to and fro in the little stuffy corridors.

"Thanks," returned Stormouth. "I am afraid dancing is not my strong point."

"What is your strong point?"

"Horseback riding and shooting," he replied.

"How jolly! That's what I love, too," said Priscilla. "Do you ever go to Hempstead?"

"Does a horse eat oats?" returned Stormouth, laughing.

"And where do you shoot?"

"Where it pleases me, my lady. On my friends' preserves on Long Island sometimes; in the Rocky mountains best. But I catch little wiggling trout sometimes, after a knee deep wrestle with them, out of the brooks in the Adirondacks, and there is a log cabin of mine on the Restigouche, where I lie in wait for salmon and dream dreams in the waiting."

"What do you dream?" Priscilla demanded.

"Of girls," said he audaciously.

"Many of them?" curiously and a trifle dubiously.

"Their name is legion."

"No doubt," remarked Priscilla, with a little quiver of her lip. "You have known a lot of them, met them in your travels, and all that," she added lamely.

"Yes, all of that."

There was a pregnant pause.

"There comes the Count de Lacaze," Priscilla announced in a relieved tone. "I suppose I must dance with him if he asks me."

"Do you mean that miserable little devil with the bilious complexion, who looks like a mildewed portrait of his ancestors and dances like a kangaroo?"

"He belongs to one of the oldest families in France," returned Priscilla indignantly, abjectly aware that she was repeating Constance's own words, which had been repeated to Constance by somebody else, but also seizing this auspicious occasion, for some occult reason, to defend her friend's new found trophy with warmth. "He owns several chateaux, and he is a very good fellow, they say, at heart."

"It's a pity," returned Stormouth, apparently unconvinced, "that his heart is not as conspicuously developed as his face."

"I presume you think that is remarkably witty," from Priscilla in a high, strained voice.

"Well," said Stormouth, with becoming modesty, "it may be said to have been to the point, may it not?"

"What is the point?" asked Priscilla cruelly.

But just here the scion of one of the noblest houses in France bent his much be ancestored body before her.

"The pleasure of another dance, mademoiselle?" he demanded in French.

"Certainly," returned Priscilla defiantly, gloriously triumphant in the consciousness that her accent was perfection and that Stormouth could not speak the Gallic tongue.

She rose and strolled away.

"Foreign noblemen be hanged!" muttered Stormouth under his mustache. "Sets the wind in that quarter, my little lady?"

Then, strangely uneasy, he made his way toward Aunt Mildred. She welcomed him very cordially, talked with him of her brother's family—which Stormouth did not hesitate to avow he had "looked up more than once"—and finally confided to him all her little woes, which were many, and her joys, which she, like most richly endowed and healthy persons, considered few.

Stormouth listened quietly. His arms were folded, and his head was bent. His eyes, stern and forbidding, were fixed upon two whirling figures at the end of the room, who appeared, to his critical gaze, to be giddily revolving in one spot.

"Mademoiselle," whispered the count, "will it be permitted that your august aunt may extend to me her hospitality in so far that I may renew this acquaintance, so happily begun, with herself and her charming niece?"

"We receive on Friday," Priscilla announced; then said gently: "I will never get along with you if you pay me such deliberate compliments. It makes me feel like a fool. Well bred people don't do it at home."

"But mademoiselle is in France, and in the highest aristocracy we consider it our privilege to pay them."

Priscilla sighed. "It seems to me," she said, "forced and strained somehow."

The count kissed her hand as he led her to her seat beside her aunt and bade both ladies au revoir.

"He dances like a humming top, does he not?" suggested Stormouth pleasantly, with what Priscilla considered unnecessary flippancy.

"He is not my idea of a humming top," Priscilla returned without meeting his laughing eyes.

"You are quite right," retorted Stormouth, with unmitigated good humor. "I have seen even better looking humming tops than that."

"I did not ask you for your opinion, Mr. Stormouth."

"Any information I can offer you is gratuitous, Miss Delno."

"I think you are unbearable!" Priscilla exclaimed.

"Priscilla!" said Aunt Mildred.

"Perfectly unbearable!" the girl reiterated.

Then there was an eloquent pause, in which Priscilla wished she had not come, and Stormouth wished he had not spoken.

"How is the voice?" asked Stormouth.

"Superb," answered Aunt Mildred, seeing her refractory niece was biting her lip frantically and endeavoring to control her temper, which had been violently disturbed out of its usual sweetness by some means invisible to Aunt Mildred.

"I am glad of that," said Stormouth. "I used to wish last winter, when I went back, that I had asked your niece to sing for me, so that I could perceive her improvement when I returned. Will you sing for me some day, Miss Priscilla?"

"If you wish," answered Priscilla, with reflective, unhappy eyes suddenly meeting his full.

Then she exclaimed suddenly, with a little restless sigh, "Let's go home now, and I will sing for you. It is not very late. There is a big fire in the drawing room, and—I hate it here."

Bidding Constance good night, and leaving a message for their hostess, the little party stole away under cover of the starry night, and, hailing a passing cab, returned to the Avenue Montaigne.

Aunt Mildred went off to stir up the maid and institute a quiet little supper. Priscilla stood in the firelight, pulling off her gloves. Then she seated herself at the piano, and, seemingly forgetful of Stormouth, began to sing.

Her voice was very sweet and fresh, with a rich unusual quality in the medium notes which was sympathetic and hinted of a nature as yet unaware of its strength.

Stormouth listened silently.

When she had finished, she rose and went toward him.

He was standing with his elbow on the mantelpiece, his hand over his eyes, looking from under it at the flames.

"You don't like my voice, do you?" she inquired.

"Yes, I like it," he answered.

"Your sister sang," suggested Priscilla. "Does it make you sad to hear me?"

"Not sad," said Stormouth, "only it takes me back. I wonder why women always desire the unattainable and seem to experience an acute satisfaction in putting from them the wealth which lies within their grasp."

"Ah, why, indeed?" returned Priscilla. And then as Aunt Mildred entered she turned swiftly and ran toward her to pull her to the fire.

"Why were you gone so long, dear?" she cried ungratefully. "We were bored to death. I sang for Mr. Stormouth, and he rewarded me by asking the most stupid conundrums."

He returned her glance for glance.

"Yes," he said concisely, "I asked one, and Miss Priscilla answered another."

A CURIOUS MAIL SERVICE.

A Small Boat Carrying the Letters, Intrusted to the Mercy of the Waves.

St. Kilda is the most westerly island of the Hebrides, lying isolated in the Atlantic some fifty miles to the west of the main group. For nine months of the year that island is cut off from communication by boat or steamer with the outside world.

Its inhabitants are a hardy Celtic race, who live in a rather primitive way, and who speak only the Gaelic language.

During their long isolation throughout the winter months they endeavor to send word of their welfare to friends on the mainland by committing to the sea some roughly constructed "mail-boats."

A piece of wood some two or three feet in length is hewn into a roughly shapen hull. A cabin is then hollowed out amidships, for the purpose of holding a strongly secured tin canister, into which the letters destined for transmission have been placed.

The canister, having been covered with oiled cloth, is placed in the cabin, which is then roofed in by a piece of wood nailed to the deck, a layer of oiled cloth being also securely tacked over the cabin roof.

In order to attract the attention of any one who may subsequently chance to pick up the little boat, the legend OPEN is carved in rude letters upon the deck.

In case of the boat becoming waterlogged, a small buoy is attached, by means of a stout cord, to the prow of the curious little craft, which is then launched into the sea.

A strong sea current runs from St. Kilda in a northeasterly direction toward the mainland, and by it the boat is borne along, and is usually cast ashore on one of the larger islands opposite, or the mainland, in about a fortnight, but sometimes these mail-boats, having rounded the North of Scotland, have been washed up on the shores of the Orkney and Shetland Islands.

When discovered, the letters are forwarded to the responsible authorities, who see them safely transmitted to their respective destinations.—Pearson's Weekly.

CRYING FOR HELP.

Lots of It in Plainfield, But Daily Growing Less.

The kidneys cry for help.

There is no organ in the body so delicately constructed or so important to health.

The kidneys are the filters of the blood.

If they do not filter the blood very soon becomes foul and poisonous.

Anybody knows that there can be no health where there is poisoned blood.

Backache is one of the first indications of kidney trouble.

Doan's Kidney Pills are what is wanted.

Are just what overworked kidneys need.

They strengthen and invigorate the kidneys—help them to do their work—never fail to cure any case of kidney disease.

Read the proof from a Plainfield citizen.

Mr. Richard Day, of 134 East Front street, says: "I was troubled at times with symptoms of kidney complaint for four years. My chief difficulty was a miserable pain across my back and a sort of lame feeling over my kidneys. Standing any length of time or walking any distance aggravated it greatly. I was never sick much in my life and consequently never took much medicine, so when I first began having these attacks I paid but little attention to them. They, however, grew worse instead of better, so I had to look about for a remedy. I read quite frequently in our papers about cures brought about by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills, so I got a box at L. W. Randolph's drug store, and after taking them I felt greatly relieved. I have recommended them to my friends, and those who have used them speak very highly in their praise. I consider that Doan's Kidney Pills are a splendid remedy for complaints like mine."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers; price 50 cents a box. Mailed on receipt of price by Foster Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

The games were postponed ones in the Central Journal Bowling League. It took the visitors one game to get used to the alleys and then they carried off the two following without much trouble. The local team did not do any distinguishing work. None of the scores were high. The individual scores were as follows:

PAY FOR ELECTION OFFICIALS.

Assemblyman Murray Introduces the First Bill in the Lower House.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, Jan. 17th—The new lawmakers got together last evening for the first Monday night session, that ancient and honorable custom which has been so carefully followed for so many years.

The most important bill introduced came from Senator Braun, of Passaic county. It provides for the payment of $1 a day to each private from New Jersey in the Spanish American war, dating from the time of his enlistment to the day that he is mustered out. The bill provides that not more than $100 shall be paid to a volunteer. The members of the Naval Reserve are to be beneficiaries under this bill as well as National Guardsmen and volunteers. The money is to be paid out of the receipts of the State from corporation taxes. It is not believed that the bill will pass, as it would require several hundred thousand dollars to meet its requirements.

In the House, which was called to order by Speaker Watkins, twenty-five bills were introduced. The first came from Assemblyman Murray, of Union county, and fixes the compensation of election officers in cities of less than 20,000 population at $5 a day for registration work and $10 for election day.

THE LAND OF SHAKESPEARE.

Interestingly Described in Lecture of Prof. Albert H. Smyth.

Prof. Albert H. Smyth, professor of English at the Philadelphia High School, who was so well received in the University lecture course, gave an illustrated lecture on "The Land of Shakespeare" in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church last evening for the benefit of the Young Ladies' Mission Band of the Presbyterian churches. Owing to the storm, the audience was somewhat smaller than it otherwise would have been. Those who did brave the elements heard a very interesting discourse. The lecture was illustrated with a large number of views taken at and near Stratford-on-Avon, England, under the personal direction of Prof. Smyth.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver, of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongued coated, pain continually in the back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters;' and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50cts., guaranteed, at L. W. Randolph's Drug Store.

the city between $1,800 and $2,000. The work according to the ordinances, which were introduced by Mr. Barrows, has to be completed by May 30th.

Another important step taken by the Council was through the ordinance offered by Mr. VanHerwerden which provides for a change in time for the payment of taxes. According to the ordinance the time will be changed from December 20th to November 20th, and the Commissioners of Appeal will meet the fourth Tuesday in October of each year. This ordinance was laid on the table till the next meeting at the request of Mr. VanHerwerden, so that the matter can be fully discussed before adoption.

Mr. VanHerwerden also introduced the subject of purchasing a complete and more up-to-date set of city maps for the help and guidance of the Board of Assessors, and he then moved that the committee on assessment and collection of city taxes be authorized to purchase such a set of maps at an expense not to exceed $700. This motion was adopted.

The bonds of Constables John Gjettiesen, W. R. Mattox and Amos Moffett were received and filed. Mr. Buckle, chairman of the police board, offered a resolution that the sum of $50 be appropriated to clean the city jail. This resolution was adopted, and there being no further business the Council adjourned.

LONG DELAYED ENTERTAINMENT.

Planned to Give it Before Christmas—Took Place Last Night.

The entertainment which was to have been given by Howell Division, Sons of Temperance, before Christmas, finally came off last night, having been postponed two times. The first postponement was on account of the grip, which had attacked over half the members. The second postponement was on account of a bad storm, and last night the attendance was interfered with again by the weather.

The programme consisted of an address by Benjamin Hand, recitations by Miss Westphal and two dialogues, "Pull-backs" and "No Cure, No Pay," by several ladies.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

the same spirit may continue to prevail and that favorable action will be limited to those measures only which are worthy of assuming the form of positive enactment. Let us abandon the notion that in some form of law it is desirable to find means to remove every fancied evil or temporary inconvenience and to provide for every imaginary method of conduct. It is better that the laws should be fewer in number and comprehend within their scope objects of moment than that numerous enactments which are limited in operation and only temporary in importance should find place on the statute book. The evil effects and inconvenience resulting from legislation of the last mentioned character have made necessary the appointment of the several commissions to codify the laws relating to various subjects. They have been obliged to harmonize provisions of numerous conflicting statutes, remove redundancies and correct obscure or careless forms of expression in order to embody in one clear, concise and explicit act all laws relating to the topic which formed the subject of their labors. It has required the exercise of great skill and care, and especial credit is due to these gentlemen who have gratuitously given their time and services in the prosecution of a work so advantageous to the state. There is need for a similar revision and codification of laws relating to other topics, and it is my intention in due time to appoint commissions for this purpose.

In this connection one subject presents itself which by reason of the great interests involved calls for earnest and immediate attention. I refer to the laws relating to cities and other municipalities. Scattered through many pages of the statute books and forming the subject matter of numerous chapters of laws are to be found the provisions relating to this form of government. They are conflicting, doubtful and obscure. They have frequently been the subjects of litigation and have received judicial interpretation. At times they have received constructions seemingly contradictory. Few dare hazard an opinion as to the constitutionality of a proposed enactment, so great is the uncertainty in which the power of the legislature relating to this subject is now involved and so subtle have been the distinctions made as to the required tests of a valid act. I believe radical measures are required to remove the present embarrassing condition. Some general and uniform act for all cities is necessary if the present uncertainty is to be removed. A mere codification of existing laws will not remove the trouble. It may be necessary to modify or repeal the provisions of some special charters if a general form of municipal government be devised, but in doing this the common good of all would be promoted at the possible expense of the few who might be temporarily affected. In such a scheme provision could be made for simpler and more effective methods for the administration of municipal affairs, the necessity for which is manifested in the general dissatisfaction and desire for change which now exists. The advantages which would follow the adoption of some carefully devised law are manifest.

I think the legislature should appoint or authorize the executive to name a commission to consider the subject and prepare such a plan for the government of cities as they may think proper after a full investigation.

I wish also to direct attention to the growing surplus in the treasury. So prolific are the state's sources of revenue that its annual income during the last fiscal year amounted to more than $2,000,000, exclusive of the proceeds of the school tax.

Keeping pace with the growth of the receipts, the state fund balance has now reached a large amount. A deficiency existed in 1889, but this balance fund is now represented by about $1,000,000. The amount therein has increased, notwithstanding the fact that disbursements out of state and school funds have each year been larger and have increased in amount from about $1,500,000 in the year of the deficiency to more than $2,000,000 in the last fiscal year.

The increase in disbursements is partly to be accounted for by the sums required for the needs of a growing state and partly by the sums expended for educational purposes and in the erection and improvement of state institutions, including armories. In so far as the revenues of the state have been spent for these objects there is little ground for just criticism or complaint. Something of a permanent and useful character stands in place of the moneys expended, or benefits have been received by the public which fully compensate them for the disbursements. But one of the largest items of increase is to be found in the amount annually appropriated for charitable and reformatory purposes. This sum has increased from about $200,000 spent in 1884 to more than $400,000 spent in 1898. The amount now annually disbursed represents about 17 per cent of the state's total yearly expenditures. This increase is so striking and has grown so rapidly as to suggest the inquiry whether there cannot be devised some means of retrenchment without injury to those entitled to the bounty of the state. It may well be that many of the inmates of our institutions are now supported at public expense who are not rightly entitled to receive the help of the state.

There is little likelihood of further demands for large, extraordinary expenditures in the immediate future except in one or two instances. If economy be practiced and the income received by the state shows no appreciable falling off, the state fund is not likely to decrease. It is more likely to assume proportions which will be far larger than the needs of the state require. Its existence will prove a constant inducement to extravagance or unwise expenditure. The funds should be maintained at such an amount as prudence and a due regard to the demands thereon, which may be reasonably anticipated, may suggest. Any sum in excess thereof should be wisely disposed of in relieving the burdens of local taxation. Already some measures in this direction have been adopted without endangering the state's interests or seriously affecting its balances. To what extent, if any, further distribution should be made requires very careful consideration. Many ways in which it can be done readily suggest themselves. There might be returned to the different municipalities that part of the income which is derived from taxes assessed against property therein located. This method is open to the very serious objection that the revenues of the state are uncertain in amount and vary from year to year, as do also the amounts required for legitimate objects of expenditure. A permanent diversion of a portion of its funds might seriously hamper the state and prevent it from meeting just and pressing demands. It is questionable whether this plan would bring about the local relief which those favoring it believe would come from its adoption. It is a matter of common observation that expenditures in municipalities are usually limited by the amounts subject to their disposal, and it is within the range of probability that means would be found to dispose of moneys thus returned without a corresponding reduction of tax rate.

It would be better, in my judgment, under existing circumstances, if any action is taken by the legislature, to devise some plan whereby the amount diverted should not be a fixed annual sum, but one varying according to the condition of the treasury and the claims likely to be made thereon. Appropriations could be made for objects for the support of which the people of the state are now paying direct taxes. In this way the amount now annually raised for the support of public schools could be reduced or some means might be devised whereby, upon an equitable apportionment, the expenses of the various counties for the support of their courts could in part be defrayed.

In this connection and as constituting one of the objects for which extraordinary expenditure may be needed I wish to call your attention to the incompleted buildings of the state reformatory at Rahway. From time to time there have been appropriated and expended on their account various sums, aggregating $185,000. Work on these buildings is now and has been practically for more than a year at a standstill. In its incompleted form the building now partly erected stands as a monument to the folly with which the undertaking was conceived or to the lamentable lack of good judgment shown in not pushing the work to completion. There may be room for honest difference of opinion as to the wisdom of finishing the buildings in accordance with the extensive plans originally authorized. The sum estimated to be necessary for this purpose is a large one—in the minds of many larger than is warranted in accomplishing the objects of a reformatory. There is a need, however, for some new buildings in which to confine our criminals. Increased accommodations must be provided either here or elsewhere. From the annual report it appears that the state prison is again overcrowded, notwithstanding the recent addition to the number of its cells. Increased accommodation, however, is not all that is demanded. It is of the greatest importance that we should begin at the earliest possible moment a system of prison treatment which, wherever tried, has proved so beneficial in the reformation of criminals. Motives of humanity and selfish interest alike prompt this undertaking. It will be within the province of the legislature to determine whether the work shall be completed as originally designed or whether the present plans shall be so modified as to call for the expenditure of a less sum of money without interfering with the method of treatment of prisoners which it is proposed to follow. These statements are not intended to impute a reckless extravagance in the work already done. I believe that the strictest honesty has characterized every disbursement. The buildings are models in simplicity of design, and there is an absence of elaborate and exterior ornamentation calling for useless expenditure. I hope that the legislature will give earnest attention to the matter in order that the interests of the state may be served and the inauguration of a great and beneficial work no longer delayed.

There is another subject to which reference can be appropriately made at this time, for it is one in the proper solution of which the public at large are greatly interested. I refer to the great and increasing value of franchises possessed and exercised by corporations who render public services for pay. Ample proof of this value is to be found in the vast increase in the amount of interest bearing securities and stock issued by them. This increase in value is due to many causes. Among those that readily suggest themselves are the rapid growth of our cities, the diminished cost of constructing and extending quasi public works and inventions that facilitate and at the same time decrease the expense of operation. Corporations which supply public necessities in this state have been capitalized in recent years at many times the cost of their property and vastly in excess of what it would cost to reconstruct them. It is admitted that the public have derived great benefit from the growth of these corporations in the way of better service and lower rates, but this benefit, it is asserted, is less than it might have been if obligations had not been unnecessarily incurred to pay interest on bonds issued to represent the estimated value of the franchises enjoyed. It is not the policy of these companies to pay large dividends on their stock, but rather to find reasons from time to time for increasing issues of their bonds. These are often widely distributed among small investors, and thereby such transactions are rendered more secure. If the charges are true and there are good reasons why past proceedings of this kind cannot be undone, it is all the more important that they should be regulated in the future.

We all fully realize the importance of dealing with this matter in a conservative spirit. The prosperity of a state depends largely on the security which it gives to the capital invested therein. Those obligations, however, which are issued for the estimated value of a franchise do not properly represent capital if that value is based upon receipts from excessive charges made for public service. Popular discontent has led to much unwise and injurious legislation on this subject in other states. We should profit by the mistakes that have been made and devise some just and effective remedy, if one be needed. In some of the states maximum rates have been arbitrarily fixed by statute, but this is a crude method of dealing with the problem and often unfair in its application to the differing conditions of various localities. A rate that is reasonable in one place may be unreasonable in another. In other states commissions have been authorized by law to fix rates after a semijudicial investigation of conditions in each particular case. Experience has shown, however, that it is difficult to examine such legislation and proceedings within rational bounds. In several instances rates thus fixed have been so manifestly unfair that the courts have been constrained to enjoin their enforcement in order to prevent confiscation. Such legislation draws into our courts questions that are not properly of a judicial character, and it would be unfortunate indeed if this state should be compelled to enact laws of the kind referred to in order to find a remedy for the alleged evil. If legislation is to be enacted, it should be only after a full investigation into all of the facts and should be free from the objectionable features which I have mentioned.

Events which have been most notable in the history of our country have transpired since the legislature last convened. A war has been waged and brought to an honorable and successful close. Victories on land and sea, the most splendid in the history of the world, have been won. Our brave soldiers and sailors knew not a single defeat. For them no odds were too great, no difficulties brought dismay. Important and lasting will be the influence of the contest thus waged. We are now as never before respected as a powerful and a just people—fearless in the cause of right, forbearing in time of victory. Henceforth our place is prominent in the councils of the nations. New conditions confront us, new problems demand solution, but we meet them courageously. A special significance is to be found in these momentous and swiftly passing events. Our national spirit has been quickened and our people united in sentiment. Old prejudices have disappeared, and old wounds have been healed. No section, no class, has yielded to another in display of loyalty and devotion. When the honor of the country was at stake and its safety was threatened, there came from all over this broad land an eager response to the summons to arms. Today, as citizens of one state, we can rejoice with the citizens of other states over the victories won and the honors achieved and gladly share with them the glory that belongs to all.

New Jersey has cause for special pride in the zeal and patriotism shown by its citizens. Quick and in numbers greater than allotted was their response to the call for soldiers, and bitter was the disappointment of those whose eager proffer of service was refused. Whether on land or on sea New Jersey soldiers and sailors so demeaned themselves that honor and credit came to the state. For fidelity, for intelligence, for willing and patient service during trying times and under discouraging circumstances, they pre-eminently distinguished themselves and by their conduct won the commendation of all. To them is due all honor and from the people of the state a grateful recognition of their valor and patriotism.

Many, if not all, of them have made unusual sacrifices. Their continued service has entailed upon them and upon those dependent on them for their support unusual hardships and burdens. The compensation which they have received from the national government, limited as it is, cannot be expected to fully reimburse them for their financial losses. In what especial way, whether by pecuniary compensation or otherwise, the state shall make recognition of their sacrifices is for the legislature to determine. In the justice and the wisdom of its conclusions I have every confidence.

I desire on this occasion to renew my pledge to serve unselfishly and without fear the people of our great commonwealth. I shall to the utmost of my power and with earnest purpose endeavor at all times to guard their interests and promote their happiness. In my efforts I bespeak the generous aid and support of my fellow citizens and look for guidance and help to the Supreme Ruler of all nations.

THE GRIP EPIDEMIC IS LOSING ITS HOLD.

Number of New Cases Is Rapidly Diminishing.

IN COUNTRY DISTRICTS NOW.

THE EPIDEMIC WAS FIRST FELT IN NEW YORK.

Then It Spread to Plainfield and Other Suburban Cities—Now it is in Power in the Country Villages—State of Conditions at German Valley—Most of the Cases are Not Considered Severe.

During the last month there has not been a household in Plainfield that has not felt the ravages of the grip. That obstinate little disease has managed to get a foothold in almost every home, and in some cases every member of the family has fallen victim to it. Just a week ago, however, the grip seemed to loose its foothold. There were scattering cases here and there, of course, but there was a noticeable decrease in the number of new cases.

Regarding this decline of its power, a prominent Plainfield physician pointed out the facts. There was no doubt, he said, that the epidemic of the disease in Plainfield was over. The grip had made its first appearance, he said, in the great centres like New York. There it was felt severely. Two weeks after that it made its appearance in the nearby suburban cities and towns, like Plainfield. Two weeks later, the country regions began to feel the grip. In the country towns and villages the grip epidemic is now prevalent, whole families being ill with the disease. The physician referred to German Valley, a little place in Hunterdon county, where there is illness in every family at present. In some cases, every member of the family is ill and there is none left to wait on them.

It was evident that the grip followed the lines of trade. Plainfield, being in constant communication with New York, soon found the grip prevalent among its citizens. Then the farmers caught the infection and transferred it to their homes where it has gradually spread. The disease has not been severe in most cases and has only resulted seriously where the sufferers took chances and exposed himself or herself too soon after recovery.

The bids for the bonds were received from bankers and financial institutions in Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Cincinnati and elsewhere. They were finally awarded to the Somerville Dime Savings Bank, whose bid was $15,541 for the entire issue of $15,000. The next highest bidder was the New Brunswick Savings Institution, with a bid of $15,459 for the lot.

WORK OF BABY CAMP.

HEALTH-GIVING TRIPS TO MOUNTAIN FOR LITTLE ONES.

Those in Charge Urge That Enough Money be Contributed to Carry on the Work Next Summer—Every Little Sum Helps.

At the last meeting of the Baby Camp committee a motion was made that a report of the work done during the summer should be published so that the people of Plainfield would learn more about this worthy object.

The Camp was in readiness from July 1st, but there were no little ones to be taken there until the last of the month.

During the summer there were sixteen trips made and from twenty-five to thirty babies cared for. Out of this number there were only two deaths.

Our expenses were quite heavy and in order to meet them several appeals were made in the papers for contributions.

These were promptly responded to and we wish to thank our kind friends for their hearty and liberal response. This amount enabled us to carry out our work to the satisfaction of the committee.

We trust that more people in this city and nearby towns will not forget this work and remember that the time is fast approaching to open the Camp again. This cannot be done without more money, as the balance in the treasury is very small.

We would like to have the children become interested in this work and try and raise money by holding fairs and entertainments to help our cause along. They are always so successful in their undertakings.

This last summer there was a fair held by the "Sunbonnet Club," at which they realized almost $6. This was enough to pay for two trips to the camp and even though it seems a small amount to us it means a great deal to the poor little sick babies.

It would give the committee great pleasure to have more of our people of Plainfield visit the camp during the summer. We feel sure their hearts would be touched by these little ones and they would fully realize the need of this work.

Much credit is due Miss Hartranft who is in charge of the camp. We all feel that we can't speak too highly of her on account of the wonderful work she is doing among the poor our city. She never tires of her duties and is always ready to lend a helping hand to some poor suffering soul.

The committee trusts that the contributions toward this greatly-needed work will begin to come in early so they can make their plans for the coming summer and there won't be so much anxiety about their finances as last year.

The contributions can be sent to Miss L. Butler, East Front street.

What Is It Worth?

Since The Daily Press has offered as its first premium to the most successful worker for Press subscribers a full scholarship for the commercial course in the Plainfield Business College, it is well to consider for a moment the value of such a prize. It includes a thorough drill, not only in bookkeeping, but also in arithmetic, commercial law, penmanship, grammar, spelling, correspondence, banking and business forms. In short, it means a practical business education. Such a course is just what many young people of both sexes greatly need. And such a scholarship is well worth seventy-five dollars.

Swallowed a Five Cent Piece.

A young son of William Goff, of 511 South Second street, swallowed a nickel yesterday. Its mother saw the child put the piece of money into its mouth, and catching it up gave it several blows on the back which dislodged the coin from far down in the throat and made the little one cough it up.

AN OPPORTUNITY

Does not often come the way of young men and women to secure a fine business education at a cost that consists only of devoting spare moments to work that requires no experience.

The Subscription Contest

EXCITING TESTIMONY OF CHURCH TRUSTEE.

Lawyer Called Him a "Liar" and Lawyer Termed a "Stinker."

JOHN GOODWIN HAD HIS SAY.

TRIAL OF THE SUIT AGAINST THE FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST.

Rev. Benjamin Hand Claims That He is Unable to Collect $70 That He Has Loaned the Church—Minister and Church Pillars Heard in Court—Lawyers Sum up in Great Style, But Jury Couldn't Agree.

A portion of the numerous troubles that have for sometime past been brewing in the First Church of Christ were thoroughly aired yesterday afternoon in a suit brought before Justice Mattison by Rev. Benjamin Hand, formerly lay preacher of the church, against the church for the recovery of $70, which sum Mr. Hand claimed was part of $183.53 that the church owed him. It appears that sometime ago Mr. Hand loaned the church the above amount to help them out of financial trouble, and that the trustees promised to pay him back. After the trustees had given several notes in an attempt to liquidate the debt, Mr. Hand retired from the church and John Goodwin was elected to fill his place. It was then that the payments on the notes ceased, and Mr. Hand sought legal advice. He secured the services of Lawyer Winfield S. Angleman and a suit was instituted. Lawyer S. S. Swackhamer was secured to represent the church, and the case was tried yesterday afternoon before Justice Mattison and a jury of twelve men, consisting of A. J. Winckler, A. B. King, John Case, Thomas McGann, Francis Whiteley, D. W. Beard, Charles Emmons, Elias Allen, J. D. Anderson, C. E. Cranston, J. J. Stahl and R. H. Dailey.

Among the witnesses called for the defense were Rev. H. W. McKane, pastor of the church, trustees John Ackerman, John Goodwin and treasurer, Joseph Shultise. Mr. Hand did not call any witnesses.

The case throughout was exciting. The chief witness was John Goodwin. He wanted to have his say and he had it. When he was on the stand he made some remark that did not suit the plaintiff's lawyer, and the latter gave expression to his feelings by calling the witness a liar. The witness replied by saying "You're a stinker!"

The point in question seemed to be as to whether the church should be held responsible for promises made by the trustees or whether the trustees should be sued for the amount asked for by the plaintiff. The defendants claimed that they had not received value. The church claimed that they would pay the amount asked if the plaintiff would submit an itemized bill. Mr. Hand claimed that there was an itemized bill in possession of one of the officers of the church, but that they would not produce it. There were lots of books offered in evidence to show that everything was kept straight, but that once itemized bill was missing.

After the witnesses were examined and everybody had enjoyed themselves the lawyers began to get in their fine work. Mr. Swackhamer took the floor first and summed up his side of the case in a glowing and eloquent manner. He depicted the little church struggling for an existence, and claimed that it was a blast on the name of the church of God that anyone should sue the First Church of Christ. He insisted that the trustees of the church should be held responsible for the debt, as under the peculiar ruling of this church the members are not liable for debts contracted by the trustees. Mr. Swackhamer pictured vividly how dear this church is to heart of Pastor McKane and his flock, and how cruel it would be to make them pay the amount asked and thus cripple the church.

Mr. Angleman, for the plaintiff, followed. He at once began to show that the defendants were trying to shirk the payment of an honest debt. He thought that the church should stand by the actions of the trustees. He cited numerous cases in print that showed the strength of his statements that the church should pay its debts.

Mr. Angleman then turned his attention to Mr. Goodwin and remarked that he made trouble for everybody. He referred to him as a gust of wind, and said that everything went along smoothly until he became a member of the board of Trustees of the church, and then the trouble began.

After the lawyers had concluded Justice Mattison charged the jury

GREAT MEN DIFFERED.

PROF. MACE TALKS OF NATIONALITY AND DEMOCRACY.

Nearly All of the Early Statesmen Had Widely Differing Plans of How to Make a Great Nation of United States.

Prof. Mace continued his lectures in the University Extension course on American history last night in the Y. M. C. A. Hall. Before commencing the lecture the speaker spent a half hour asking and answering questions concerning last week's lecture, and in this way impressing what he had said upon his hearers.

"The Mutual Approach of Nationality and Democracy" was the subject of the discourse, and it covered a period from 1803 1820. "Alexander Hamilton," said the lecturer, "believed in a strong National Government by the educated classes, but distrusted the plain people. He was right in the first and wrong in the second, but thoroughly honest in both. Thomas Jefferson trusted the common people, but feared a strong National Government. He was right in the first, wrong in the second, and honest in both.

"In 1801 Jefferson faced a hard problem, how to make his administration a success by diminishing the power and influence of the Nation and by magnifying the authority of the States. He tried this in his domestic policy by cutting down the Army and Navy and by repealing the excise tax and the stamp duty. This saved many millions each year, but foreign affairs spoiled his plans.

"The War of 1812 forced Madison and his party to exercise every power of the Nation, stated or implied in the Constitution, which would bring the war to a successful end. That the party of Jefferson was rapidly becoming Federalist was seen in the measures it proposed and carried out after the war closed.

"The Federalist party was fast becoming a States-Rights party. It opposed the War of 1812, held the Hartford Convention of 1814, and defended its conduct by an appeal to the very doctrines which Jefferson and Madison had embodied in the Kentucky and Virginia Resolutions. This killed the Federal party, and with the naturalization of Democracy brought in the 'Era of Good Feeling.'"

THE SAD STORY OF A NEW JERSEY DOGBERRY.

DEFENDS THE JUSTICES OF PEACE.

Paterson Man Says They are Poorly Paid and Terribly Abused by Unthinking People.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Paterson, Jan. 18—Martin H. R. VanHovenberg, president of the State Association of Justices and Constables of New Jersey, has made public a statement of the objects of the organization. He declares that justices and constables are the most abused and most poorly paid class of officials in the State. The remedy for this condition, he says, "is to be found in the appointment by the Governor of a commission, consisting of justices of the peace, to be named by the association, to draft a coherent, moderate and reasonable bill, for relief, covering all the points at issue, to be presented to the next (not the present) Legislature for approval.

"I hold," the letter says, "that although we have been unnecessarily and unmercifully crowded, for the benefit of the District Courts, to the great detriment of poor suitors, yet, that there need be no unnecessary antagonism between such courts and the courts for the trial of small causes, the District Courts, now being courts of record could constitute an intermediate tribunal, to which an appeal from the justices' courts could be easily and inexpensively taken when circumstances seemed to require.

"The office of justice of the peace being a constitutional one, must continue to exist, at least for the present, and as long as it does to emasculate it in various ways and to deprive justices in cities of all civil jurisdiction whatever, is to offer a direct premium to incapacity and dishonesty in the administration of the office, and to such unwise enactments the present and disgraceful and unsatisfactory state of affairs is directly chargeable."

TWELVE FREIGHT CARS MADE A BAD WRECK.

Broken Axle Cause of Accident on P. & R. R. R.

THE ROAD IS BLOCKADED.

PHILADELPHIA TRAINS GO BY A ROUNDABOUT ROUTE.

Wreck Occurred Early This Morning Near Hamilton Station—No One Was Injured—Roadbed Torn up for Half a Mile—Wrecking Crew Hard at Work—Passengers Had to Walk Around Wreck.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, Jan. 18.—A disastrous freight wreck occurred about three o'clock this morning near Hamilton Station on the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, not far from Belle Mead. A heavily laden fast freight train, east bound, had passed through Belle Mead and was making fast time when an axle on one of the cars in the centre of train broke. In a few minutes the heavy cars were piling up on each other, and the contents, steel tubing, sheet iron, etc., were being scattered in all directions. Twelve cars were wrecked, and the tracks and roadbed was torn up for a distance of nearly a half mile. The debris was thrown in all directions, leaving the road in a very bad condition.

Word was sent back to the nearest telegraph station and all eastbound trains were either held or sent through to New York by the way of Bethlehem, Pa., where the North Penn Railroad connects with the Central Railroad.

Very luckily no one was injured in the wreck, and the only damage was to the roadbed and the cars and contents. As quickly as possible word was sent for a wrecking crew and the work of clearing the tracks has been progressing rapidly.

A local train was run from this place to the nearest point to the wreck and passengers from Trenton were transferred from the other side. The passengers were obliged to walk about a half mile to get to the train that brought them through.

Lawyer Wm. Newcorn, of Plainfield, who was in Trenton last evening, secured passage as far as the wreck, and he, together with several other passengers, walked a half mile, where they secured a train that brought them home.

All of the freight was consigned to New York, and the value of the damage to it is not yet fully known.

HOUSE VAUDEVILLE.

Clever Way of Entertaining Arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Carney.

Last evening Mr. and Mrs. John H. Carney, of 40 Craig place, tendered a reception to their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Ritter, of Brooklyn. A large number of friends were present. A miniature stage was erected, and a feature of the evening was Prof. Sherwood in his tricks of legerdemain. Then came Master Richard Henry Ritter, who delighed all by his amusing recitation. Miss Edna Sebring, in her usual happy manner, rendered a soprano solo. Master Philip Ritter then recited "In the Meadow." Phonograph selections by George Voehl were given. Then came "Uncle Jack" Carney, who, in his original songs and sayings and in the character of an emigrant, more than amused all by humorous talk. A cornet solo by Prof. Guttman, as usual, was highly received. A solo by Mr. Stewart brought the entertainment to a close. Light refreshments were served, and then all departed for their homes.

Horse is Still Missing.

Another chapter in the somewhat famous horse case of Becker against Drake has been enacted. This time a search warrant was issued for the finding of the horse on the premises of Levi Bird, but when the search was made the animal had vamoosed. It is said the much involved equine was recently seen in the barn of Becker, but it is not there anymore. It is said that no more search warrants will be issued to gain control of the animal.

Progressive Mt. Olive.

The Clerk of the Mt. Olive Baptist church recently reported the financial condition of the church for the past seven months, beginning June 5th, 1898 and ending January 3d, of the present year. In all $1,042.95 was received during that time. The balance of the debt, $254, it is hoped will be paid within the next sixty days. The entire debt was $1,296 95, and all thus far has been raised without the aid of charity books or agents.

JURY ACQUITTED HIM.

ANDY MATHENSCHEK CLEARED OF ALL COMPLICITY IN THE AFFAIR.

Came Up in Middlesex Court at New Brunswick Yesterday—Charged With the Wrecking of a Trolley Car.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, Jan. 17—The trial of Andrew Mathenschek, of New Market, before Judge Strong and a jury in the Court of General Quarter Sessions of Middlesex county was held yesterday. The charge was malicious mischief and it was alleged that Mathenschek was one of a gang of young men that wrecked one of the Brunswick Traction Company's near Dunellen by placing a telegraph pole on the tracks.

Mathenschek was represented by Lawyer Robert M. Clark, of Plainfield. The witnesses for the defendant testified that the prisoner had left Taylor's Hotel the night of the trouble before the rest and had gone directly to Maier's Hotel without having anything to do with the trouble. The jury acquitted him.

Waldron, of New Brunswick, who was to come up on the same charge, had his trial set down for Jan. 25th.

VICIOUS ATTACK ON FARMER.

Desperate Farmhand Was Evidently Bent on Robbery.

Mr. Mellick, father of Dayton Mellick, the milkman, who lives in the vicinity of Mt. Pleasant, had an exciting experience a few days ago with a hired man. The employe, who was a foreigner, had completed his work and Mr. Mellick had paid him all that was due. The next day the hired man wanted more money, but Mr. Mellick told him that he would not give him any more and that he could quit if he was not satisfied.

This was the last seen of the foreigner until early the next morning when Mr. Mellick was at work near his barn. While trying to open the double doors he was almost knocked insensible by receiving a heavy blow on the head with the handle of a pitchfork. Mr. Mellick had presence of mind enough to put up his hand in self-defence, and as he did so warded off another blow.

As soon as the hired man learned that he had not knocked Mr. Mellick insensible he fled and has not been seen since. Mr. Mellick is sure the man intended to murder him for his money, for he acted in a very desperate manner.

The whereabouts of the man is not known, although every effort is being made to find him. The man is about 40 years of age and quite dark. He does not dress well and is rather uncouth in appearance.

ANOTHER VICTIM CAPTURED.

Harry Connett Said to Be Man Who Escaped Police Raid.

The man who escaped the raid of the police Monday night on the establishment in the Manning flats was arrested this morning while on his way to work. Harry Connett, sometimes known as Harry Hartpence, was arrested by the police and charged with being disorderly. When arraigned before City Judge Runyon this morning he pleaded guilty, but explained that he lived in that building and was just on his way to his room. The police tell a different story. The officers who made the complaint were not present, however, and so Judge Runyon reserved his decision until he could hear their testimony. Connett was then allowed to go on his own recognizance.

TRINITY CHURCH MORTGAGE CANCELED.

Generous Gift of $4,500 Made by B. A. Hegeman, Sr.

CHECK PRESENTED TODAY.

DONOR'S LOVE FOR THE CHURCH PROMPTED HIM TO DO IT.

He Was Treasurer of the Sinking Fund Established to Pay Off the Mortgage, Which Was Assumed to Raise Money to Pay for the Alterations Made on the Edifice a Year and a Half Ago.

B. A. Hegeman, Sr., of Sycamore avenue, is one of the few wealthy men who believe in not leaving all their bequests of money for good purposes till they have passed away, but instead to give liberally while they may yet appreciate, with those who are to be helped by their beneficiaries, the great good that the gift is to accomplish. And so it is that through Mr. Hegeman's generosity and intense interest in good work, Trinity Reformed church is today cleared of the debt it incurred about a year and a half ago in making some extensive improvements to their edifice.

In September, 1897, it was necessary to put a mortgage of $4,500 on the church property of that society in order to complete the alterations of the building then in progress. While the payment of the interest on the amount was not particularly burdensome to the members, it was nevertheless tacitly understood by the supporters of the church that everyone should aid as much as possible in reducing the amount of the mortgage from time to time, thus saving the interest that was constantly accruing on the loan, and to finally wipe out the whole debt.

With this end in view a sinking fund was established and Mr. Hegeman was made treasurer of it. All the members of the church then set to work to add small amounts to the fund, realizing that through the aggregate efforts and results of the many the debt would gradually melt away under the careful supervision of Mr. Hegeman. The frequent contributions that were made to the fund impressed Mr. Hegeman with the thought that the Lord loves a cheerful giver and helps those who help themselves.

And so it was that a few weeks ago Mr. Hegeman came to the conclusion that he would cancel the mortgage debt on the church and start the society free of obligations in a financial way. Consequently he drew a check for $4,500 and handed it to the treasurer of the church, George Gayle, this morning. After its receipt as church funds Mr. Gale in turn drew a check for the same amount in favor of Mrs. J. W. Perry, of Brooklyn, the mortgagee, and later in the morning J. Fred MacDonald, who negotiated the loan on the church, went to Mrs. Perry's home in Brooklyn and liquidated the indebtedness. In addition to the amount of the principal and interest Mrs. Perry was paid interest until February 16th next, so that she would not lose the use of her money for the month that it is calculated it will take to put it out on loan again. Mr. MacDonald left New York with the mortgage this afternoon and stopped at the County Clerk's office in Elizabeth, where he had the record cancelled, thus completing all formalities of securing the complete benefits of Mr. Hegeman's generous act.

The matter has been kept a secret, no one but Rev. Cornelius Schenck, the pastor, and two members of the church being aware of Mr. Hegeman's intentions, but now that the desire of his heart has been accomplished the fact is made public for the first time. Mr. Hegeman is one of Rev. Mr. Schenck's ardent admirers and supporters, and it was partially through his desire to see the latter unhindered in his work by the debt hanging over the church that he decided to make the liberal contribution.

It is due to the memory of Mrs. Hegeman, who recently died leaving a $5,000 legacy to the church, to be paid after the death of her husband, to state that the gift of the latter is in addition to the bequest made by her.

Wreck Victims Improving.

No change for the worse is noticed in any of the patients at Muhlenberg Hospital, and it is confidently believed that all will now recover. No new cases have been received recently, and none have been discharged since Wm. Chesire, of Bound Brook, went out yesterday.

Fred Endress, the butcher, is much improved from his tedious illness.

G. M. Rittenhouse, of East Sixth street, has gone west on a business trip.

LET US ARM YOU!

It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

SENATORIAL CONTESTS

Quay Falls Sixteen Votes Short of Victory.

DEPEW GETS 111 VOTES

A Long Dead Lock Seems Certain in Pennsylvania—Addicks and Gray Tied in Delaware—Hawley Re-elected in Connecticut.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 18.--Senator Quay received one hundred and twelve votes of the two hundred and forty-five cast in both branches of the legislature yesterday afternoon, and his friends said last night that they were well satisfied with the result of the first ballot.

It is Senator Quay against the field, and the indications are that there will be a deadlock lasting several days at least.

The Republicans are divided between Mr. Quay and eight "favorite sons" and the Democrats are united on Geo. A. Jenks.

The Senate and House voted separately yesterday and will take a ballot to-day in joint session.

Senator Quay's total strength in both houses was sixteen less than the number necessary to elect on joint ballot, assuming that the full membership of 254 is present, a condition that does not seem possible as there are several on the sick list now.

The essence of the situation is that so long as the anti-uay Republicans are united and the Democrats vote for Jenks, Senator Quay cannot be re-elected.

Voting for Mr. Depew.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 18.--The selection of a candidate for United States senator in the place of Edward Murphy, Jr., yesterday, was not attended with any especially interesting event in either branch.

At noon both the Senate and Assembly met. In the Senate the Republicans, twenty-seven in number, voted for Chauncey M. Depew, and twenty-three Democrats voted for Edward Murphy, Jr.

In the assembly eighty-four Republicans cast their votes for Chauncey M. Depew, and three Republicans who were absent were said to be in his favor.

By the Democrats sixty votes were cast for Edward Murphy, Jr., and four absentees were named as being in favor of Mr. Murphy.

No Choice in Delaware.

Dover, Jan. 18.--A separate ballot was taken for United States senator in the Senate and House at noon yesterday. The result was:

In the Senate—George Gray, Democrat, 7; Addicks, Republican, 4; William S. Hilles, Republican, 2; John G. Gray, Democrat, 1; Congressman L. Irving Handy, Democrat, 1; Colonel Henry A. Dupont, Republican, 1.

In the House--Addicks, 11; Dupont, 9; George Gray, 8; Handy, 2; John G. Gray, 2.

A ballot in joint session will take place to-day.

Senator Lodge Re-elected.

Boston, Jan. 18.--Republican United States Senator Henry C. Lodge was re-elected yesterday afternoon by the legislature. Two hundred and twenty-six votes were cast in the House, 159 for Mr. Lodge, 65 for Alexander B. Bruce, Democrat, and two for Winfield P. Potter of Newburyport, the Socialist candidate.

In the Senate the vote stood: Lodge 31; Bruce, 7. Two members failed to vote.

Hawley the Choice.

Hartford, Jan. 18.--The two branches of the Connecticut General Assembly yesterday afternoon took viva voce votes for a United States senator to succeed General Joseph R. Hawley.

General Hawley was elected in both branches. The votes stood:

Senate--Hawley 19, Morgan 2.

Senator Davis Succeeds Himself.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 18.--Cushman K. Davis will succeed himself as senator from Minnesota. The two houses of the legislature, voting separately, elected him at noon yesterday.

The vote was:

House--Davis 93, Towns 25.
Senate--Davis 43, Towne 17.
Total--Davis 136, Towne 42. Four of the members were absent.

Still Deadlocked in California.

Sacramento, Cal., Jan. 18.--On the seventeenth ballot for United States senator yesterday there was no change in the Republican vote.

The Democratic complimentary vote went to Stephen M. White.

Senator Cockrell Re-elected.

Jefferson City, Mo., Jan. 18.--Senator Cockrell was re-elected to his fifth term in the United States Senate by the legislature, the two houses voting separately.

The Ashes of Columbus.

Cadiz, an. 18.--The coffin containing the supposed remains of Christopher Columbus which arrived here from Havana on board the Spanish cruiser Conde de Venadito, and which was transferred to the auxiliary cruiser Giralda for conveyance to Seville, has been opened.

About thirty bones and some ashes were found in the casket. It was reclosed and will be received at Seville with great solemnity and deposited in the cathedral. The route of the procession will be lined with troops.

Say Ministers Will Resign.

Madrid, Jan. 18.--The newspapers here insist that certain ministers persist in their intention of resigning.

The Heraldo says that the minister of war, General Correa, has forbidden a ball which was to have taken place at the military club upon the occasion of the king's festival.

The British ambassador here, Sir Henry Drummond Wolff, has had a conference with the minister of foreign affairs, Duke Almodovar de Rio.

LIBRARIAN OF CONGRESS DEAD.

John Russell Young Passes Away in Washington.

Washington, Jan. 18.--John Russell Young, librarian of the Congressional Library, died at his residence here yesterday morning, after an illness of several weeks.

John Russell Young was a writer and journalist of note. He it was who accompanied General Grant around the world on his famous tour, and wrote up the experience of the party in a clear and attractive style, afterward publishing them in a book entitled "Around the World with General Grant."

He was later made minister to China, a post which he filled creditably. He was appointed librarian of Congress to succeed A. R. Spofford, who became his chief assistant.

Mr. Young was born in Pennsylvania in 1841, of Scotch parents, and was educated at New Orleans.

He became connected with the Philadelphia Press under John W. Forney and gained an editorial position upon that paper.

JOHN RUSSELL YOUNG.

He attracted the attention of Horace Greeley, who made him managing editor of the Tribune in 1865. He resigned this position and started the Standard in 1870.

In 1872 he joined the New York Herald staff and was selected to accompany General Grant around the world.

Mr. Young went to China as our minister in 1882. He took his bride with him and she died there.

During the commune in Paris Mr. Young was there and wrote an account of it that Wendell Phillips said was unexcelled for vividness and purity of English by Macauley's productions.

Bursting Fly-wheel Kills Two.

Jersey City, Jan. 18.--Two persons were killed and two injured by the bursting of a fly-wheel in Lorillard's tobacco factory here yesterday. The dead are James Delaney, engineer of the factory, and Norah McCarthy, a tobacco wrapper. Mary Hickey and Maggie Dillon, both employed in the establishment, were seriously injured by the accident.

The wheel, which weighed eighteen tons, controlled the action of the big engines which run the machinery of the factory. It was revolving at its usual rate of speed, when, without warning, it burst into many fragments.

The flying pieces struck Engineer Delaney, frightfully mangling him and killing him instantly.

Other portions of the wheel tore through the walls and ceilings like shells from a gun. One immense fragment crashed through a brick partition, into an alley and struck and instantly killed Norah McCarthy, who was passing at the time.

Mary Hickey and Maggie Dillon were scalded by escaping steam and though painfully injured, will recover.

Bride Shot by Her Rival.

A stylishly dressed and handsome young woman, said to be Miss Edna Raymond, entered the rooms occupied by Mr. and Mrs. John A. Hanna during the absence of the husband and opened fire on Mrs. Hanna with a revolver.

Four shots were fired in rapid succession, only one of which took effect. It struck Mrs. Hanna in the thigh and caused a painful wound. Miss Raymond, having apparently emptied her revolver ,then made her escape, and has not been located as yet by the police.

Mr. and Mrs. Hanna were married at Christmas. Up to a short time previous Hanna had kept company with Miss Raymond. Jealousy undoubtedly led to the shooting.

The Dingley Funeral Train.

Boston, Mass., an. 18.--The train bearing the body of the late Maine congressman, Nelson Dingley, from Washington, passed through this city yesterday morning.

Adjutant General Dalton presented a message of sympathy from Governor Wolcott to Congressman Boutelle, who was at the head of the House committee.

A beautiful floral design of ivy, sage palm leaves, American beauty roses, violets, lilies of the vallty and orchids, with a card and the words "From the Commonwealth of Massachusetts," was also brought by Mr. Dalton.

Highwaymen Try Murder.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 18.--Frederick Milliken, employed at the National Stock Yards, East St. Louis, was knocked insensible by highwaymen Monday night and robbed of money, watch and valuables and his body dragged across the railroad track in front of a fast approaching passenger train.

He was struck by the engine and hurled into a ditch. His left arm was torn into shreds and he was internally injured. His chances of recovery are slight. The highwaymen escaped.

M. Delcasse to Speak.

Paris, Jan. 11.--The minister of foreign affairs, M. Delcasse, has announced that at the close of the discussion of the foreign office vote of the budget in the Chamber of Deputies he will express his views on the Hispano-American war, the Roman Catholic protectorate in the East and the Fashoda incident.

STONE INAUGURATED

New Governor Takes the Oath of Office at Harrisburg.

THE INAUGURAL ADDRESS

Gen. Gobin Becomes Lieutenant Governor—Gov. Stone in His Address Warns Pennsylvania of Financial Peril—Investigating Committees Rarely Necessary.

Harrisburg, Pa., an. 18.--Colonel William A. Stone was yesterday inaugurated governor of Pennsylvania. General J. P. S. Gobin at the same time became lieutenant governor.

Colonel Stone succeeds General Daniel H. Hastings, and General Gobin takes the place of Walter Lyon.

Attorney General McCormick and other members of Governor Hasting's cabinet retired with him.

Secretary of the Commonwealth David Martin resigned as secretary of the commonwealth and qualified as member of the Senate from the Eighth Philadelphia district.

A feature of the inaugural parade was the fine appearance and marching of the National Guard, organized last summer to take the places of the troops that went into the volunteer service from the Guard for the war with Spain.

The entire regiments of the Guard were on parade under command of Major General George R. Snowden of Philadelphia.

The Survivors' Association of the One Hundred and Eighty-seventh regiment, Pennsylvania volunteers, in which Governor Stone served during the civil war, and numerous political and civic clubs were also in the procession.

The inaugural ceremonies took place at noon on the west side of the capitol, in the presence of the members of the general assembly, state officials and numerous other spectators.

The Rev. Dr. George S. Chambers, pastor of the Pine street Presbyterian church, offered prayer.

The certificate of election of Colonel Stone was read by Chief Clerk Miley of the Senate, after which the oath of office was administered to the new governor by udge Henry W. Williams of the state supreme court.

The principal part of the new governor's inaugural address was devoted to the discussion of the finances of the state. He announced that he would not approve bills which appropriated money beyond the amount of the revenues of the state; the revenues would have to be increased or the large school appropriations reduced. The latter he did not consider at present necessary, and he recommended the retention by the state of certain tax funds which under existing law are returned to the counties.

He spoke of the practice of carrying employes not authorized by law upon the rolls, and providing for their compensation in appropriation bills passed in the closing hours of the legislative sessions, and said that he would feel justified in withholding his aproval from any bills providing for the pay of employes not already authorized by law. In conclusion he said:

"I deem it also proper to express the hope that the present legislature may refrain from passing resolutions for investigating committees to investigate industrial and other questions where the necessity for such investigation is not clear. An investigation is never necessary unless to inform the legislative body upon existing evils. Where sufficient information exists to enable the legislative body to remedy admitted wrongs by legislation, there is no necessity for an investigation, and it is rarely that a subject comes before a legislative body where investigation and report are necessary to properly inform the legislators. These investigations withdraw the attention of the legislators from the proper scope and line of their legislative duties, prolong the session of the legislature and are unnecessarily expensive to the state."

Arrival of the Marquette.

New York, an. 18.--The Atlantic transport liner Marquette, which left London on the night of December 29 last, arrived at her dock here yesterday.

The usual time of the steamer in crossing the ocean is about ten days, but the delay on this midwinter voyage was due to the tempestuous weather encountered, and the fact that the vessel carried but eight hundred tons of cargo.

The passengers were ignorant of the fact that a large leak due to the breaking of several rivets, had flooded the hold No. 2 with water for eight days, and that, owing to the choking of the pipes leading to the steam pumps the latter were rendered useless.

To keep the steamer from being low at the head hand pumps had to be used, and the leak was prevented from flooding the entire compartment.

The cattlemen were set to work at the hand pumps and in gangs they remained at their posts until the steamer was docked.

When the Marquette was one day out one of the cattlemen, Louis Thomas, fell through an open hatchway into the hold. His dead body was found the next day and buried at sea.

Good News from Manila.

Washington, D. C., an. 18.--Advices from Manila read at the cabinet meeting yesterday were to the effect that the situation on the islands is very quiet.

The dispatch announced that the people who had moved out of the city on account of the alarming but unfounded reports, were quietly returning to their homes.

At Iloilo affairs are progressing satisfactorily, and the American officers and the individual insurgents are fraternizing freely on shore, and there is no sign of trouble.

A Little Spanish Bluff.

London, Jan. 18.--The correspondent of the Central News at Madrid says the Spanish government has decided to send delegates to the Philippines to treat for the release of the Spanish prisoners directly with the rebels.

Nervous Dyspepsia

To Gain Flesh, to Sleep Well, to Know What Appetite and Good Digestion Mean,

MAKE A TEST OF STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS.

No trouble is more common or more misunderstood than nervous dyspepsia. People having it think their nerves are to blame and are surprised that they are not cured by nerve medicines. The real seat of the mischief is lost sight of. The stomach is the organ to be looked after.

Nervous dyspeptics often do not have any pain whatever in the stomach, nor perhaps any of the usual symptoms of stomach weakness. Nervous dyspepsia shows itself not in the stomach so much as in nearly every organ. In some cases the heart palpitates and is irregular; in others the kidneys are effected; in others the bowels are constipated, with headaches; still others are troubled with loss of flesh and appetite with accumulations of gas, and sour risings and heartburn.

It is safe to say that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will cure any stomach weakness or disease except cancer of the stomach. They cure sour stomach, gas, loss of flesh and appetite, sleeplessness, palpitation, heartburn, constipation and headache.

Send for valuable little book on stomach diseases by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich. All druggists sell full-sized packages at 50 cents. Prof. Henry W. Becker, A. M., the well known religious worker and writer of St. Louis.

Secretary of the Mission Board of the German Methodist Church. Chief Clerk and Expert Accountant for the Harbor and Wharf Commission. Public Secretary for the St. Louis School Patrons' Association, and the District Conference of Stewards of the M. E. Church; also takes an active part in the work of the Epworth League, and to write on religious and educational topics for several magazines. How he found relief is best told in his own words.

"Some weeks ago my brother heard me say something about indigestion, and taking a box from his pocket said 'Try Stuart's Tablets.' I did, and was promptly relieved. Then I investigated the nature of the tablets and became satisfied that they were made of just the right things and in just the right proportions to aid in the assimilation of food. I heartily endorse them in all respects, and I keep them constantly on hand." 19 eod 9

B. R. FORCE,

A gentleman in New York City who had been using Ripans Tabules with beneficial and satisfactory results, recently sent some to his mother, living on a farm three miles from Newburgh, N. Y. He said he thought they would benefit her. She is 73 years old and has for a long time suffered from various ailments that have rendered her more feeble than she naturally would be even at that age. Her most annoying trouble was frequent dizzy spells, and when one of them came upon her she could not walk across a room. The beneficial results she experienced from Ripans Tabules are best expressed in words used in a letter to her son. She said: "I feel as though I had taken on a new lease of life. My poor old head feels as clear as a crystal since using Ripans Tabules. They have done me untold good, and I will not be without them again—never!"

A new style packet containing THE RIPANS TABULES in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at some drug stores—4 FOR FIVE CENTS. This low-priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (120 tabules) can be had by mail by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (TEN TABULES) will be sent for five cents.

COURT-MARTIAL FOR EAGAN.

The President's Decision Announced—Miles' Attitude.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 18.--President McKinley announced to the cabinet at its regular meeting yesterday that he had determined to court martial General Eagan.

Secretary Alger was not present at the cabinet meeting, but with Adjutant General Corbin had been in conference with the president on the subject prior to the cabinet session.

Just prior to the cabinet meeting General Miles made a rather unusual call upon two members of the cabinet, Secretaries Hay and Long. He had just returned to the city from New York and when spoken to with reference to the Eagan case adhered to his original declaration that this was not a time for him to act, if at all, leaving the implication that if the commissioners did not act, or the administration, it would then be time for him to take some step.

The details of the court martial were left to the secretary of war, who withdrew just prior to the beginning of the session.

The personnel of the court was not taken up, but a cabinet official said that he would not be surprised if General Wesley Merritt presided over the court.

Its specific charge against General Eagan will be that of conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman.

Locomotive's Axle Broke.

Elizabeth, N. J., Jan. 18.--An accident occurred to Royal Blue train No. 534 on the Central Railroad of New Jersey, bound east, Monday night, that created a panic among the passengers and badly wrecked the locomotive. The train was going at the rate of fifty miles an hour, when at Fanwood an axle on the locomotive broke, letting the locomotive down on the tracks.

It ploughed its way along the roadbed for a considerable distance, but the accident in some way caused the air brakes to act, bringing the train to a stop.

The disabled train was, after a long delay, towed to Jersey City by a freight locomotive.

No one was injured, though the passengers were badly shaken up.

British Reserve Fleet.

London, Jan. 18.--It is announced that the Portsmouth reserve fleet is not to be disbanded, as has been surmised from recent orders. The ships comprising the fleet are to return to their respective ports in order that the crews of the vessels may obtain shore leave, after which they will reassemble at Portland in the latter part of February.

This will enable the channel squadron to make a short cruise and engage in manoeuvring practice. This action is regarded as evidence that the government still considers the political situation very strained.

Cayuga Indian Claim.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 18.--Governor Roosevelt transmitted to the Assembly yesterday a communication from the state department of the United States, sent by Sir Julian Pauncefote, relating to the claims of the Cayuga Indians residing in Canada for a portion of the annuity paid to the tribe by the state of New York.

He asks that the state look into the justice of such claims.

The governor believes the claims to be of doubtful validity.

Dog Helped Highwaymen.

Chicago, Jan. 18.--Two masked men held up and robbed Dr. J. F. Cooper of San Francisco Monday night. The robbers were assisted by a great Dane dog, which sprang upon Cooper, but did not bite him, and ceased its attack as soon as he threw up his hands in response to the command of the robbers.

Dr. Cooper thinks that the dog must have been trained for the part it acted. After robbing him of $50 the highwaymen disappeared.

Boers Caused the Trouble.

Johannesburg, Jan. 18.--The Johannesburg Star declares that the disturbance which occurred last Saturday upon the occasion of the public meeting of British subjects to protest against the arrest of the chairman and secretary of the Uitlanders' League and to indorse a petition to the queen regarding the case of the Englishman Edgar, who was recently murdered by a Boer policeman, was organized by the Boer authorities.

To Impeach Austrian Ministry.

Vienna, Jan. 18.--In the reichsrath yesterday Herr Funke moved the impeachment of the Austrian ministry because of the administrative decrees regarding the provisional budget and the Austro-Hungarian compact.

The German element in the Chamber at once began a campaign of obstruction, which had been agreed upon at Monday's conference of the German deputies against all of the government proposals.

Fire on the Heathfield.

Queenstown, Jan. 18.--The British steamer Heathfield from New York arrived here yesterday.

Shortly after leaving New York a large fire was discovered in her forecastle, which was subdued with great difficulty.

One of the crew, Henry Murray, was burned to death.

Lower Rate of Interest.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 18.--Mr. Miles of St. Lawrence, introduced a bill in the Senate yesterday making the legal rate of interest in New York state five per cent.

It was introduced by request of the agricultural societies and grangers of northern New York.

Manila Censorship is Rigid.

London, Jan. 18.--The censorship established at Manila over telegraphic communications, applies to telegrams treating of matters of a political character, both incoming and outgoing.

The Reichsbank Reduces Its Rates.

Berlin, Jan. 18.--The Reichsbank has reduced its rate of discount from six to five per cent., and its rate of interest on advances from seven to nine per cent.

FILIPINO TROOPS RETIRE

5,000 Native Soldiers Withdraw From Around Manila.

SITUATION MUCH IMPROVED

German Consul Denies that Germans Are in League With the Filipino Government—Spanish Prisoners Leaving—Friars Will Not be Released.

Manila, Jan. 18.--Dr. Kruger, the German consul here, emphatically denied in an interview here yesterday that there was or had been any collusion either officially or personally on the part of himself or on the part of any of the resident Germans with the Filipino government.

He said that the German government ordered the consul at Iloilo not to accept the charge of the protection of Spanish interests, as General Rios had requested him to do so upon his withdrawal from Iloilo, for fear of complications with the American government.

Three hundred Spanish prisoners have left here for Spain on board the steamship Montserrat, leaving seventy-five hundred more to be repatriated.

The Filipino government at Malolos announces that it is preparing to release the Spanish civilian prisoners in the hands of the insurgents, but not the friars.

The American Filipino commission has not yet completed its work.

In the meantime the situation has somewhat improved. An insurgent newspaper announces that five thousand Filipino troops, which had re-enforced those around Manila a fortnight ago, have been withdrawn into the interior.

The paper also comments favorably upon Senator Foraker's recent speech in the United States Senate.

WHITE DEFENDS THE GERMANS.

Our Ambassador Denies that They Are Inciting Filipinos to Rebellion.

Berlin, Jan. 18.--The United States ambassador here, Mr. Andrew D. White said to the correspondent of the Associated Press:

"As a conclusive answer to the assertion that the Germans wish to stir the Filipinos against the United States one fact, out of many which may be mentioned, seems to be conclusive to the contrary. It is that from the beginning the German merchants in the Philippine islands have been the strongest advocates of American rule.

When the war with Spain was pending the head of one of the leading German houses at Manila came to Berlin, saw me, and urged the importance of our assuming sovereignty there and taking complete control. He spoke to the same purpose here at the foreign office and then went to Paris and saw various members of the peace commission and urged them most earnestly to the same ect. He insisted that the interests of the German merchants there demanded that our sovereignty over the islands be maintained and he has since furnished us with a document of great length on the subject, embodying statistical considerations of various sorts, wherefore he must have had the collaboration of many of his fellow merchants there.

"Altogether I regard this as a most significant fact against all the loose, wild charges that the Germans are seeking to undermine American authority in the islands. If that were so they would simply wreck their own interests, and this they know better than anybody else."

The Naval Personnel Bill.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 18.--In the House yesterday the consideration of the naval personnel bill being resumed, Mr. Bailey, Democrat of Texas, moved to strike out from section seven the following proviso:

"And provided further that nothing contained in this section shall be construed to prevent the retirement of officers with the rank and pay of commodore."

The rank of commodore, he said, was abolished in the active list by the bill; why should it be continued in the retired list?

He reiterated his opposition to eliminating the time honored rank of commodore in the active list.

Mr. Foss, Republican of Illinois, called attention to the fact that commodore was a courtesy rank and not an actual rank before the civil war.

Perry, Decatur and Barron were captains, but by courtesy called commodores.

The Panama Canal.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 18.--The new Panama Canal Company was given a hearing yesterday before the House committee on commerce, in reference to its project for an interoceanic canal.

THhe hearing was in accordance with a recent determination of the committee to hear all persons concerned in an isthmian canal, including the Panama as well as the Nicaraguan project.

The Panama delegation included General Henry L. Abbott, United States Corps of Engineers, retired; Louis Choron, chief engineer of the company; X. Bayard, commercial representative, and Messrs. Cromwell, Curtis, and Brown, as well as a number of technical experts of the company.

Professor Haupt of the Nicaragua canal commission also was present.

The Joint High Commission.

Montreal, Jan. 18.--Mr. Tarte, Dominion minister of public works, in a letter to La Patrie from Washington, commenting upon the apparent desire of some persons that the negotiations of the joint high commission should fail, says:

"I have reason to believe that things are in a good position. It is of the highest importance for the empire and for Canada that all the causes of irritation between ourselves and the United States should disappear."

The minister says that he has reason to hope that a settlement will be reached upon the fisheries and Bering sea questions.

As to reciprocity, he says that the commissioners have a difficult task, there being so many public and private interests at stake.

FISH AS BRAIN FOOD.

The Old Theory Exploded—Good for People of Sedentary Habits.

A popular misconception is shattered in a government bulletin entitled "Fish as Food." The world has thought that fish, beyond everything else, was valuable for the norishment of the brain, since it contains much phosphorus. This notion that fish contains uncommonly large proportions of phosphorus is now pronounced a delusion. The government experts have determined that the percentage of phosphorus in specimens of fish analyzed by them is not greater than is found in the flesh of other animals used for food. While fish is deficient in materials which yield heat and muscular power to the human body, when it is supplemented by bread, potatoes or other vegetables, it supplies a diet which will meet all the demands of the body. As a food it is particularly desirable for persons of sedentary habits. It fills two distinct places in dietetic economy: (1) It furnishes a cheap source of nitrogenous nutrients, and (2) it supplies the demand for variety in the diet which increases with the advance of civilization. The value of fish taken from American waters every year is over $47,000,000. Most of this is consumed at home, though a vast export trade in canned fish, lobsters and oysters is being opened up. Shad is one of the few dishes that should be eaten during the spawning season. The way in which the fish is killed affects the market value. Fish caught by the gills and allowed to die in the water, or those landed alive and allowed to die slowly, do not keep well and are inferior food. The fish should be killed immediately after it is caught; it will then remain firm and stand shipment well. That the average nutrition of fish is lower than that of meat foods is shown by figures. For instance, a side of mutton is said to contain 37 per cent. of nutrients, while medium fat beef contains 33 per cent. and turkey 34 per cent. There are few fresh fish that yield as high as 20 per cent. of nutrients. The general average of fresh fish is 14 per cent. California salmon contains 34 per cent.; shad roe, 28 per cent.; Spanish mackerel, 24 per cent. and Maine salmon, 25 per cent. Fish and lean beef are about equally digestible. The leaner kind of fish, such as cod, haddock, perch, pike and bluefish, are more easily and completely digested than the fatter kinds, such as salmon, shad and mackerel.

A TREELESS REGION.

Curses That Follow the Denudation of Forest Lands.

Any one who has traveled through the comparatively treeless countries around the Mediterranean, such as Spain, Sicily, Greece, northern Africa and large portions of Italy, must fervently pray that our own country may be preserved from so dismal a fate. It is not the loss of the forests only that is to be dreaded, but the loss of agricultural regions now fertile and populous, which may be desolated by the floods that rush down from bare hills and mountains, bringing with them vast quantities of sand and gravel to be spread over the lowlands. Traveling a few years ago through Tunisie, the writer came suddenly upon a fine Roman bridge of stone over a wide, bare, dry river bed. It stood some thirty feet above the bed of the river, and had once served the needs of a prosperous population. Marveling at the height of the bridge above the ground, I asked the French station master if the river ever rose to the arches which carried the roadway of the bridge. His answer testified to the flooding capacity of the river and to the strength of the bridge. He said, "I have been here four years, and three times I have seen the river running over the parapets of that bridge." That country was once one of the richest granaries of the Roman empire. It now yields scarcely support for a sparse and semi-barbarous population. The whole round about is treeless. The care of the national forests is a provision for future generations, for the permanence over vast areas of our country of the great industries of agriculture and mining upon which the prosperity of the country ultimately depends. A good forest administration should be organized in the interests of the whole country, no matter what it cost.—Atlantic Monthly.

No Profanity in Japan.

Americans boast a little over what they have. There is one country in the world that has a good right to rejoice over what it has not.

Japan is destitute of one particular form of evil. Its authorities never have to put down profane swearing. There is, says the Evangelist, no oath in the Japanese language—no word that is equivalent to an oath. Not only is there no native word in which profanity may take refuge, but there is no imported word.

During the last ten years foreigners have added thousands of new words to the language, but not one profane word has been incorporated. In this respect Japan is believed to stand alone among the nations.

Experience of a Popular Authoress.

Ruth McEnery tells the following amusing story about an experience in New Orleans:

She was going to market and a colored woman carried her basket, following in the customary fashion. The spirit of emancipation and progress suddenly awoke in Aunt Chloe and she said:

"Miss Ruth, I ain't gwin to walk behind any other lady no mo'."

Mrs. Stuart paused and replied "Lead the way, auntie. I am not proud."

And auntie led.—Housewife.

Should Be Repealed.

The second bill introduced by Assemblyman Murray into the Lower House of the Legislature was one that is doubtless the outgrowth of the Assemblyman's active participation in the trolley franchise agitation in this city. It provides for the repeal of the trolley act of May 18th, 1898, which extends the time for completing nearly all the street railways in New Jersey to 1901. This law is unquestionably a pernicious one, and was enacted through the influence of the trolley capitalists.

The effect of it is that if a municipality grants a franchise for the construction and operation of a street railway within its limits and the terms stipulate that it is to be finished at a certain time, this State law becomes antagonistic to the local act and permits the corporation to finish the road at its leisure, only so that it keeps within the provision of the legislative enactment.

It is a law that should never have been enacted, and Assemblyman Murray ought to be able to secure its repeal, though he will receive, no doubt, the active opposition of the Third House in such an attempt.

The Board of Trade seems to be in a lingering condition again. At the annual meeting, when officers were elected and many other matters of vital interest to the success of the organization should have been enthusiastically discussed, there was just eleven members present out of a total of ninety-one—and it was necessary for the faithful few to tarry for over an hour to get the needed quorum together. The present Board of Trade is the liveliest organization of its kind that Plainfield has seen in a good many years, but it is far from the success it should be. Its energies seemed confined to the enterprise of a very few, while the great majority—men who could do excellent work if they would only bend their mind and efforts to it—fail to take even passive interest in the affairs of the Board. Plainfield's experience with a Board of Trade seems to be the same as most other towns, though, for it is a fact that there are few places supporting Boards of Trade that do much else than merely exist.

It was through the blunder of the engrossing department of the State Legislature that the county trolley law had such a rocky road to travel before it became enacted as a State statute, and as Assemblyman Squire, of Union county, fathered that law, he realizes the little worth that the department possesses to law makers. As a result of his sorry experiences Assemblyman Squire believes that the engrossing department may as well become one of the bygones of the State, and he proposes to be instrumental in relegating it to the rear. He proposes that New Jersey follow the plan of New York and use printed bills only. This, he claims, will not only assure correct bills, but expedite matters, for it often happens that the Legislature has to wait on the engrossing department when business gets heavy. It will mean a saving of $5,000 a year to the State, too.

Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Miss Susan B. Anthony have addressed to President McKinley an open letter, asking that suffrage may be granted to the women of Hawaii upon the same terms as to men. The Mesdames Stanton and Anthony are well-meaning, but they would do more good if they taught the Hawaiian damsels how to dress right before they vote.

It is evident that Assemblyman Murray proposes to follow the advice of President of the Senate Reed and introduce his bills early in the Legislative session. The Plainfield Assemblyman has the honor of introducing bill No. 1 in the present session. However, it is not expected that the rule of "first come first served" will be followed out religiously by the Legislatsrs.

The history of the war department is blighted in many places by jealousy that has prevailed between its high officers since the Revolutionary times and which has led to many a disgraceful episode, none more so than the present one between Alger et al and Miles et al. But notwithstanding we get there just the same.

Now that Mr. Voorhees has had the sweets of a Gubernatorial inauguration he will have the bitter side of his position by trying to make one office satisfy a score or more of aspiring politicians, upon everyone of whom, of course, depends the future existence of the Republican party.

Newark is getting nearer and nearer to dollar gas. The Essex and Hudson County Gaslight Company promises to furnish the illuminant for $1.10 after April 1st next, but they hold out a rosy promise for genuine dollar gas after 1900.

The Evening Post speaks of the dissensions between Generals Egan and Miles as "An Army Muddle." From the amount of mud that has been flying through the air it looks as if it was more of a puddle than anything else.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

In the fall of 1878 a young man of medium height with curly hair, intense eye and not particularly good-looking, came into the office of Magie & Cross, in the First National Bank building, in Elizabeth. He went into the office slowly and was given a cheery good morning by one of the occupants. "What can I do for you young man," was asked. "I am Foster Voorhees, I suppose I am to go to work here."

In a few minutes he was seated at a desk of the present Chief Justice, then a State Senator, and the present State Senator, Joseph Cross, as his preceptor.

The young law student had been sitting up with Blackstone at nights and teaching school during the day; previous to this, he had learned how to begin the day early and end it late on his father's farm in Hunterdon county. Both his preceptors will participate in the ceremonies that will make the modest country boy the governor of the thrifty little State of New Jersey.

NEW YORK'S POISON MYSTERY.

"Joshua Simpkins," a pastoral play, said to be on the order of the "Old Homestead," and other like attractions, comes to Music Hall Friday night. In the third act a sensational saw mill scene is introduced, showing Uncle Josh Simpkins' saw mill in actul operation, cutting up real logs and timber, using a real, mammoth buzz saw, which is seen revolving at frightful speed. The play does not, however, depend on this one scene for success, as there are several other equally interesting scenes, and features, including their famous orchestra. The company carries two fine bands which will make a noonday parade.

WHITE'S WHITE SALE
THE WHITE GOODS EVENT OF THE SEASON.

Encouraged by the marked success which has attended our previous Muslin Underwear sales, we have made a large purchase for this occasion. Our orders were placed during the makers' dull season. The work has been most thoroughly done, materials and trimmings are of the best, the fit, finish and size generosity is the same as if the garments were made under your own supervision—by your own home seamstress—and the prices are less than you would pay for bare materials.

NIGHT ROBES.

Every feature of this sale is special, but more special than other features will be the nightgown selling. They are among the best creations of master makers and are daintily trimmed with the prettiest laces, ribbons and embroideries. Prices 25c, 49c, 75c, $1 and $1.25.

WHITE SKIRTS.

Some plain with rows of tucks, some with cambric and embroidery flounces with lace insertions; all cut very full, nothing scant about them but the prices—25c, 35c, 49c, 75c to $1.25.

CORSET COVERS.

Trimmed with embroidery, torchon laces, or clusters of tucks with insertions, perfect fitting, high, square or V shape necks, made of fine cambric. Who would bother to make them when you buy at these prices—15c, 25c, 29c, 39c, 50c

DRAWERS.

Made with yoke bands, deep hamburg embroidery, umbrella, flounces or rows of tucks. As some of the best numbers are somewhat limited as to quantity it is advisable that you be among the early choosers as these lots cannot be duplicated at these prices—17c, 25c, 39c and 50c.

SENATOR DEPEW.

HE EARLY DECIDED TO ESCHEW POLITICS, BUT DIDN'T.

"Our Chauncey" Has Always Been Popular, But Has Frequently Been Against the Machine—Had He Not Taken to Railroading He Would Have Been a National Figure Years Ago.

Senator Depew laid out his course in regard to politics when he was thirty years old. At that time Secretary of State Seward wished to make him minister to Japan and actually appointed him to the office. At about the same time Commodore Vanderbilt offered to make him attorney of the Harlem railroad. Mr. Depew thought the matter over carefully and abandoned Japan for the railroad. Of this conclusion he said:—

"My refusal to take the mission to Japan was the turning point of my life. I reasoned this way: If I go to Japan my career must be a political one. If I stay in politics I may get to Congress and the Senate, and when I get to be about forty-six years old I will be dropped out. If I stay, my practice will grow, and if I want to go to the Senate or get a mission when I grow old, I can get it."

Mr. Depew was sixty-four years old last April, and he has not found it so easy to "go to the Senate" or "get a mission" as he supposed it would be thirty-four years ago. He has been ready for several years, but the offices have not come his way.

Mr. Depew, as everybody knows, has led a life of great activity. He has achieved fame as a lawyer, a railroad manager, a financier, a raconteur and an orator, but the thread of politics has run through everything that he has done. In spite of the fact that he turned his back upon it with so much resolution in the early sixties it has been the warp upon which the woof of his accomplishments has been woven.

No young man ever had a more flattering start in politics than Mr. Depew had. He came of a Democratic family, but his opinions changed while he was at Yale, and when he was graduated in 1856 he took the stump once for Fremont and Free Soil. He made a favorable impression. He was nominated for the Assembly in the Third district of Westchester in 1860 and was elected.

SENATOR DEPEW.

He became a candidate for Speaker before the Legislature met, but was defeated by Noble L. Elderkin. Though he missed the speakership, he landed the chairmanship of the Ways and Means Committee, which carried with it the leadership of the majority on the floor. This was doing pretty well for a young man of twenty-eight, serving his first term.

There is a contemporary portrait of Mr. Depew sketched at this time, which shows that his political promise was recognized. Here it is:

"Mr. Depew is one of the ablest members in the assembly, and bids fair to become a prominent man in the state. He possesses decided ability, to which may be added a good degree of industry, energy and perseverence. Although looking much older, he is scarcely twenty-nine years of age, but his bearing and business habits partake more of the character of middle age, or even mature years, than the impetuosity and recklessness of youth."

More unmistakable evidence of popularity awaited the rising young politician. Horatio Seymour was elected Governor in 1862, and the outlook for Republican success the following year was not good. Mr. Depew was nominated for Secretary of State and was elected by 30,000 plurality. During the campaign he made two speeches a day for six weeks. It was during his term as secretary of state that Mr. Depew went to Washington to take the soldier vote, and there met President Lincoln for whom he had stumped New York. Mr. Lincoln took a fancy to him. When he declined a renomination as secretary of state Secretary Seward commissioned him minister to Japan. He considered the office for a month and decided to decline it for the reasons which he himself has given.

Notwithstanding these two refusals, the party was anxious to do something for him. Governor Reuben E. Fenton made him clerk of Westchester, the legislature elected him a regent of the State University in 1874, and also chose him one of the Commissioners of the new Capitol. This last gift he declined.

Mr. Depew's early connection with the Vanderbilt railroads was political in part. It was his duty to watch the interests of his employer in the legislature, and this took him to Albany during the session, where he presented arguments for or against legislation, as the case might be.

Just to keep his hand in, Mr. Depew ran for Lieutenant Governor in 1872 but was defeated by John C. Robinson, who went in with Governor Dix. He has never appeared before the people as a candidate for an elective office since.

IS PRAYER A DELUSION?

An Editor Ruminates Wisely but Fails to Answer His Query.

To read the Psalms is to be brought face to face with God as a helper. The writers drew near to the Creator, expecting Him to do something for them that they very much needed and considered beyond their own powers. For such help the Psalms render frequent and most beautiful thanks. Moral help there was, but material help, of course, always within the lines of good morals, is far more frequently the subject of request and thanks.

Was this all delusion? Or is there this help in God for man in his struggle to live on the earth? Will anyone say the Psalmist's request for help is unbecoming? Is there in our modern oration about politics, or philosophy, our argument about truth or our defense of "the articles" anything more truly religious than these humble pleas for help addressed to the Creator? Have we "progressed" so far, in our age, that worship does not mean asking for food, raiment, health, protection and common blessing? Doth God bless the basket and the store? The old writer said He did. But we rely on skill, training, "hustle" and "pulls." No doubt these will fill a basket and "bless" a store. But whether we shall still teach our children that God Himself is really worshipped by our asking His help is the question. If the function of religion is purely governmental, we will try to be loyal to the government, but to lose out this old idea of a fatherly help leaves the world awfully lonesome.

Many of us refuse to depart from the ancient ways of prayer. We have learned to believe that God has been pleased to help us in countless needs. He has been the silent partner in our business. He has made our career a wonder to observers. We stand astonished by the sure knowledge of what He has succeeded in accomplishing with us. Men there are who cannot but believe in God since they see themselves; see what they had to begin with what they have escaped what they have achieved. They may hesitate to speak of these wonders. Not wonderful, as results in comparative history, to be sure, but wonderful as viewed by a self-abnegation that is intelligently thankful. The days of miracles may or may not be passed, but it is not becoming in the church that she should confine herself to persuading mankind that they are indeed passed. Days for miracles are now on us. Moral power, beyond man's to generate, are needed. It would indeed be a queer contrast if now, when physical force is enlarged, in the discovery of electricity for example spiritual force is curtailed. Tesla can hardly surprise us. We are prepared for anything from this wizard. It is only St. Paul and Jesus Christ and the Psalmist who, as we see them on looking backward, seem to need softening explanations. "Ask and ye shall receive." "If you know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more your Father which is in heaven." Really there is all the thrill of novelty in it, of late, that an Infinite Personage is prepared to flash his glorious care, warm as a father's heart, strong beyond what one can ever ask or think, into every weary, darkening human life. Excelling all fraternities for mutual help is the divine help along the rough road, and we are hungry to hear about it every time we gather for worship.—N. Y. Mail and Express.

THE OLD MAN'S WONDERFUL CURE.

The Doctor Had the Wind Taken Out of His Sails.

A good story is told by a Cleveland physician on himself. He is a physician of considerable repute, and some time ago was called to attend a gentleman of advanced years, who was suffering from a slight complication of disorders. The doctor went to work with a will, and presently had the patient on the road to recovery. In fact, two weeks from the time he took the case he had him cured.

As he left the house after announcing that further visits would be unnecessary the daughter of the restored man accompanied him to the door.

"Doctor," she said in somewhat tremulous tones, "I want to tell you"—

The doctor, who supposed she was anxious to express her gratitude for his skilled attention, waved her thanks aside.

"But, doctor," she persisted, "it is something that will interest you. I feel that"—

"Say no more, madam," cried the doctor, much moved by the woman's agitation.

"It's something I must tell you, doctor," she continued. "Please listen."

The doctor halted with his hand on the knob.

"Yesterday," said the woman, "I was down town and met Mrs. Pugsley, the Christian Scientist, and she told me she had been giving father 'absent treatments' for two weeks. Isn't it just too wonderful?"

"Good morning," said the doctor, dryly.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THE CZAR'S SCHEME.

EDITOR STEAD SAYS AMERICA CAN INSURE UNIVERSAL PEACE.

Nicholas' Proposals Are Sincere, Russia Ready to Arrest Future Increase of Her Armaments but Europe Is Scepticall Apathetic.

William T. Stead, writing from London, says:

"I have seen the Czar. I have heard from his own lips the earnest desire of his heart that something practical should be done, and that quickly, to divert to the service of humanity some of the many millions now devoted to the preparations for war. He has taken the initiative in summoning the conference.

"He is prepared to give earnest of his sincerity by arresting the future increase of Russian armaments. But unless he is supported by the peoples who detest militarism, as well as by those who groan under its burdens, his well-meant endeavor will fail.

"What is hoped by those friends of peace and enemies of militarism who turn their eyes to the Great Republic of the New World is that between now and January the citizens of the United States will, by public demonstrations, formal resolutions and by every other method whereby a democratic people gives expression to its convictions and its aspirations, have manifested to the world their determination to help the Czar to put this thing through.

THE CZAR OF RUSSIA.

"A national committee to promote the success of the Peace Conference, with local committees in every city in the Union, would do much to achieve this end.

"In England, where the difficulties are much greater, owing to the senseless prejudice against Russia which has been the baleful legacy of the Crimean war, such a national committee is already in course of formation. By the end of next month it is expected there will not be any considerable centre of population which will not have had its public meeting demanding that energetic support be given to the Russian proposals.

"These proposals, stated briefly, are (1) that there should be declared a truce of God for five years; (2) that during that period the governments should not increase their expenditure on armaments beyond the figure stated by them at the conference of the maximum of their needs; (3) that some international agreement should, if disputes arise between the signatories of this pact, bind them always to invite the mediation of neutral powers before appealing to the sword.

"A joint Anglo-American deputation of, say, fifteen men and five women, chosen from the foremost of our race, charged with the mandate to proceed through Europe on a pilgrimage of peace to present an address of thanks to the Czar, would rouse the continent. It would affirm the unity of the English-speaking race and demonstrate that it had both the capacity and the will to act as a unit in the cause of peace.

"Round the Anglo-American deputation would group themselves in the first place the representatives of the seven small states—Sweden, Norway Denmark, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland and Portugal, with an aggregate population of nearly thirty millions—and with these reinforcements the great international delegation would begin its crusade through Europe.

"In four weeks it would have shaken the continent from centre to circumference."

The Czar's conference is attracting much sympathy from the Queen and other members of the royal family who are said to be aware of the entire sincerity of the Czar.

Why the Light Went Out.

In front of the high altar in the cathedral in Salzburg there is a great lamp that is supposed to burn forever and a day." One morning, years ago, woshippers were surprised to see it go out, and this was repeated morning after morning, always about the same time. It was thought the attendant had neglected to give it sufficent oil, and though he declared his innocence he was told that he would be discharged if the oversight were repeated. Unwilling to deal unjustly with the man, the dean of the cathedral hid himself one night to see if he could solve the mystery. He had not long to wait. About 10 o'clock a big rat was seen descending the rope by which the lamp was suspended. Having reached the oil it fed freely and then went away by the way it came. Needless is it to say that the assistant held his place.

Electricity to Tame Wild Beasts.

Perzon, the great French lion tamer, owed his success to the use of electricity in taming his beasts. When a wild lion or tiger was to be tamed live wires were first rigged up in the cage between the tamer and the animal. After a time Perzon would turn his back, and the wild creature would invariably make a leap at him, but encountering the charged wires, would receive a paralyzing shock sufficient to terrorize it forever.

CHAPTER VII.

Judge Delno was popularly designated among his constituents "the ablest legal reactionist in New York." He was sternly reserved and uncompromisingly straightforward in his methods, which were refreshingly devoid of that double track system of administering so called justice wont to be characterized by the long suffering as "shady" and by its propagators as "only businesslike."

He delighted in nothing so much as the study of human nature.

Studying human nature from a disinterested point of view is one thing. Remarking its rise and fall from an interested standpoint is another. Today the distinguished chief justice found himself in an undesirable state of mind, superinduced by the latter contingency. It had been forced upon him by an argument he was holding with a suitor for his little daughter's hand—a suitor so entirely in earnest, so perceptibly worthy of a good woman's love, so heathily built morally, mentally and physically, that this past master of character in search found himself at the start prejudiced, a state of things he always at a distance contemplated with outspoken contempt, embodying, as it undoubtedly must, no opportunity for honest and unbiased judgment, but which at close quarters he found contained a force hitherto unencountered and hence—this he suddenly acknowledged, to his inward perturbation—almost unmanageable.

Judge Delno never he[illegible] press a wholesome aver[illegible] having "things sprung upon [illegible]"

This morning "things" had thus agitated his honor with a vengeance. He was smarting with irritability at having been taken unawares and rendered cognizant of an entirely unsuspected affair,—first, coolly mastered; second, passed under a microscopic investigation; third, submitted to competent and authoritative experience, and, finally, presented for his own digestion with a precision which was above praise.

The judge had always felt an immense respect for Stornmouth, first, because he was a successful man, a man who had overcome obstacles brilliantly and would overcome more obstacles more brilliantly, and, second, because he had rarely met with so honorable and upright a specimen of the not always impeccable genus known as homo. His own act of saving the Stornmouth estates from almost total annihilation had been governed more by his characteristic bulldog tenacity and desire to get even with an unworthy adversary than by any more high minded sentiment.

When the fee attendant upon his victory had been sent in, he had even been amusedly aware that he was sorry it signified that the fight was over. Although he retired with flying colors from the fray he had honestly regretted that his adversary had not scented, as he had, the promise of a richer development for the opponent than that opponent had suspected. Ultimately he had wondered if he ever would find a contemporary who would see, as he did, two sides of a case with the same lack of prejudice and choose the side which promised the least, just for the sake of experiencing the keen sense of exhilaration attendant upon abstracting a good development from a bad ground plan.

When Stornmouth had thanked him, therefore, he had been happy to perceive that the fellow was worth the cause. He had followed him up somewhat to see what he would do with the unexpected wealth thrust upon him.

Stornmouth, to his surprise, had met his individual bulldog tenacity with a tenacity which matched it. He had evinced a reserve which ultimately was discovered to contain evidence of uncommon force. He proved that he pretty generally preceded (no matter how masterful) an adversary's opportunity by outwitting that adversary before the latter had wakened to even an inkling of his power.

This to Delno was a revelation. What to him had been a conscientious study appeared to come to Stornmouth as naturally as the flush to a maiden's cheek. What to Delno was an acquisition was to Stornmouth an intuition. He read men like a flash, docketed them off in the pigeonholes of his memory and brought them out when he needed them with unflagging accuracy to dispose of them with remarkable perspicacity.

But when Stornmouth confessed himself in love with Priscilla Judge Delno, manlike, strove to forget personal affection and take what he considered an unbiased view of the situation. To an onlooker this might not have been considered fully as kind as it was just to Stornmouth. It at least was fair and square as regarded Priscilla. "Stornmouth is too masterful," thought Judge Delno. "He can bully me into saving him his thousands, but if he thinks he is going to bully me into marrying to him my own daughter he is mistaken. He is a fine fellow, a superlatively fine fellow, but, by Jove, a girl's heart must be considered in these matters." He made the latter statement aloud.

"I am precisely of the same opinion, sir," returned Stornmouth tersely.

He had returned from Europe the day before, and had run in on his old friend, as he expressed it, "to place the entire lamentable occurrence before him in a nutshell."

"Who asked for your opinion?" demanded the judge testily. He had been confined to the house for a week with influenza and was unusually irritable in consequence. Besides, any father experiences a sense of revolt when a hitherto unconsidered personage, no matter how desirable, presents himself as a possible member of his family.

"The case in point is as follows," announced Stornmouth, going straight to the aforesaid point with his customary ability—an ability which Judge Delno heretofore had never hesitated to laud openly, but which today hinted at possibilities in a son-in-law which perhaps might be considered more forcible than agreeable. Stornmouth was pacing the room restlessly. His hands were plunged deep into his trousers pockets. His fine head was thrown forward eagerly, like a thoroughbred scenting the hint of a clover patch. His keen eyes mastered everything—the room, the occupant, the warring blizzard outside, the case in point, and his adversary's irritation, which he was observing with that same humorous twinkle in his soul which so often bubbled up and showed itself so pleasantly in his eyes.

"Given," he continued with emphasis, "a French adventurer with a title, and an American girl possessed of a desire, lamentable or otherwise, to become a duchess or countess, it is obvious that ten chances to one the bargain is consummated to the entire felicity of all parties concerned." He bit his lip vigorously. His eyes, severely contemptuous, met those of Judge Delno with an unflinching resolve in their depths.

The chief justice was seated in a leather covered armchair, before a blazing fire. Perhaps that was the cause of the flush which overspread his countenance at Stornmouth's utterance.

"What do you mean to insinuate?" he stormed.

"I am not 'insinuating,'" replied Stornmouth. "I am stating facts. I have good reason to suppose that you are backing up your daughter in this nefarious business."

"'Nefarious' is a nefarious word, young man. What do you intend to convey by your so called facts?"

"Will you have the truth?"

"The sooner the better."

"Miss Mildred Delno, your sister, informed me ten days since," returned Stornmouth slowly, with his eyes fixed steadily upon the features of his opponent, "that Mrs. Delno countenances this marriage—indeed encourages it."

"It is false!" roared the judge. Then he paled suddenly. All at once it came to him—his wife's recent incomprehensible interest in the French peerage; her poring over French history; her endless letters to her daughter; her mysterious hints, vague as intangible, of coming events which cast their palpable shadows before.

To Judge Delno a foreigner comprised all the esoteric capacities of a nineteenth century Mephistopheles, with the element of love for love's sake left out. A foreigner meant to his eyes, thoroughly new world in their outlook, one of those oily specimens of an effete civilization who hang out their signs in lower Sixth avenue, therewith endeavoring to fascinate unwary Americans with big lettered promises of a new hair dye warranted to be efficacious as well as healthy and a bloom of youth advertised to contain the innocence of the sucking dove. His true inwardness rose like the crest of a white capped protest on the tidal wave of a visible and acutely to be contested horror.

He rose and reached toward the electric button.

"Is Mrs. Delno at home?" he demanded of the butler when he appeared in answer to his call.

"Yes, sir."

"Wait here, my boy."

Stornmouth paced the room restlessly for a few moments. Then he turned toward the door curiously as it fell open after 15 minutes' dragging space of time. Judge Delno entered. His lips were sternly compressed and his features, as usual, impenetrable, but Stornmouth recognized the signs of a stormy interview in the perpendicular lines between his eyes and his curt "To continue with the business in hand."

He approached Stornmouth slowly. His shaggy eyebrows were bent. His massive head was a trifle bowed. "It appears to me," he remarked, "that in spite of ourselves we will be obliged to look upon you as a savior, Stornmouth."

"'It is only what I owe you, sir."

"Tut, tut! Out with it! Have you declared yourself to my daughter?"

Stornmouth grew a little stern about the lips. "Your daughter knows," he said, "that I love her with all my soul; that from the first moment I set eyes upon her face I had but one desire, as far as she was concerned. That desire was to protect, to shield and to deserve her. Unhappily, I have not been able to conceal my utter disgust over this lamentable affair. She construes it, quite unjustly, into an evidence of jealousy. You would hardly do me that injustice could you witness the personality of your illustrious would be son-in-law, with whom she appears so incomprehensibly infatuated."

"Have you told Priscilla that you love her?"

"I have."

"Have you asked her to be your wife?"

"Yes."

"And what was her response?"

"She said she did not know whether she cared for me or not; that at times she thought she did, but at other times she was almost sure she did not; that she was very young; that she would rather sing than marry."

"The average New York woman of today," remarked Judge Delno blandly, "is more or less of an enigma—principally more. It cannot be denied that the wise woman is she who knows what she wants and gets it. Singularly enough, however, what woman gets matrimonially she has been known to discover later to be far from what she wanted. To sum it all up, what have you learned?"

"This," returned Stornmouth without a moment's hesitation. "Were the Count de Lacaze what he pretended to be, I should not interfere. I object now, not from the standpoint of an unappreciated suitor who desires vengeance, but as a man who is desirous that neither you nor any member of your family should be swindled by a mere French adventurer."

A man was ushered across the threshold.

"His title—is it a bogus one?"

"No. The title is bona fide as far as it goes. In France it exemplifies a great name disgraced by its inheritors—a name used for illicit extortions on the plea of forthcoming remunerations—briefly, a fine estate eaten up by a swarm of unappeased creditors. The De Lacaze honor has been forfeited. The property is confiscated, and any former magnificence is a truth 40 years in the past—a past which appears to be the strongest part of the present count's make up. Further, I have positive proof that you are to be vilely deceived. There is a man in the hall who will confirm my statements. Have I your permission to ring for him to be sent in?"

"By all means," Judge Delno acquiesced.

In a few seconds a man was ushered across the threshold. He looked like a private watchman in citizen's clothes.

"You are prepared," began Stornmouth concisely, his strong, handsome hand nervously playing with a paper cutter which lay on the table beside him, "to confirm all you said to me yesterday?"

"I am, sir." The voice was unexpectedly refined in its enunciation. It's owner's countenance was full of character, but permeated with unusual bitterness. The brow was fine and broad. The features were heavy and morose. His expression was somewhat defiant. He had a shock of auburn hair, and a thick, crisp auburn beard. He was about 40 years of age and seemed like a countryman in spite of his palpable familiarity with city methods.

"My friend Judge Delno," said Stornmouth slowly, indicating the judge with the paper cutter and speaking clearly, as though desirous of impressing the messenger with the importance of strict honesty in his forthcoming statement, "is deeply interested in the matter concerning which you and I conversed so exhaustively last night."

The messenger from Brown's agency nodded comprehendingly.

"I have here," he began, after a low interchange of words with Stornmouth, "a letter from a man who signs himself Desmoulins of the Eclair—supposed to be a French daily."

Judge Delno nodded silently. Then he asked:

"What is your excuse for turning state's evidence?" The question blazed forth unexpectedly like a streak of lightning which carries the promise of blackest thunder at its back.

The messenger flushed hotly. "If your honor will permit," he said, quietly, his eyes gleaming ominously, "I will not answer that question until we have dismissed the subject under fire."

Judge Delno was guilty of an unpremeditated look of surprise. He welcomed courage in any form whatsoever, even when sometimes it was brought to bear upon him to his own discomfiture.

"Continue."

"I have here instructions from the aforesaid Desmoulins which read as follows." The messenger stepped forward to lay an envelope within Judge Delno's hands.

But the judge checked him peremptorily. "Read it," said he.

The messenger stepped back, drew forth the contents of the envelope and cleared his throat.

"I came into possession of this paper," he explained, "through an odd circumstance—fortunately for you, sir," turning to Stornmouth. "A man was run over day before yesterday on Broadway. When we picked him up, he was still breathing, but he died an hour after he reached the hospital. He has since been identified as a porter at the Brevoort House. His papers were handed to me by the coroner. I promised to forward his interests in reference to getting word of him back to his friends in France. Two years ago I ran up against this man in Battery park. He was a greenhorn, just landed; he did not speak a word of English. I put him in the way of getting some work. Singular enough that I should be on hand to witness his death. Among his other papers I found the inclosed, which I took the liberty of confiscating. The business it treated of seemed to be something in my line." Then, turning toward Judge Delno, "The morning after," he continued. "Mr. Stornmouth called at my office and put some questions to me. But first I will read you the contents of the letter."

"'Find,' he read, 'the record of the young woman's antecedents, the amount of her parents' capital and her family's inclination and social status. Is the old man gullible? Is the mamma to be coerced out of her ducats? Will the filthy lucre be forthcoming when the big move is made? De Lacaze is up to his ears in debt. He desires a wife with a big dot. If her antecedents are a little off color, so much the better. De Lacaze can then hold the whip hand and threaten exposure if his demands are not met with. The young woman's name is Priscilla Delno, her address 49 West Fifty-fifth street.' I have had it translated, sir, by a man in our office. The lestter is written in French."

"That will do," interrupted Judge Delno. "And your answer to this nefarious plot?"

"Wait a moment," broke in Stornmouth's voice. "I wish you to understand first how I came into the knowledge that this transaction existed. There is a waiter at Durand's restaurant in Paris who flourishes under the sobriquet of 'The Rat.' He is like quicksilver in his movements and is in perpetual demand because of his talent for amassing all the news, social, political and so forth, in a nutshell and rehashing it to his clients in an undertone as he administers to their wants. He has the eye of the proverbial hawk, a tongue which is polished like the sharpest razor, and a wit which is famous. I have feed him heavily for a long time, both because I found him unique, and unique amusement cannot be too highly remunerated, and also because it appeared to me he might be rendered valuable ultimately in some unsuspected manner. Whether or no he held a grudge against Desmoulins for a skit as clever as unwise, which recently appeared in the columns of the Eclair against 'The Rat,' warning all stay at home Parisians against him as a spy of the most dangerous caliber, I cannot tell. The fact remains. He set before me, with admirable condensation, the plot which Doxie there"—indicating the messenger—"holds as documentary evidence against the opposition party. He denounced Desmoulins as an adventurer and De Lacaze as the type of titled libertine who is robbing us of our record of common sense while at the same time filling France's mints at America's expense. I looked up Desmoulins. You know my tendency to battle with fraud whether it concerns me personally or otherwise. I discovered that the Desmoulins of the Eclair and the Desmoulins of the Pension Picaud were one and the same, that De Lacaze was the nobleman in question, and that your daughter was the young woman in particular. I took the next steamer for home. I called at Brown's agency. Doxie will tell you the rest."

Doxie raised his eyes. They had been discreetly veiled. They were steel blue in color, with a fearless light in them that belied the other features of their owner's countenance, whose expression of smug impenetrability had been worn for so long a period that it had become almost second nature.

"The letter found me," he stated firmly, "just on the eve of a mental and moral crisis. I had made up my mind to quit unearthing family skeletons for pay. Brown's is a necessity. It is Brown's affair, not mine, whether he conducts his business on a basis of honesty or on a basis of fraud. I have done many a scurvy trick since I threw in my lot with him, dirty work for dirtier pay. I could not see the old people starving while dreaming my dreams of carrying on a model farm. This was a contrast with a vengeance. Singularly enough, only yesterday something rose up within me against sinking so low as Brown. I remembered a day when I knew men who took the brain and the brawn out of me in their service only to put it back sounder instead of weaker. I made up my mind to work for men like that or else go back to my farming. I had rather weed in honest dirt than ferret out human vileness. Planting potatoes is comparative rectitude. Inculcating crime, more, aiding and abetting it by putting into the hands of its perpetrators the faculty to score its innocent victims through means as underhanded as cowardly, is the work of beasts, not of men. I had farmed my mind as well as my body. My father caught and sold bluefish night and day for 40 years to earn the money which was to buy me a college education. It occurred to me that I had better farm my morals and let my financial profits go. In short, I bolted. Mr. Stornmouth did the rest, sir. He came to me in a straightforward way, and put questions at me as though he expected me to return him truth for truth. My customers are very rarely of that class. They are pretty generally of the species traitor, sent out from great houses to do their dirty work for them, and forbidden to betray their purpose, their identity or themselves in the process. With Mr. Stornmouth I suddenly discovered myself answering truth for truth. I was in the anomalous position of leaguing with him toward the total annihilation of Brown and his crew. I liked it."

"Where were you born?" demanded the chief justice.

"On Long Island, sir, at New Suffolk."

"How much does Brown pay you?"

"According to the work I do. The dirtier the work the bigger the pay."

"H'm," remarked his honor grimly. "Anybody would take you for a reporter on a cheap daily."

"It's just about that, sir."

"Anything more?" asked Stornmouth.

Doxie hesitated. A dark purple flush rose slowly and covered his strong, sunburned face. He lifted his right hand for a moment and drew it awkwardly across his lips. "I remembered," he said finally, nervously turning his cap about in his fingers, "when I read the name of Miss Priscilla Delno, a girl I knew once, some seven or eight years ago, when I got back from college and went to farming on the old place. Her father's house stood next to ours. We were neighbors. She used to come and lean over the bars of the fence which separated one of our meadows from her father's and chat with me as I drove my horse to the plow. Then she went off to school. At that school she wrote me that she met a girl with whom she struck up a great friendship. The name of her friend was Delno. I wondered whether it could be the same. On the strength of that doubt I desisted."

"What was your sweetheart's name?"

"Constance Brandford."

"Did she sing?" questioned Stornmouth suddenly and violently.

"Like a bird, sir," said Doxie a trifle huskily. "There was not a thrush within ten miles could hold his own with her. But she had a taste for the world. She had no use for a simple countryman like me. She went to Europe. I have never seen her since. Her people all died. Their estate was sold at auction."

"By Jove!" cried Stornmouth.

He stepped forward gayly, to Judge Delno's supreme amazement, and laid his powerful hand upon the dejected shoulders of Brown's messenger.

"I say, Doxie," said he, "come into my service, will you?"

"With all my heart, sir. In what capacity?"

"Oh, hang the capacity!" laughed Stornmouth. "Companion, if you like. I am off to France tomorrow night. The judge follows me a week later." Judge Delno gasped slightly, strove to speak and then listened attentively. "I have a mind, Doxie, to show you the world."

"Yes, sir."

"A wild desire, my good friend Doxie, to introduce you to the land of art and song."

"You are too good, sir." Doxie was regarding Stornmouth with a bewildered stare.

"I will present you to a singer, I promise you," continued Stornmouth, "who will put your heart back sounder than when she found it, as you so eloquently say. Take the Long Island boat tonight for New Suffolk. Bid goodby to the old folks. Pack up your togs and meet me at pier No. 43, North river, at noon tomorrow."

"I will, sir."

"Now be off. Oh, I say, stuff that missive from Desmoulins into your gripsack, will you? We may have need of it."

"I will, sir."

"And now," continued Stornmouth, when the door had closed, turning gayly to the judge, who had been a silent witness of the foregoing scene, "and now, my good friend, we will light a couple of cigars while we lay our plans together, eh? The lines have fallen in our way with a vengeance. Shall we pull them together?" He laughed gleefully.

Judge Delno met his triumphant glance with one equally flashing. His lips set firmly in the line which was dreaded by his opposing counsel as exemplifying invulnerable determination.

"Stornmouth," he shouted, "there is not a colleague on the bench who does not fear me when my blood is up."

There will probably be a bowling match on the alleys of the Plainfield Catholic Club next Friday evening. Thursday evening a sociable will be given in the hall by the active members.

BASKET BALL.

There has been an unusual growth in the interest in basket ball among the girls of the Plainfield High School as the result of a challenge that was received a few days ago. The girls' team from the Adelphi Academy, of Brooklyn, has invited the girls' team from the Plainfield High School to go to Brooklyn on the afternoon of January 24th, and meet them in a friendly match. Heretofore, there has not been any regular High School team, the players being divided among the class teams. The best of these will be combined, however, and a team formed. The challenge was received by Miss Bessie Randolph, secretary of the Girls' Athletic Association of the High School. Miss Jessie Pruden, president of the association and captain of the Senior Class team, will captain the "varsity" team as it is now called. The candidates for it will be picked by the captain with the advice of the coaches, Superintendent Maxson and Walter L. Long. As soon as the team is picked with any degree of certainty, it will meet for practice against a scrub team which will be organized of the other candidates.

Manager George Fuller, of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. team, has arranged a series of two games with the team from the Summit Y. M. C. A., the first of which will be played in Summit the evening of Friday, Jan. 27th. The date of the return game is as yet uncertain. It has been the policy of the local management to schedule all games in Plainfield for Monday evenings so as not to interfere with the class work in the gymnasium. Summit wants to play Friday night and the members of her team are quite adverse to the night selected by Plainfield. As both teams are anxious to play each other the trouble will undoubtedly be settled shortly. Summit is an old rival of Plainfield and her players would rather defeat Plainfield than any other team in this district.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Thursday evening will see the opening game of roller polo at the Crescent Rink. If there is a show of good support, the games will be continued right through the winter. Plainfield will be represented by a strong team of seven young men who will be picked from the following candidates, Henry V. Ryder, Belcreton Platt, Edgar I. Serrell, Clement Morgan, T. U. Smith, Fred H. Freeman, William L. McClure, Albert O. Woltmann and Louis Darling. The visiting team will be from Elizabeth Club, and will be practically the same that played here two years ago. The Elizabeth boys have been playing lately and are going to give the local team a hard rub. The Plainfield boys will meet tonight for practice.

The indoor athletic contest at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium has now reached a stage where it is possible to make some comparisons regarding the work done. Six events have been competed, but six out of the twelve competitors have only taken part in four. It therefore makes it impossible to compare the total number of points made. The only fair basis of comparison is by the average number of points scored in each event. Of the competitors who have taken part in all the events, Wm. Morgan leads, Wm. Brokaw second and A. B. Meredith third. Those with the highest averages are, however, quite capable of making equally good showing in the two events they have missed. Including the results of the two events Saturday night, Raymond Carroll is now ahead with an average of 71 1 points scored in each event. Berry Egan is second with an average of 62 5, William Townsend third with 57 2, and Hervey Doane fourth with 51 2. The other contestants and their averages are as follows: William Morgan, 48 2; William Brokaw, 47.1; Albert B. Meredith, 45.6; J. H. Green, Jr., 37.8; Henry Pierce, 35; Edgar Sheppard, 34.2; Walter Dreier, 32 3; Walter Sampson, 31.5.

AT THE TRAPS.

This afternoon William Terry, of Dog Corner, and Captain Funk, of New Brunswick, will shoot a match of 25 birds for $25 a side. The shoot will take place on the Middlesex Shooting Club grounds, at South River.

The Deadly Grip

Is again abroad in the land. The air you breathe may be full of its fatal germs! Don't neglect the "Grip" or you will open the door to Pneumonia and Consumption and invite death. Its sure signs are chills with fever, headache, dull heavy pains, mucous discharges from the nose, sore throat and never-let-go cough. Don't waste precious time treating this cough with troches, tablets, or poor cheap syrups. Cure it at once with Dr. King's New Discovery, the infallible remedy for bronchial troubles. It kills the disease germs, heals the lungs and prevents the dreaded after effects from the malady. Price 50 cts. and $1.00. Money back if not cured. A trial bottle free at L. W. Randolph's Drug Store.

No Excuse

for spotted clothes. Spots are usually grease and won't brush out. To complain because it won't betrays a lack of intelligence. You can bring your clothes here and have the grease taken out. It doesn't cost much and the clothes look surprisingly improved.

Attached His Brother's Property.
(Special to The Daily Press)

Elizabeth, Jan. 18—Charles K. Moore, well-known in Plainfield, a civil engineer and son of the late Colonel James Moore, who for many years was chief engineer for the New Jersey Central, has placed an attachment on all the property owned in this city by John R. Moore, his brother, to recover $2,500 which he claims is due him. John R. Moore left Elizabeth several years ago, and is now living in New York. The property attached is located in the most eligible residential portion of Elizabeth, and comprises about three acres.

The Same Commissioners Named.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Jan. 18—Ex-Judge Gilhooly, representing many property-owners on Westfield avenue, in Union township, objected in the Union Court Monday to the appointment of the same Commissioners to assess damages on his clients' property that had already acted on that portion of Westfield avenue which had been upon. Judge VanSyckel, however, overruled the objections, and appointed the same three Commissioners to continue the work. Ex-Judge Gilhooly then filed a formal protest with the Court.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver, of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongued coated, pain continually in the back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters;' and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50cts., guaranteed, at L. W. Randolph's Drug Store.

and was inclined to favor the plaintiff. He held that any person or body should be willing to pay its just debts, and he asked the jury to find such a verdict if possible.

The jury retired about 5 o'clock and returned one hour later, failing to agree on a verdict. Eight stood for the defendants, while four were in favor of the plaintiff. The case will no doubt be tried over again

NO MORE DISCHARGES.

Third Regiment Boys Will Have to Stay in Service Till Mustered Out.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Washington, Jan. 18.—New Jersey Representatives have advised by Secretary Alger that no more discharges of men in the volunteer service will be granted, even though the discharge of the men may be recommended by the commanding officer of the regiment from which the men wish to be released. It is stated that this action is necessary to prevent the reduction of the regiments below the minimum strength fixed by law.

It will apply more particularly to the Third Regiment, now stationed at Athens, Ga., in which several of the New Jersey Congressmen are more or less interested, from the fact that the regiment is made up of companies from their respective districts. In this particular regiment the order will work no hardship on the men, but on the contrary it will be a decided advantage, since by keeping them upon the rolls until the regiment shall have been mustered out, which will be done within two weeks, the men will receive an additional month's pay, whereas their immediate discharge would deprive them of this slight recognition of their patriotism from the Federal Government.

Petitions from all parts of New Jersey are being forwarded to the New Jersey members urging them to support the Ellis bill, which provides for the abolishment of the "canteen" in the army service. The petitions come from cities, towns and hamlets, and are numerously signed, indicating that the people of New Jersey are greatly interested in the morals of the army.

GRAND JURY PASSES IT.

Reef Segal Case Will Not be Considered—Her Unproved Age the Reason.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, January 18.—Unless Miss Rose Segal can prove that she is 21 years of age the Grand Jury will not bring in a true bill against her father, brothers, Norton and the Cohens. It is said on good authority that the Grand Jury has decided to pass the Reiner-Segal cases until the question of Miss Segal's age is decided by Chancellor McGill. This question will not come up for final hearing until next Monday in Jersey City, and before that time the present Grand Jury will have been discharged. It can not be taken up again until the May Grand Jury.

Miss Segal's attorney, Samuel Schleimer, says he has all the necessary documents from Warsaw, Russia, where she was born, to prove that she was born on the eighth day of the month of Kisliv in the year 6030, which would make her 21 years last November.

HONOR FOR HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATE

William Ellery C. Leonard Will Teach Latin in Boston University.

A former Plainfield boy and pupil from the High School, William Ellery Leonard, receives a pleasant notice in the Boston Evening Transcript in its column of late college news. That papers says he has been appointed for the current term to take the place in Boston University of one of the professors of latin who is temporarily filling another chair. The Transcript adds, "Mr. Leonard, who is now taking past graduate work at Harvard, was of the class of '98 and won a name for thorough scholarship during his four years in Boston University. His selection as instructor in that institution is regarded as a fitting expression of the estimate which the faculty are known to have placed upon his ability."

A THOUGHTFUL PRISONER.

Didn't Want to Make the Police Any Trouble so Gave Himself Up.

A more inoffensive looking man than Berhard Epstein it would be hard to find. And the Plainfield police marvelled when the borough authorities sent a warrant over for his arrest, charging him with trying to batter in another man's head with a brick. When Epstein heard that he was wanted, he hurried to the lock-up and gave himself up at once so to save the police any trouble. Sergeant Kiely hadn't the heart to lock him up so Epstein remained a silent visitor at the morning court of City Judge Runyon.

Failing to find a borough marshal, the Sergeant let Epstein remain at the shop of a friendly cobbler while waiting for the borough authorities to send for him. He was finally turned over to them. The complainant is the case was Kussel Sacher.

The New York Poultry Show.

There will be poultry, pigeons and pet stock in the tenth annual exhibition by the New York Poultry and Pigeon Association, in Madison Square Garden for five days, beginning Tuesday, January 31st, and ending Saturday, February 4th. J., give a list of exhibitors which will make the show important to every one, and in the fancy breeds of fowl and pigeons there will be a sharp contest for the prizes. The show brings out the best birds in America and many from foreign parts, as the competition is open to the world, and the exhibit of all that appertains to the poultry farm, including incubators and brooders, is a feature each year, and with increasing popularity. In the pet stock classes, rabbits, guinea pigs and cats will be included, and there are many entries in each class.

Mrs. H M. Maxson, of West Sixth street, will respond to the address of welcome at the conference of the women's auxiliaries to the Y. M. C. A., of New Jersey at Morristown January 27th.

NEW TELEPHONE LINE.

Raising of Poles for Wires Between Newark and Trenton.
(Special to The Daily Press)

Bound Brook, January 18.—The State Telephone Company, which was organized and incorporated about three years ago for the purpose of connecting all the local telephone companies in the State in opposition to the Bell Company, has begun to build a line between Bound Brook and Trenton. A line has already been built between Bound Brook and Newark. When the connection is made between Bound Brook and Trenton there will be a direct connection between Newark and the capital.

The Bell Company charges a toll of sixty-five cents to Trenton. The new company will only charge thirty-five or forty cents. The company has been six months acquiring the right of way between Trenton and Bound Brook. So far as they can tell they have a clear road between the two places and no further opposition to overcome.

Changed Overcoats.

A few nights ago John Jones, of Chatham street, was in a local pool room. While there he left his coat hanging on a coat pin. During the evening the coat disappeared and no one knew anything about it. Yesterday Chief Wilson, of the borough, found that James Galloway, of the borough, had the coat, and he sent word to him to return it. Galloway did as he was told and Mr. Jones has his coat. In the meantime Chief Wilson has an overcoat belonging to Galloway that he left in the pool room.

Stray Horse Was Arrested.

Last evening about 11 o'clock Roundsman Frederickson found a stray horse wandering about in the vicinity of Liberty and Front streets. The animal was apparently in good condition and was evidently the property of some farmer. He was walking about in the various yards eating grass and having a good time. The officer took charge of the horse and placed him in Cole's livery stable for the night. This morning John Reed, of West Front street, appeared and proved his property.

Sons of Veterans Prosperous.

John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans, held a regular meeting last evening and transacted routine business. Reports from the installation committee and the fair committee were received, and the quartermaster reported that there is now in the Camp treasury $390, and all the money has not been received from the fair. The Camp is now in a very prosperous condition and bids fair to forge ahead and increase largely in membership. At the next meeting there will probably be a muster.

WESTFIELD LOST TWO GAMES.

And a Chance to Take Second Place From the Parks.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, Jan. 17th—The bowling team of the Westfield A. C. lost its chance of jumping into second place in the Central Journal Bowling League last evening by losing two out of three games in the series with the New Jersey Athletic Club. The games were rolled on the local alleys. The visitors rolled well, while the home team ran into the greatest number of splits on record. In the second game Baker had eight. The first game went to the New Jerseys by a big margin of 51. Then Westfield rolled 831 and defeated their opponents badly. The second game was wildly exciting. Westfield had the Jerseys all but beaten at the windup. Every man but one on the Westfield team had a split and the New Jersey bowlers won the game by four pins.

Little Chance of Future Trouble in That Way—Remarkable Increase in Amount of Flow—Now Reached One Million Gallons a Day—Caused by Leakage—Press Reporter Investigates Beds

One of the chief municipal questions which now confronts the people of Plainfield and their representatives in the Common Council is that of sewage disposal. At present the intermittent filtration system is in use here. Its success has been variously disputed. Of late complaints have been made that the disposal beds, located at the western limits of the city, near Dunellen, were unable to properly care for it and that the flowage escaped into Green brook. Yesterday afternoon a Press reporter made a tour of investigation of the beds, and then interviewed Street Commissioner Gavett to secure such facts and figures as were not to be obtained by a mere observation of the beds.

He learned that while, for a short time, the water did overflow the banks of one of the lower beds and run into the swampy land beyond, it was due to an accident to one of the embankments which is now being repaired and action taken to prevent a recurrence. He also learned that by the unfortunate combination of the weather and an extraordinary amount of flowage, the beds were compelled to do more than was conductive to the best and most satisfactory results.

For the benefit of those who have not visited the sewage disposal beds, it may be stated that there are twenty of them west of Rock avenue, arranged in series or tiers of four each. Three of these beds have not been finished. Then there are two others east of Rock avenue, that are in good condition, making nineteen in all that are ready for use. All are now in service.

Last October saw the beds in good condition. The daily flow was then 500 000 gallons. Not more than three or four beds were in actual use at that time, the other beds being allowed to partially dry out and become purified by the air, as originally intended. About that time it was decided to give up the old method of passing the flow through a screen and separating the solids and liquids. As soon as the water disappeared the remainder was treated with slacked lime.

After the heavy fall of snow and subsequent rains that opened the month of December last, the flow began to increase. After an investigation it was proved beyond a reasonable doubt that there was a leak in the system of sewers and that the ground water was entering the line at a rapid rate. The circumstances of this leakage will be explained later.

This leakage of the ground water, or water that percolates beneath the surface of the ground, resulted in a rapid increase in the amount of the flowage at the beds until it now reaches 1,000,000 gallons a day. The addition of so much pure water has the result, however, of largely diluting the flow of sewage and making the water much clearer.

So much continued cold weather has greatly handicapped the efficiency of the beds in caring for the flow. Several times the water has frozen solid to the bottom of the beds. This, of course, interfered with the filtration of the water through the sand bottoms of the beds into the drains beneath. So much of the cold ground water mixed with the warmer waters of the sewage that it was chilled and, instead of melting away under the ice when turned on a bed, it simply flooded the ice and soon froze.

This increase in the amount of the flowage and the decrease in the rapidity of the filtration has made things busy at the beds. It has been found necessary to utilize all of them constantly. Instead of allowing them a week perhaps in which the water can filter away and the sand become purified by the air, it has been necessary to fill them up every two or three days before they are really empty. The result is that the water from the drains is more liable to contain organic matter in solution although not visible and the residue cannot be treated with lime.

The trouble to the embankments was due to the rapid changes in temperature which one moment froze the earth hard and fast and then converted it into mud. The ice on the beds also hid any small openings that otherwise would have been noticed and promptly repaired.

Some time ago an intercepting drain was laid at the head of the third tier of beds to carry off the water from the drains beneath the first and second tiers. This was deemed expedient as the long length of drains for all five tiers might become clogged with fine sand. The repaired spot in the embankment, made when the drain was laid, was weak. The water tunnelled its way through that place on the western side of the second bed in the third tier and overflowed the third and fourth beds in the same tier. The increase in the water in the fourth bed of that tier finally flowed over the outermost embankment into the swamp beyond. The break was discovered and repaired. That happened a week ago. The outermost embankment is now being strengthened and raised.

The water also worked its way through the outer embankment to the next tier of beds. This is also repaired and being strengthened and raised. Another break occurred three days ago in the embankment north of the fourth bed in the second tier and flooded the adjoining bed but without serious results. That is also being repaired.

The situation at the beds is not at present, and was not near as bad as it is pictured. The water is not flowing directly from the banks into the brook nor is there any prospect of its doing so provided the repairs now under way are continued. The beds themselves are caring for more of the flowage than they can handle with the best results. These troubles are the result of the great increase in the amount of flowage and not in any mismanagement of the beds or any inefficiency of the beds themselves, although they are undoubtedly not as successful in the winter as they are in the summer months. The discovery and stoppage of the leak allowing the ground water to enter the sewers would place affairs in a much more satisfactory condition.

During the hours of the greatest flow, the flowage at the entrance to the beds, average 45,000 gallons of water an hour. Last October, it amounted to about 27,000 gallons. There are two trunk sewers in Plainfield; the north sewer, which drains the business section of the city, between the city line on the north and Fifth street, and the south sewer which drains the residence section of Netherwood and in the eastern and southern end of the city. Experience has shown that the ground has, under ordinary circumstances been well divided and the flow was very even from the two sewers. Now, however, the flow from the south sewer is about twice as great as the flow from the other.

Street Commissioner Gavett has investigated the matter and found that on Richmond street, between Third street and Watchung avenue, about half the volume that flows from the south sewer finds its way into the sewers through some leak. In that section the sewer pipe is laid below the level of the ground water, owing to the nearness that the water comes to the surface of the ground. Many leaks have been found in that section and repaired, but there are undoubtedly others. They were caused by the explosion of illuminating gas in the sewers in 1895. Exact figures regarding the leakage are impossible, but, as near as it is possible to estimate it, the ground water supplies 360,000 gallons of the 1,000,000 gallons that flow into the sewage disposal beds daily. With the leak repaired and this extra flow stopped, the beds would be able to handle what remained without forcing.

Epworth League Officers.

Last Tuesday evening the members of the Epworth League of Monroe Avenue church elected the following officers: President, Geo. Parker; first vice-president, Mrs. W. C. O'Donnell; second vice-president, Miss Leora Wenzel; third vice-president, Walter M. McGee; fourth vice-president, Mrs. Mansfield Smith; secretary, Mansfield Smith; treasurer, Miss Anna Stafford. At the close of the election the members by a rising vote gave their unanimous decision to support the newly-elected officers throughout the year.

Wants Public Scales.

A prominent resident of this city will present a petition to the City Council at its next regular meeting asking them to establish public scales for the city, where correct weight can be secured. He claims that in several instances short weights have been given by different dealers and that it is only fair that a public scale that is accurate should be established.

Grand Jury Nearly Through.

The Union County Grand Jury, now in session at Elizabeth, will probably conclude its labors today. Its findings will then be presented tomorrow.

WATER COMPANY KEEPS RIGHT ON AT WORK.

TROUBLE WITH DUNELLEN OFFICIALS

Watchung Water Company, it is Alleged, Have Forfeited Their Rights.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, Jan. 19—Just what will be the outcome of the trouble between the Watchung Water Company and the borough cannot be seen as yet, although a new chapter in the story was begun yesterday morning when Mayor Brakeley served a notice upon the president of the company to stop laying the pipes. No attention was paid to the notice, however, as all day yesterday Superintendent Chas. Sebring, who is also president of the water company, continued to dig new ditches and lay more pipes.

At a special meeting of the Borough Council held Friday night, a resolution was adopted for the Clerk to serve a notice upon the company to cease digging trenches and to fill up the open ones. The notice evidently was not served by the clerk, as the Mayor performed that duty yesterday. The notice is not directed to the Watchung Water Company, but "to whom it may concern."

The Watchung Water Company received a franchise to lay pipes through the borough last February. The work was to have been begun and finished by August, but the work was not even commenced until a week or two ago. In the meantime the Council had met and retracted the franchise, as they said the Watchung Water Company had forfeited their right because they had failed to complete the work in six months. Therefore, the Council claim that the Watchung Water Company are laying their pipes without permission. Meanwhile the people are anxiously awaiting the result of the struggle.

SECRET INQUIRY INTO BIG WRECK.

Middlesex Officials Will Not Tell When They Will Investigate.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, Jan. 19.—John S. Voorhees, Prosecutor of the Pleas of Middlesex county, and Dr. Samuel Long, the county physician, have not yet begun the inquiry into the causes of the wreck on the Lehigh Valley road at West Dunellen Jan. 9.

Neither official will disclose the time and place of this investigation, as it is not a public inquiry, but simply a personal investigation on their part to determine if an inquest is necessary, or if the circumstances warrant the laying of the facts before the next Grand Jury.

Mr. Voorhees stated that for the present the inquiry would be private, and that the officials counted upon receiving the co-operation and assistance of the railway officers. If, however, the railroad company throws any obstacle in the way, then an inquest will be held in Middlesex county, and the authorities of that county will compel the attendance of witnesses and the giving of testimony. Such an investigation would be public.

MATCH SHOOT.

W. H. Terry Bested Captain Bunk by Score of 41 to 40.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, January 19.—An exciting match was shot on the grounds of the Middlesex Gun Club at South River, yesterday afternoon, between Captain Bunk, of Grand American Handicap fame, a New Brunswick crack shot, and William H. Terry, of Plainfield. It was a fifty live birds for $100 a side. Terry won by a score of 41 to 40. It was a handicap event, Bunk shooting at thirty yards and Terry at twenty-eight yards.

Among the Plainfielders present during the afternoon were Bert Hinrichs, Percy Sandford, Charles Howard, Pony Lambert and Scott Terry.

Suing Calvary Church.

Charles H. Hand, the real estate man, has brought suit in Justice Moffett's court against the Calvary Baptist church. The amount involved is $30, and the papers were served upon Spencer Conway, one of the members of the board of trustees. The ground on which the suit is brought is an order on the church for $30 which Architect Clum gave Mr. Hand, and which the church is said to have promised to pay. The case comes up for trial a week from today.

CRACKED SAFE AND SHOT POLICEMAN.

Daring Burglars at Work in Somerville.

ESCAPED WITHOUT BOOTY.

POLICEMAN MANNING CROW FATALLY SHOT BY UNSEEN ASSAILANT.

He Was Hurrying to the Scene at the Time—Loud Explosion in Office of Somerville Beef Company First Told of the Burglar's Work—Safe and Office Wrecked—Alarm Sent Out.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, Jan. 19—A gang of three burglars broke into the office of the Somerville Beef Company early this morning, blew open the safe and then shot and fatally injured the policeman, Manning Crow, who attempted to prevent their escape. All three escaped but without any plunder except a revolver that was found in the office.

The T. A. B. Association gave a big ball in T. A. B. Hall on Main street last evening and it drew a large crowd from all the surrounding towns. There were, in consequence, an unusual number of strangers in Somerville last evening. The centre of attraction was the hall and Policeman Manning Crow was on duty there. Crow is the oldest man on the Somerville police force. He is a large man, weighing 250 pounds.

The revelry continued past midnight without any signs of abating. At 2 o'clock the ball was still in full swing. It was only a few minutes past 2:30 o'clock when a long freight train on the Jersey Central Railroad went rumbling by. Suddenly above the roar of the train the sound of a great explosion was heard. It came from the direction of South street, near the railroad. Residents within a radius of two blocks were awakened by the concussion.

Crow heard the sound and hurried in that direction. He ran down Main street to South street and as he turned the corner he noticed a man climbing in the window of the office of the Somerville Beef Company, a block away. The window was evidently shattered and the smoke was pouring out. When Crow reached the corner opposite the Beef Company's office a dark form suddenly appeared from behind a corner of the building and fired two shots at the officer. Crow did not see his assailant until the crack of the revolver rang out. Then he promptly drew his own revolver and returned the fire at the fleeting figure, emptying all five chambers.

One of the bullets fired by the unknown assailant, struck Crow in the right side, imbedding itself dangerously near his lung. In the excitement, the policeman did not hardly realize that he was shot but hurried to the railroad station to give a general alarm. He made no attempt to enter the office of the beef company then. He saw nothing more of the burglars. On reaching the station and telling his story, he became faint and was carried to his home on Franklin street. Dr. Swinton was hurriedly summoned. He pronounced the injuries probably fatal.

Mrs. William Brown lives next door to the large frame building occupied by the beef company. She was suddenly awakened by a loud explosion. Hurrying to the window she looked forth in time to see two men at the window of the adjoining building. They soon disappeared in the darkness. She was unable to get any accurate idea of their appearance.

Several railroad men and citizens, braver than the rest, hurried to the scene of the explosion. There were no signs of the burglars. They found the side door to the office broken in. The burglars had evidently gained an entrance by forcing it. The interior of the office was a complete wreck. The large safe stands in a corner of the room. The powerful doors had been blown to pieces. The debris was scattered about the room. The furniture and the telephone were all wrecked by the explosion. The inner door to the safe, behind which the money and valuables were kept, was still intact although badly jammed and dented.

It was evident that the burglars were not successful in obtaining any plunder. The only thing missing was a revolver, the property of one of the book-keepers, which had been kept in the safe. In the inner compartment of the safe was $1,200 in cash and a quantity of valuable papers. It is not customary to keep so much money on hand but an unusual amount was received yesterday and not deposited. From that fact, the authorities are in-

ECHO HEARD IN COURT OF FAMOUS CONTENTION.

ELMER E. RUNYON PUT OFF TRAIN.

Claims $20,000 From the Central, a Result of the Package-Express War.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Jan. 19—The package-express war which was waged by the United States Express Company and the Central Railroad of New Jersey against the men who carried packages on the railroad to and from Elizabeth was revived yesterday when Elmer E. Runyon's suit against the New Jersey Central was brought to trial in the Union County Court, Elizabeth.

Mr. Runyon, who is an Elizabeth nurseryman, sues the Central Railroad for $20,000 damages for being ejected from a train.

The express company officials thought he was helping Edward Stoddard, of Elizabeth, who is running a package express between New York and Elizabeth, and they invoked the aid of the railroad company to stop him. Runyon was stopped by Central Railroad detectives at Jersey City because he had two packages, and was not allowed to board the train. He walked to Communipaw and the detectives followed. He was stopped there and pulled off the steps leading to the car platform.

The detectives followed him to Jersey City, where he took a train on the Pennsylvania Railroad for Elizabeth. Runyon then brought suit against the Central Railroad, but when the issue came to trial he was non-suited. Then he carried the case to the Court of Appeals, which ordered a new trial. The case will go to the jury today.

BY TROLLEY TO PRINCETON.

One More Link in the Chain Between New York and Philadelphia.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, January 19—Electric railway extension is going on in this vicinity at a lively gait, and it is expected that within the next eighteen months Trenton will be in trolley connection with all the large towns within a radius of fifteen miles of the city.

The Trenton Passenger Railway Company has completed its line and will continue it to Allentown, N. J. The Trenton and Princeton Traction Company has filed articles of incorporation with the Secretary of State. The company has a capital stock of $200,000, of which $35 000 is paid up. The purpose is to build a trolley road from Trenton to Princeton, which will be a link in the line that will eventually extend from New York to Philadelphia.

Capitalists have been quietly working for several months to secure a right of way for a trolley line from Trenton to Lakewood, from which point the line will be extended to Point Pleasant. The right of way has been secured with the exception of about two miles. Besides these companies, Col. Morrell is still endeavoring to get a right of way across the Delaware River bridge into this city. This line will run from Trenton to Bristol to connect for Philadelphia.

LONG DRAWN OUT CASE.

COUNTY COURT FINALLY DECIDES TENANTS MUST PAY RENT.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Morrison Claimed That They Were Not Liable Because They Had No Lease for the House.

Counsellor S. S. Swackhamer, of the firm of Codington & Swackhamer, won a case in Elizabeth yesterday for his clients, Hand & MacIntyre, real estate owners, which has been going the rounds of the courts for several months. The suit was brought against James M. and Elmira H. Morrison who now live on Dunellen avenue, but who had lived in one of Hand & MacIntyre's houses and were in arrears $80 for rent, it was alleged.

The case was first tried in Justice Moffett's court where it was decided in favor of the plaintiffs. The defense was that the wife was not liable as the lease she had signed had expired. She said there had been no renewal of the lease, although the couple stayed in the house and paid some rent. The case was appealed by the defendants, but when the day set for the trial came the defendants did not put in an appearance.

The case was then adjourned to a day certain and notice was again given of trial. Again Morrison and his wife failed to appair, so Mr. Swackhamer asked that he be allowed to take the bond off the files for prosecution.

Then the defendants came forward and took a hand in the proceedings. They presented an affadavit to the court to obtain a rule to show cause why judgment shouldn't be opened and the case re-instated. That rule was argued yesterday by J. P. D. Kirch, attorney for the Morrisons. Mr. Kirch made a persistent effort to have the case re-instated, but after hearing the argument the court refused to open the judgment and dismissed the rule. There is nothing for Morrison or his wife to do now except to pay the judgment.

DRAWHEAD PULLED OUT.

Engine on the Club Car Train Disabled at North Avenue Station.

Today for the first time in a long while the New York express, which leaves the North Avenue station mornings at 8:30 o'clock for the city, met with a mishap that delayed it ten minutes. The drawhead in the second smoker pulled out just as the train started, so that car had to be cut out of the train and switched over to a side track. The train then proceeded.

The 8:48 train was also delayed a few minutes, for the disabled car was left on the track that train takes, so the 8:48 engine pushed the car on ahead of it until it reached a switch.

A Cake Walk.

The recently remodled parlors to the "Cottage," the road house on South avenue near Fanwood, conducted by Jack Benner, were opened to the public last evening with a dance and dinner. There were some thirty couples present who enjoyed themselves dancing to Prof. Frazee's music. At 11 o'clock there was a prize waltz in which five couples participated. At 1 o'clock, an exciting cake-walk was held in which four couples contested. It was won by Harry Irving and partner.

FUNERAL OF LODGE WAS JOYOUS AFFAIR.

Knights of Ancient Essenic Order Come to Their End.

BANQUET AT CITY HOTEL.

THE FINAL OBSEQUIES WERE OF A PLEASANT CHARACTER.

Sixty Members Gathered Around the Festive Board and Enjoyed the Fine Cuisine Afforded by Landlord Beerbower—Lawyer Murphy Acted as Master of Ceremonies—Much Speechmaking.

Sixty members of Plainfield Senate, Knights of the Ancient Essenic Order, gathered around the festive board in the dining hall of the City Hotel, last night, and made merry in defiance of the fact that at the end of the banquet the Latin phrase, "Requiescat in Peace," was appropriately accepted as the final description of what is a condition and not a theory of the lodge's career.

Instituted a little over a year ago under the most auspicious circumstances that any local lodge ever started life with, and notwithstanding the exuberant flow of wit and wisdom concerning the order and its fine prospects, past and future (for it has no present), that came in the aftermath of the only good things the members have seen since depositing their initiation fee and dues into its treasury, the affair last night was in reality the last sad obsequies before its remains are laid away with full appreciation of the Latin phrase. But for a funeral service, it was the hottest thing that ever came down the pike, if the lurid description is acceptable under the nominal solemnity that attended the inglorious exit of the Senate. Scientifically diagnosed, the lodge died of innocuous desuetude. It was a terrible disease, lingering and little administered to, but as if to defy the world in its final jump from the dizzy precipice at the end of the rocky road it has traveled, the last ceremonies of the mourners were joyful beyond measure.

Soon after 9 o'clock the members of the order, who were entitled to the pleasures of the spread, met in the parlors of the City Hotel and subsequently adjourned to the dining hall. Here Landlord Beerbower had prepared things to the queen's taste. The tables were formed into a T, at the head of which Clarence Murphy, secretary of the now defunct Senate, occupied a seat and acted as master of ceremonies. Mr. Murphy was in his happiest vein, and did the principal honors of the evening in a delightful manner. The menu was elaborate in the cuisine it provided, and, of course, it would not be pardonable to let this feature of the affair pass without some slight reference to the fact that "the inner man did full justice" to the array of fine things offered. After the dinner had been served, meanwhile the various diners enjoying informal social chat among themselves, the wisdom and wit flowed in unceasing strain under the diplomatic handling of Lawyer Murphy at the head of the table.

The first one called upon was Past Excellent Senator Frank H. Smith. Unprepared, as he said, to make a speech on such short notice, Councilman Smith indulged in a little humor at the start, but later expressed sincere regret that the dinner was to mark the end of the lodge in Plainfield. He referred to its favorable start, and said that he hoped that even at this late day it might be resuscitated and made a lively, permanent organization. Geo. O. Stevens, Dick Williams, Nathan Titsworth, Councilmen Buckle, Tolles and Coriell, C. E. Teal, Dr. Pocock and several others had a few wor is to say.

After the speechmaking Geo. Rogers presided at the piano, and the rest of the time until early this morning was enjoyed in singing college and popular songs.

WORK OF GEN. WOOD

Tells Senate Committee How He Has Governed Santiago.

PUT TRUST IN THE CUBANS

Thinks Fifty Thousand Men Will Be Necessary to Maintain Order Throughout the Whole Island—His Advice.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 19.--General Leonard Wood, military commander of the Department of Santiago, was before the Senate committee on military affairs yesterday.

He gave a detailed account of his operations in the province and in the city of Santiago, and also gave his estimate of the military force necessary to maintain order in the island.

He said that for some time the seven thousand five hundred men now in the province of Santiago should be continued, but after a time five thousand would be sufficient. He considered, however, that a military force would be necessary for some years and said it should be sufficient effectually and quickly to check any trouble before it could gain headway. This remark applied to the island as a whole and he thought as many as fifty thousand troops should be stationed throughout Cuba.

With proper precaution and tact he did not anticipate trouble, and he believed that the insurgent forces would rapidly disintegrate in all parts of the island.

Santiago had been a great stronghold of the Cubans under Garcia, but they had now practically disbanded. Outlining his mode of governing the province, he said he had made no appointments to office, except upon the recommendations of Cubans, and that he had in all cases put them upon their honor in making such recommendations.

He had shown absolute trust in them in all matters, going among them always unarmed, and leaving the books of the administration always open to their inspection.

He had Cubans in all departments, and his private secretary had at one time been a member of Gomez's staff. Thus they always knew how their money had been expended and knew just what he was doing as their governor.

General Wood said that his first effort had been to encourage the people of all the towns to establish self-government, and he had been especially zealous in having them select their local officers, open schools, establish courts, build roads, etc., and in cases where they did not have the money for these purposes he had aided them by contributions from the general fund. This system was entirely different from the old one under Spanish rule, when all the collections were forwarded to Havana and never came back, only 16 per cent. of the revenue being devoted to local uses.

He had found the people especially jealous of their rights in this respect and the recent public meetings and protests against sending their revenues to Havana were due to this feeling.

General Wood said he had two thousand men making roads and that he was getting many schools started.

Replying to a question from Senator Hawley, he said the people were anxious for the separation of the church and state in educational matters.

Speaking of Santiago city, he said the collections, mainly from customs, have been sufficient to pay all legitimate expenses and leave a balance of $230,000, which he meant to devote to cleaning out the harbor.

A Bridge Carried Away.

Cleveland, O., Jan. 19.--At about 1.50 o'clock yesterday morning a dam above the Wilson avenue bridge gave way. Back of the dam was a body of water a mile and a half long, hundreds of feet wide, and in places twenty-five to thirty feet deep.

The break allowed torrents of water to pour down on the flats below it, threatening the entire destruction of the bridge.

Along the line threatened by the flood are the big plants of the Standard Oil Company, the Cleveland Paper Mills, the Flick slaughter house and other manufacturing plants.

Only a few persons lived in the track of the flood and these were all warned in time and sought safety on higher ground.

At three o'clock the right pier of the bridge fell. A large force of police and firemen was sent to the scene. The bridge is a structure seven hundred feet long and was built only a few months ago. It cost three hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

Soon after ten o'clock the sixth abutment of the bridge gave way. The structure sagged, and then, with a tremendous noise, snapped in two.

About one hundred and fifty feet of the bridge formed an incline-plane from the shore into the water.

The break in the dam, which was an unsubstantial mass of earth, occurred while thirty men were at work in the canal which was being sunk by the city engineers to allow the pent up water to find a gradual and safe outlet. These men barely escaped with their lives.

Collapse of a Platform.

Denver, Col., Jan. 19.--The breaking of a platform at the reception to Colonel W. J. Bryan at Coliseum Hall on Tuesday night threw three hundred persons into a mass and started a panic in the audience.

The platform, which stood three feet above the floor, was crowded with prominent citizens of Colorado. Those in front, among them Colonel Bryan and his wife, Governor Thomas, Mayor McMurray, and State Senator Barcela, and Father William O'Ryan, were thrown on the people in the middle, those in the rear being thrown forward in a like manner.

Among the injured were Sheriff Jones Ex-Senator John H. Poole, A. B. McGaffrey and Moses Viancourt, sergeant at arms of the legislature.

Probably forty others suffered injuries of a slight nature, but the accident to Mr. Viancourt may prove serious.

SENATOR BACON SPEAKS.

Addresses the Senate Upon His Anti-Expansion Resolution.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 19.--At the opening of yesterday's session of the Senate, the chaplain, in the invocation, referred feelingly to the death of John Russell Young, librarian of Congress. Mr. Davis, chairman of the committee on foreign relations, withdrew his notice given yesterday of an executive session, on account of the announced speech of Mr. Bacon of Georgia, but gave notice that to-day, at the conclusion of the speech of Mr. Turner of Washington, he would ask the Senate to go into executive session.

Mr. Perkins of California, of the naval affairs committee, called up the resolution providing for the admission to the Naval Academy as students, Ricardo Yglesias of Costa Rica and Alberto Venezuela Montana of Columbia.

Mr. Gear of Iowa moved to amend the resolution with reference to young Yglesias by adding the name of Oscar Deignan of Iowa, one of the Merrimac heroes, but later, at the request of several senators, withdrew the amendment. Both resolutions were adopted.

Mr. Bacon of Georgia then addressed the Senate upon his anti-expansion resolutions, which were presented last week.

During the course of his remarks the senator referred to England and the Nicaragua canal.

"The object of England," he said, "is that if war should come in the East, the United States may be drawn into it, and that she may have this country as an ally. If that war comes it will not be confined to the Orient. It will involve every nation of the universe."

The Nicaraguan bill was then taken up.

The House, under a special rule, adopted last week, devoted the day to the consideration of bills reported from the committee on inter-state and foreign commerce.

Harry the Valet Sentenced.

London, Jan. 19.--William Johnson, known as "Harryq, the valet," has been sentenced to seven years' imprisonment upon his plea of guilt in having stolen the Duchess of Sutherland's jewels while the duchess was on her way from Paris to London last October.

Johnson entered the dock smiling and a smile was still on his face when he left it after receiving his sentence. He persisted in his refusal to give any information as to the whereabouts of the missing jewels.

The court ordered that the 320 pounds found upon him when he was arrested be given to the Duchess of Sutherland.

Speeches by Telephone.

Chicago, Jan. 19.--The local societies of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology of Chicago, Boston, New York, Philadelphia and St. Louis, will hold their annual banquets on the night of February 3. Only one toastmaster will be required to preside over the five banquets, as the halls will be connected by long distance telephones.

Speeches from Governor Roosevelt of New York, Thomas A. Edison and others will be heard in each banqueting hall. At each plate will be a tiny oblong telephone receiver, and the diners, by holding the little instrument to their ears, will listen to speeches hundreds of miles away.

Commander Harris Quits Navy.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 19.--Lieutenant Commander I. Harris, who was in command of the repair ship Vulcan on the ill-fated expedition which terminated in the loss of the Spanish cruiser Maria Teresa on Cat island, has been honorably discharged from the naval service of the United States.

This action involves no reflection whatever upon the character or service of Commander Harris, but is simply one of the natural results of the practical conclusion of peace.

Illinois Thanks Miss Gould.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 19.--In the House yesterday Mr. Abbott, Republican, offered a resolution thanking Miss Helen Gould of New York for her efforts to ameliorate the condition of the sick and wounded soldiers during the war with Spain.

The resolution is authorized and a copy will be engrossed and sent to Miss Gould, and a like copy on parchment and framed to be hung in the Memorial Hall in the State House. It was adopted.

Opposition in Havana.

Havana, Jan. 19.--The newspapers continue to criticise the action of the American authorities in giving the Spanish Bank the contract to collect back Spanish taxes.

It is claimed that pain alone should do this, and it is also asserted that if the bank collects Spain's dues it should also liquidate Spain's obligations to her citizens, who are still unpaid, and who are met with continued reiteration that Spain is unable to pay them.

THE NICARAGUA CANAL

Claims of the Grace-Cragin-Eyre Syndicate.

PLANS AND HOPES OUTLINED

Its Representatives Before the House Committee on Commerce—Connection from Ocean to Ocean in Three Years Promised.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 19.--What is known as the Grace-Cragin-Eyre syndicate, organized to construct the Nicaragua canal, had a hearing yesterday before the House committee on commerce.

The syndicate was represented by Edward F. Cragin of Chicago, who has been one of the most active figures in the organization; Colonel David McClure of New York, attorney for the syndicate, and Frank S. Washburn, consulting engineer.

Colonel McClure made the opening statements, showing the standing of the syndicate by reading a list of the financiers constituting it. The list included Messrs. John J. Astor, Levi P. Morton, Robert Goelet, W. R. Grace, John D. Crimmins, John A. McCall, E. R. Ladue, Warner Miller, W. B. Sloan and many others prominent in banking and financial circles.

These gentlemen, Colonel McClure said, had not embarked on any sentimental project; they had examined into the entire question from a strictly business standpoint. They were satisfied with the practicability of the Isthmian waterway and believed that the concessions of Nicaragua to the old Nicaragua Canal Company was about to expire, going out of existence under the terms of the concession on October 9 next. They determined, therefore, to take up the matter where it was likely to be left when the old concession ended.

Mr. Stewart, Republican of New Jersey, asked if this was not a violation of the terms of the old concession, which provided for a renewal.

Colonel McClure did not consider it a violation, as he said the spirit of the old concession was that work should progress steadily. But the officers of the old company conceded, he said, that no work had been done since 1893, and in fact no work had been done since 1889-'90. So that, he continued, the work had not proceeded with ordinary diligence, and it was but natural to expect that Nicaragua would hold that the spirit of the old concession was not observed. He said he had no controversy with the old company, but his statement was in response to questions on the old concession.

With this end in view the syndicate had gone to Nicaragua and secured a contract for a concession which was to come into existence in October when the old concession terminated.

Chairman Hepburn, Republican of Iowa, asked if this concession came into existence next October, under the terms of the contract, without further action.

Colonel McClure answered that no further action was necessary in creating the concession beyond the details of the contract. The contract created a present interest, to begin, like certain leases, in the future.

When asked how soon the funds would be forthcoming and work would begun, Colonel McClure said:

"In three years we will have communication from ocean to ocean. In a letter to the president the president of the company says that twenty million dollars will be spent at once; we will have results in three years."

In reply to questions, Colonel McClure said that the syndicate had paid one hundred thousand dollars to Nicaragua, and had agreed to pay four hundred thousand dollars more in six months.

He regarded the new concession as much more advantageous than the old one, as it was in perpetuity, and also because it gave rights of control and police for five miles on either side of the route. These benefits made it more easy to interest capital.

The rights of Costa Rica in the canal were gone into.

Colonel McClure said that these rights were not considerable, as the great highway was across Nicaragua. It was intended, however, to acquire all rights essential from Costa Rica.

Is This The Paul Jones?

Mobile, Ala., Jan. 9.--A telegram to Mr. Lawrence Jones yesterday, from Scranton, Miss., at 11.20 a. m. says:

"Unknown yacht wrecked six miles from mainland. If anyone on board should be rescued immediately, as they would soon drown."

Mr. Jones left here on the Louisville and Nashville train at 2.15 p. m. for Scranton, which is forty miles south of here.

Captain La Bogle of the fishing smack John W. Hildin, which has arrived here, reports that while cruising at Chandleur island on January 6 he was told by Captain Hansen, the lighthouse keeper, that the Paul Jones had stopped there on January 5 and a party of ladies and gentlemen visited the lighthouse. He did not say what course the yacht took after leaving the island.

A pilot house shutter has been found in the water between Cubits Gap and Pass l'Outre, size 2 1-2 by 3 feet, which Mr. Lawrence Jones says is too large for the Paul Jones.

Mishap to the Bermuda.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 19.--The British steamship Bermuda, bound from Kingston, Jamaica, to Baltimore, with passengers and freight, went ashore at Cape Henry Tuesday night.

There was a heavy sea running and the captain lost his bearings. The lift savers were on the scene, but by hard work on the part of the ship's crew the Bermuda floated and proceeded on her course.

It is not known whether the vessel is injured.

CRYING FOR HELP.

Lots of It in Plainfield, But Daily Growing Less.

The kidneys cry for help.

There is no organ in the body so delicately constructed or so important to health.

The kidneys are the filters of the blood.

If they do not filter the blood very soon becomes foul and poisonous.

Anybody knows that there can be no health where there is poisoned blood.

Backache is one of the first indications of kidney trouble.

Doan's Kidney Pills are what is wanted.

Are just what overworked kidneys need.

They strengthen and invigorate the kidneys—help them to do their work—never fail to cure any case of kidney disease.

Read the proof from a Plainfield citizen.

Mr. Richard Day, of 134 East Front street, says: "I was troubled at times with symptoms of kidney complaint for four years. My chief difficulty was a miserable pain across my back and a sort of lame feeling over my kidneys. Standing any length of time or walking any distance aggravated it greatly. I was never sick much in my life and consequently never took much medicine, so when I first began having these attacks I paid but little attention to them. They, however, grew worse instead of better, so I had to look about for a remedy. I read quite frequently in our papers about cures brought about by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills, so I got a box at L. W. Randolph's drug store, and after taking them I felt greatly relieved. I have recommended them to my friends, and those who have used them speak very highly in their praise. I consider that Doan's Kidney Pills are a splendid remedy for complaints like mine."

There is no long waiting for help if Ripans Tabules are taken for dyspepsia and headache. Relief comes quickly. One Tabule (about the size of a small button) will relieve distress in the stomach within fifteen minutes and the headache will shortly disappear. There was an industrious, hard-working woman of Cooperstown, N. Y., some sixty years of age, who for a long time had suffered greatly from dyspepsia and dreadful headaches. Her stomach tormented her so that she could hardly work at all, and, although she had tried all sorts of things, she got no relief. A friend sent her some Ripans Tabules and she felt better as soon as she took the first one. She felt more like working. "I have continued with the Tabules ever since," she says, "and they always help me."

A new style packet containing THE RIPANS TABULES in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at some drug stores—FOUR FOR FIVE CENTS. This low-priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (120 tabules) can be had by mail by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (TEN TABULES) will be sent for five cents.

MERRITT TO TRY EAGAN.

At the Head of the Court-Martial Detail Chosen.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 19.--The detail for the court martial which is to try Commissary General Charles F. Eagan on charges growing out of his statement before the war investigation commission last week, in which he severely attacked General Miles, was made public at the war department last night.

The court is made up of thirteen army officers, of whom Major General Wesley Merritt is at the head, and a judge advocate, and it is to meet in this city on Wednesday, the 25th inst., or as soon thereafter as practicable, this qualification being necessary because a number of the members are at distant points, and will require some days to adjust their affairs and reach this city.

Cecil Rhodes for Peace.

London, Jan. 19.--The Rev. Dr. Joseph C. Hartzell of Cincinnati, Ohio, the American Methodist Episcopal bishop of Africa, who left New York for Europe on January 4 last, will sail from Liverpool on Saturday for Africa.

He had a long conference with Mr. Cecil Rhodes, and he has been granted concessions of lands and buildings and has been promised co-operation in their development, especially in establishing industrial missions among the natives. Mr. Rhodes has invited Bishop Hartzell and Mrs. Hartzell to visit him at his Rhodesian home, "Groot Schuur," situated a short distance from Cape Town, in July next.

Discussing the Anglo-American relations, Mr. Rhodes said:

"What we want is an intertwining of mutual interests in the interests of humanity upon the part of the English speaking peoples throughout the world, whereby we can prevent war. We want universal peace."

Pneumatic-Tube Service.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 19.--The House committee on postoffice and post roads yesterday restored the appropriation of $225,000 for the pneumatic tube service, which was stricken from the post office appropriation last week. The appropriation is for the continuance of the service in New York, Philadelphia and Boston.

Since the committee decided not to continue the appropriation this year it has been overwhelmed wth pressure to restore it, and in consequence the committee yesterday reversed its former action.

Later in the day, upon the urgent solicitation of Representative Lorimer of Chicago, the committee decided to remove the restriction as to the cities where the appropriation shall be expended and to increase it to three million dollars.

This will give Chicago and other cities an opportunity to fight for part of the appropriation.

Ribbon Manufacturer Shot.

Allentown, Pa., Jan. 19.--Max Wolff of New York, president of the Palace Ribbon Manufacturing Company, was shot at three times last night by Morris C. Seinderstein, until lately foreman in the mill, as he was leaving his office in South Allentown.

Two bullets took effect, one in the right thigh and the other in the right shoulder, close to the spinal column. Wolff was taken to St. Luke's Hospital at South Bethlehem, seriously wounded.

Seinderstein was arrested and put under five thousand dollars' bail for a hearing on Saturday. Seinderstein is sixty-six years old and Wolff forty.

The men were until lately associated in business, having founded the Palace silk mill in this city ten years ago. Seinderstein, it is said, was under the influence of liquor at the time of the shooting.

The Troubles in Hungary.

Budapest, Jan. 19.--In the upper house of the Hungarian Diet yesterday the premier, Baron Banffy, replying to Cardinal Vaszary, archbishop of Gran, said that the government was aware of the gravity of the political situation, and was seeking a way out of the crisis regardless of personal considerations, and if the ministers did not succeed in effecting a settlement they would confine further action within the limits of the constitution, as their chief desire was to prevent a violation of the laws.

Count Szechenyi moved that the house present an address to the emperor begging him to exercise his constitutional rights in such a manner as to restore as early as possible the constitutional order. The motion will be considered on January 20

Armament of Sweden.

Stockholm, Jan. 19.--The Parliament of Sweden was opened yesterday. The speech from the throne was read by the minister of foreign affairs, Count Douglas, who pointed out that whatever might be the result of the czar's peace conference, the fact that it had been summoned did not imply that the country could afford to neglect the necessary measures for its defence.

Sweden, he continued, must continually strengthen its defences, which were altogether too weak, though both her army and navy were organized with the view of defence alone, and no one could suspect her of aggressive schemes.

King Oscar, at the conclusion of the reading of the speech, expressed the hope that Parliament would provide for experimental mobilization.

Another Strike at Colon.

Colon, Colombia, via Galveston, Tex., Jan. 19.--The railroad and dock laborers, encouraged by the success of the strike of March 22 last, went on strike on the arrival here of the steamer Finance, Captain Sukeforth, which left New York on January 10, demanding pay at the rate of one dollar in gold per day.

The strike is due to the continuous rise in the rate of exchange, which is now at 1.70 per cent.

SAMOANS IN REBELLION

Kaiser's Counsel Plots to Form a Dictatorship.

GERMANS VIOLATE TREATY

Americans Forced to Flee—British and United States Consuls with Aid of Sailors Reinstate Justice in Power.

Auckland, N. Z., Jan. 19.--Samoan advices just received here say that Chief Justice Chambers on December 31 declared Malietoa Tanus to have been elected king, in succession to King Malietoa, who recently died.

The chief justice also announced that Tamasese had been elected vice king. Chief Mataafa was disqualified.

The consuls of the United States and Great Britain and the captains of the German warship Falke and the British warship Porpoise met the German consul, who refused to recognize Malietoa Tanus and declined to operate in the dispersal of the Samoans, who thereupon assembled in force at Mulinu, armed themselves and surrounded the municipality.

Malietoa Tanus and Tamasese mustered about two thousand men, well armed, but supplied with defective ammunition.

The British and American consuls endeavored to avert hostilities, but they began on January 1. Malietoa Tanus and Tamasese fought bravely, but five hundred of their followers were captured. Then, disheartened and outnumbered, the two chiefs sought refuge on the British warship, and their followers sought protection under the guns of the Porpoise.

Mataafa's loss was sixty-one killed and wounded, and Malietoa Tanus lost twelve men killed and wounded.

The foreign residents were placed under the protection of a detachment of men belonging to the British warship, and Chief Justice Chambers and his family went on board of her.

The followers of Mataafa looted and burned Apia, destroyed the plantations and pillaged in the country.

The consuls later decided to recognize Mataafa and his chiefs as a provisional government, pending the receipt of instructions from the powers.

Afterward, Dr. Rafael and the German consul closed the supreme court, declaring that the power was vested in them.

The British and American consuls then appealed to the captain of the British warship Porpoise, who landed a force of bluejackets, and Chief Justice Chambers, under their guard, took his seat.

Mataafa held aloof from these last developments. The excitement continues.

Melbourne, Victoria, Jan. 19.--Advices received here from Samoa last evening, under date of January 12, say there has been fighting there owing to the decision of Chief Justice Chambers in favor of Malietoa Tanus, one of the candidates for the throne in succession to King Malietoa.

It is added that the native followers of Mataafa, the rival aspirant to the kingship, were victorious. Seventy-three men were killed or wounded.

Washington, Jan. 19.--The situation in the Samoan islands is realized here to be full of gravity. For some time there has been an exchange of correspondence between the three governments who are parties to the treaty of Berlin respecting the choice of a successor to King Malietoa, and some of the friction developed owing to the strict adherence of the United States government to the terms of the trea-

Youthful Pyromaniac.

Bristol, Conn., Jan. 19.--Lizzie Taylor the fourteen year old adopted daughter of W. S. Taylor of this place has been committed to the Connecticut Hospital for the Insane, suffering from a nacute mania for incendiarism. The child confessed to seven fires in Bristol during the last eighteen months.

Two destroyed the barns owned by Mr. Taylor and a third partially destroyed the Taylor homestead.

The girl on Monday was detected firing the house, by igniting paper in the attic.

Sir Henry Irving.

London, Jan. 19.--Harry Furniss, the artist, has started a movement for an Anglo-American testimonial to Sir Henry Irving, in appreciation of all that he has done to raise the dramatic profession.

He suggests that as the old Lyceum theatre must soon be pulled down, Sir Henry be presented by his English and American admirers with a freehold site, near the old theatre, of a new theatre, to be called the Irving theatre, as a gift from the two nations.

Fire in a Mine.

Newcastle, Col., Jan. 19.--The Wheeler mine of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company was discovered to be on fire just after the night shift started to work Tuesday night. An alarm was sounded and the men called out.

The number of men in the mine was about sixty. Ten men were working beyond where the fire is supposed to be.

They have not been seen and may be imprisoned.

Porter for Librarian.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 19.--It is hinted in official circles that the president thinks of appointing his secretary, John Addison Porter, as librarian of Congress to succeed the late John Russell Young.

It is too early for the president to announce what he will do, but Mr. Porter's name heads the list of those "prominently mentioned."

Mr. Choate's Nomination.

Washington, Jan. 19.--The Senate committee on foreign relations yesterday agreed to a favorable report upon the nomination of Joseph H. Choate to be ambassador to Great Britain.

ACCIDENT TO THE GRANT.

Steel Hawser Caught on the Propeller Shaft.

New York, Jan. 19.--The United States transport Grant was not able to start for Manila with the Fourth United States infantry yesterday owing to a slight accident which happened to the vessel.

As she was working out of her dock one of her propellers picked up a piece of an old wire hawser. The cable became twisted about the screw in such a manner that the propeller was stopped and the Grant proceeded to her anchorage by means of the other propeller.

Divers were sent down to remove the hawser and find out how much damage had been done. It was said later that the propeller blades had been bent. A report from Governor's island said that it would take two or three days to make repairs.

The Grant, which has on board the Fourth United States infantry, and one battalion of the Seventeenth United States infantry, was to have started at ten o'clock yesterday morning on her long voyage to Manila, by way of the Suez canal. So many persons had asked to be allowed to visit the transport before she set sail that the army authorities had contemplated setting aside a special day for the public to inspect the ship.

But owing to the shortness of the time allowed for getting the vessel into shape, this plan was found impossible. In lieu of this an order was given to have the Grant steam up North river to the Grant monument before leavng the harbor, so that the people of the city might have an opportunity to see her and give her a good send off.

An official party from Washington arrived in this city yesterday to witness the departure of the Grant. Adjutant General Corbin was one of it, being present as the representative of Secretary Alger, who was detained by the illness of his daughter.

Others in the party were Quartermaster General M. I. Ludington, Brigadier General Henry M. Duffield, Victor L. Mason, private secretary to Secretary Alger; Major George H. Hopkins, aide to Secretary Alger; Senators Warren, Mitchell and Proctor of the Senate committee on military affairs, and Representatives Fenton, Marsh, Griffin, McDonald, Lentz, Jett and Belknap of the House committee on military affairs.

Pay of State Troops.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 19.--It will not be necessary for the state of New York to take any further action in regard to the threatened reduction of a certain amount of money from the pay due the First, Twelfth, Forty-seventh and Sixty-ninth regiments of this state to protect the government from any claim on the part of the state for money paid the soldiers of these regiments between the date of their call out until they were mustered into the United States service.

The deduction will not be made by the war department in view of the opinion rendered by Comptroller Tracewell of the treasury.

A telegram was received yesterday by Governor Roosevelt from Adjutant General Corbin giving the text of this opinion, which was made public in Washington Tuesday, and which holds that no stoppage or deduction should be made in a soldier's pay on account of any payments made to him by the governor of a state or state authorities, as a militiaman, before his acceptance into the volunteer army of the United States.

The Chautauqua Movement.

Cleveland, O., Jan. 19.--Business of much importance to the friends of the Chautauqua movement was transacted at the annual meeting of the trustees of the assembly in this city last evening.

One thing decided upon was the removal of the headquarters to Cleveland.

Hereafter all the publications, including the Chautauquan, will be issued in this city.

One of the projects that are to be undertaken at the assembly ground next summer is the erection of the building to be called the Hall of Christ, for which Miss Helen Gould contributed five thousand dollars.

The structure, which is to be of brick and terra cotta, will stand upon an eminence in the grounds. The hall will be emblematic of the Savior ,and will illustrate the different events in his life.

In the apse will be a colossal figure of Christ. The cost of the structure will be $25,000.

The California Scandal.

Sacramento, Cal., Jan. 19.--In the investigation of the charges made by the San Francisco Call against Howard M. Wright, speaker of the Assembly, W. S. Leake, manager of the Call, testified that the statement and interviews attributed in the Call to Wright and to Milton J. Green, manager of U. S. Grant's senatorial campaign, were true as stated and were made to him (Leake) personally.

He told of Wright having confessed that he had received $1,650 from Green while a candidate for the Assembly, but that as circumstances had been such that he could not vote for Grant, he felt that he ought to return the money and would soon be in a condition to do so.

Being asked if Wright had told him of money given to other members of the legislature for their campaign expenses, Leake said "Yes."

Wright had claimed that money had been paid by Green to Senator Cutter and to Assemblymen Raw and Jilson.

Extradition With Brazil.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 19.--The president yesterday sent to the Senate a new extradition treaty between this country and Brazil.

It was referred to the committee on foreign relations, and at the meeting of that committee was taken up and referred to a sub-committee.

The treaty is a formal document providing for the exchange of persons charged with offenses on the usual lines.

Forced to Put in at Halifax.

Halifax, N. S., Jan. 19.--The steamer Manhansett, from Swansea for Baltimore, twenty-five days out, has put in here short of coal and leaking. She encountered very rough weather.

A Constitutional Convention.

There is no doubt but that New Jersey is seriously in need of a new Constitution, or, at least, numerous amendments to the present one to bring it up to date and in true touch with the existing condition of affairs. The present basis of State government are the ideas of fifty-five years ago, except for a few amendments that have been made by legislative enactment, which have been inadequate for the present situation. It has been truly said that there is no better time than now to amend the Constitution, because partisanship is at low ebb, and the great public questions would not be confused and unfairly weighted with partisan purposes.

Every effort to amend the Constitution by specific amendment has been a failure. The commission of 1873 found its most valuable suggestions rejected by the Legislature of 1874, and those which passed the Legislatures and the people have been so construed by the courts as to have converted municipal order into chaos. Subsequent attempts to amend have resulted in a curtailment of the power of the Governor over appointments and the insertion by the State Board of Canvassers and the Supreme Court of a provision which restricts the legislative power in a purely legislative function.

There is nothing rampant and demagogic in that portion of Governor Voorhees's inaugural message in which he discusses the question of curbing the great and growing prosperity of the corporations, known popularly as the "trusts," seeking New Jersey as a legal home, but in the quiet, earnest words of the chief executive there is reflected the fact that he realizes well the tendencies of centralized capital to encroach too far on the inherent rights of the people. The Governor indicates that he wants to deal with the matter in a conservative spirit, but withal along such lines as will secure fairness and justness to all. Well, the Governor has got a big field to work on.

If Mayor Wilson, of the borough, consulted his own personal preferences to the exclusion of all other considerations it is said that he would not become a candidate for the renomination and re-election. However, Mayor Wilson realizes that his administration has been satisfactory to the people that elected him, and they are urging him to stand for re-election, promising to use their best endeavors for his success at the polls. It is this condition of affairs that impels him to accede to the wishes of his friends. The Mayor and his friends think that he has a record in the Mayoralty to be proud of, and one which gives him popularity and strength among the people.

A Middlesex county woman who visited New Brunswick with her husband, and subsequently found the latter slightly befuddled with too much Jersey lightning, brought him to his senses by a liberal application of the rawhide she found in the bottom of the wagon which conveyed the couple to town. This is the sort of a new woman that we can't take a fancy to.

A Pennsylvania physician who is interested in statistics of American hero worship finds that he has personally ushered into the world five Deweys, three Hobsons, one Schley and one Miles, and that in the households of his patients twenty dogs, seventeen cats and nine goats answer to the names of the heroes of 1898.

The necessary steps have been taken in the Legislature to give Summit an up-to-date municipal government, with Mayor, Councilman and all the rest of the dignitaries furnished with a city charter. Summit needs something better than a township form of government to rule its citizens.

General Eagan has had his say. We have yet to hear what Uncle Sam thinks about the matter, but the old gent is certainly getting disgusted and when he speaks next it may not be in the softest sort of a voice.

There is scarcely a man who wields great influence in New Jersey's public affairs that is adorned with whiskers. As they say of a rumor, we publish this for what it is worth.

Quay and Addicks are encountering squally weather. But they heeded not the portending clouds of public disapproval, and if they get "soaked" no one will be sorry.

When John Kean views the ticklish positions of Bosses Quay and Addicks in their respective commonwealths, he must thank his lucky stars that she is not a great Boss.

If New York city was a State by itself the Legislature that meets in Albany would have to quit business for lack of matters to keep busy with.

Just how New York can be expected to be "dry" on Sunday when the problem is being solved by Baines is more than we can understand.

An oyster trust is the latest. It deserves to fall into the soup.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

The complaint that taxpaying time comes just when people want all their surplus cash for holiday presents has led the Plainfield Common Council to the adoption of an ordinance making the date when taxes first become due October 20th, instead of November 20th, as at present. It is not anticipated, however, that even this will make taxpaying a popular diversion in Plainfield.—Newark News.

PASSING COMMENT

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

John H. McVey, the hotel man, is careful now where he puts his shoes when he takes them off, and does not leave them lying just where he happens to throw them down. This care is taken because a day or two ago Mr. McVey had a pair of $8 shoes stolen. He took them off towards night and stood them up against the wall in the back room, with the toes pointing out. When he went to get them to put them on again they were gone. There is no clue to the thief, but now when Mr. McVey takes off his new shoes, he puts them away in his safe and turns the combination on them.

E. church are trying very hard to raise a sufficient amount of money to furnish the new parsonage, and they will give their friends an opportunity to assist them Tuesday evening, January 24th, when A. CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

The sensational rural comedy drama, "Joshua Simpkins," will be produced at Music Hall tomorrow night. The play contains an interesting and intelligible plot, but it is not allowed to interfere with the fun, which is said to be in abundance. During the run of the play some startling scenes and situations are seen, principally of which may be said to be the country saw mill, in the third act, shown in complete operation cutting up real timber. The saw used is the genuine article, same as used in large country saw mills. Two excellent bands and a fine orchestra accompany this attraction. The bands will parade at noon, when some good music may be looked for. One of them being dressed up as countrymen.

Those who like stirring melodrama will have an opportunity to see something hot when Lincoln J. Carter's newest scenic sensation, "The Heart of Chicago," moves into the Stillman Music Hall next Tuesday night. It has enjoyed tremendous success throughout the east during the past season and comes west heralded as the best melodramatic scenic production on the stage. The Philadelphia Ledger, among other pleasant things, says: "Enough scenery is carried to stock half a dozen melodramas, and the approaching engine scene far overtops anything of the sort ever attempted."

WHITE'S WHITE SALE
THE WHITE GOODS EVENT OF THE SEASON.

Encouraged by the marked success which has attended our previous Muslin Underwear sales, we have made a large purchase for this occasion. Our orders were placed during the makers' dull season. The work has been most thoroughly done, materials and trimmings are of the best, the fit, finish and size generosity is the same as if the garments were made under your own supervision—by your own home seamstress—and the prices are less than you would pay for bare materials.

NIGHT ROBES.
Every feature of this sale is special, but more special than other features will be the nightgown selling. They are among the best creations of master makers and are daintily trimmed with the prettiest laces, ribbons and embroideries. Prices 25c, 49c, 75c, $1 and $1.25.

WHITE SKIRTS.
Some plain with rows of tucks, some with cambric and embroidery flounces with lace insertions; all cut very full, nothing scant about them but the prices—25c, 35c, 49c, 75c to $1.25.

CORSET COVERS.
Trimmed with embroidery, torchon laces, or clusters of tucks with insertions, perfect fitting, high, square or V shape necks, made of fine cambric. Who would bother to make them when you buy at these prices—15c, 25c, 29c, 39c, 50c

DRAWERS.
Made with yoke bands, deep hamburg embroidery, umbrella, flounces or rows of tucks. As some of the best numbers are somewhat limited as to quantity it is advisable that you be among the early choosers as these lots cannot be duplicated at these prices—17c, 25c, 39c and 50c.

VIEWS OF POPE LEO.

BELIEVES THE UNITED STATES IS TENDING TOWARD CATHOLICISM.

The Holy Father Talks About the Effect of Conquest on New Colonies. Prays That Cubans and Filipinos May Now Be Happy.

Pope Leo XIII in an interview the other day talked of his love for Spain and America and said he believed the United States was tending toward Catholicism.

By the kindness of a French diplomat with credentials to the holy see my request for an audience with Leo XIII was granted after a delay of several days.

The meeting took place in his study. I was admitted to his presence after the mass that is celebrated in his private chapel. The pope's study is a simple room, 5 yards long and 3 yards wide, with southern exposure. Its unique window opens on the garden the cultivation of which the pope supervises. The floor is of inlaid wood. The walls are covered with damask stuffs, bordered with gold. The furniture consists of an armchair, six other chairs, all damask and gilt, a writing table of ebony, inlaid with ivory, and a tall ebony cross, with an ivory figure of Christ. It is in this room that the pope for several hours every day meditates over the books that he prefers and writes his poems, for it is known that Leo XIII is one of the best Latin scholars of our time.

I told him that I would be happy to report the words of the venerable chief of the Catholic church. Leo XIII smiled and said that all the children of the earth were the children of God, without any distinction of nationality or of dogma; that those who had gone astray would return to the right road, because truth is unique and will remain forever eternal truth that reflects the divine idea.

"The United States," continued the pontiff slowly, "is a great people, full of strength and of will, but it is necessary that it should know how to prove itself generous always to the weak in order that its strength and its will may be a model of power."

"The United States has proved itself generous in protecting a people oppressed and tormented," said I.

"Cuba?" asked the pope, fixing his eyes upon me.

"Cuba," I replied. "That people was suffering."

"Ah!" he exclaimed suddenly. "What suffering I have endured in the face of the conflict of two nations that I love—one for its fidelity through the centuries, the other for its virile youth and for the hope of seeing it enter entirely into the bosom of the Catholic church! It is marching into it with rapid strides."

Then, with bitterness:

"That war has been one of the greatest sufferings of my life. All my efforts to avoid it were vain."

"Cuba free will not be unhappy," said I.

"I pray God that it may be as you say. The Cuban population," continued the pope, "will know how to return to its work and to create for itself a new life in conformity with its interests and its aspirations. Many things have changed over there, but nothing will change its religious spirit, which is a consolation for me."

"The Philippine islands also," I added, "have suffered from the storm."

"Alas!" he said, raising his eyes to heaven.

"And permit me to say that the religious orders have created in the Philippine islands a certain agitation."

Leo XIII fixed upon me his quick glance and said:

"I have deplored certain exaggerations, but the state of mind and the excitable character of those insular countries had to be taken into consideration. Rules have been made. They will be obeyed, for their object is the humility and the good of humanity. The religious, of whatever order they may be, must have above all things in the heart the idea of God, which is the human and benevolent idea. That thought must guide them above everything else. Their part here below is to soften the ills that overwhelm men. It is a holy mission which they must not avoid, especially in those faroff lands where revolutions are so terrible."—Philippe Tonelli in New York Journal.

Items of Interest.

On the first Friday of every month there is exposed for public veneration in St. Mary's church, Lawrence, Mass., a relic of the cross on which our Saviour died.

The abbot Pachomius of the monastery of St. John at Jericho controls a steamboat on the river Jordan, which runs from that place to the south end of the Dead sea.

Wang Yu Tsao, who has recently been appointed governor of Shanghai by the empress dowager of China, is a Catholic convert and is said to be a very fine man.

It is stated that in the east end of London there are 20,000 or 30,000 Catholics who must send two miles for a priest in case of a sick call, they being too poor to maintain a resident pastor.

Mgr. Sokolsky, the first bishop of the Bulgarians who returned to unity with Rome, suddenly disappeared and to this day his fate is unknown. It is said that he is shut up in a Russian monastery.

Australia, it is stated, is to have a Catholic congress on the same lines as those held in Fribourg, Switzerland, Brussels and other continental cities. The congress will probably be held about Easter time in 1900.

Bishop O'Gorman of Sioux Falls, in a recent interview, says that South Dakota is experiencing an era of prosperity, in consequence of which the Catholics out there contemplate the erection of a number of new churches.

TWO CLASSES OF COURAGE.

Physical and Moral—The Value of Both of Them.

Courage is a trait which always commands our admiration wherever found. It may be divided into two classes, physical and moral, the one originating in brute strength, the other a result of lofty principles and noble aims. The superiority of the latter, even from a purely human standpoint, cannot be questioned. Leonidas at the pass of Thermopylæ with his few followers, inspired as they were by ardent patriotism and trained from their earliest youth to contempt of death when life could only be won by flight or servitude, was sufficient to create havoc in the ranks of the Persians, who were brave indeed, but spurred on by unworthy motives. The barbarian hordes of northern Europe only subdued the Roman empire because its defenders had lost their moral virtues and in their degenerate effeminacy were but feeble barriers to oppose the progress of nations inured to hardships and strengthened by continual exercise.

They that suffered persecution and death in the early ages of the Christian church truly possessed moral courage. Often delicate women endured with constancy for Christ's sake trials the very thought of which would make a strong man shudder. "Fear is the mark of a mean spirit" we have often heard, and experience proves this proverb to be most true. One who battles for a noble principle will be sustained in the hitterest struggles by the consciousness of well doing, and, although right does not always conquer in this world, its champions are never unduly discomfited by defeat, because there remains to them a hope of which they cannot be deprived, the expectation of reward from the all just Judge.—Annie A. O'Leary.

CATHOLIC IN NAME.

Father Sherman Says Porto Rico Has Little Real Religion.

Father Sherman, chaplain of the Fourth Missouri, contributes an article to The Messenger of the Sacred Heart, in which he says: "Porto Rico is a 'Catholic country without religion'—that is to say, there is little practical Catholicity here and no pretended religion whatsoever. True, there is an Episcopal church in Ponce, but the congregation does not exceed a corporal's guard, though a bishop in quaintest ecclesiastical attire and most venerable missionary beard officiates. There are fairly good churches in the principal towns; the clergy are excellent gentlemen, but they do not seem to have any firm hold of the native people, nor have they any lively sympathy with Porto Ricans or Porto Rico. They are part of the Spanish establishment, wedded to the idea of the union of church and state.

"The Spaniards here are Catholics. Some Porto Rican women are Catholics. The men are legally Catholics, which means that they are baptized, married and buried as Catholics. I believe that Spanish-American priests from Colorado and southern California could be of great assistance here, and new missions are imperatively demanded."

Boy Choristers of St. Peter's.

In the choir of St. Peter's at Rome there is not a female voice, and yet the most difficult oratorios and sacred music written are rendered in such a manner as to make one think that Adelina Patti is leading. The choir is composed of 60 boys. They are trained for the work from the time they get control of their vocal chords, and some of the best singers are not over 9 years old. At the age of 17 they are dropped from the choir. To say that in that famous edifice one hears the grandest church music the world has ever known sounds commonplace, so far short does it fall of apt description. I am something of a connoisseur, have been a profound student of music all my life and have heard every great opera produced by the most famous organizations, but until a few months ago, when I heard St. Peter's choir, I had no idea that the human voice was capable of such performances.—London Letter.

Papal Jubilee Postal Card.

This year will be memorable in the contemporary history of the papacy. Sixty years ago the pope said his first mass as a priest, and 20 years ago he ascended the papal throne. In honor of this double commemoration a postal card has been issued in Rome which is in use among the faithful. It contains two portraits, representing his holiness as he looked when he said his first mass and also at the age of his papal coronation.—New York Journal.

"A Repose For the Dead."

Father Ducey of St. Leo's Catholic church, New York, has secured the erection of what he calls "A Repose For the Dead," the object of which is to provide a decent resting place for the bodies of those who die as strangers in the city and where they can remain until the friends of the deceased arrive. This is to be, says Father Ducey, an entirely undenominational affair, with such funeral service as may be desired.—Chicago Tribune.

Gift of a Catholic Lady.

It is announced that a Catholic lady, Miss Jennie Flood, has given to the University of California, a nonsectarian institution, an estate valued at something over $2,000,000. The gift includes a mansion which has long been one of the "show places" of California.—London Catholic Times and Opinion.

The Greatest Helper.

Christ will be your light in darkness, your companion in solitude, your rest in weariness of mind, your teacher in doubt, your physician when you are heartsick, your strength in weakness, your consolation in sorrow, your life in death.—Cardinal Gibbons in Catholic Universe.

AN AMERICAN ASPIRANT

CHAPTER VIII.

When an American girl makes her debut at the Paris Grand Opera, evincing thereby undeniable proof of the possession of that temerity which is presumed to exemplify the main characteristic of her national make up, hypercriticism stalks the aisles, congests the foyer and overflows the galleries.

The young innocent is ignorant of the proportions of the arena which she has elected as a vivid background for the display of her wares. On the unwritten page of her vigorous young mind it seems a gratuitous field from which to disport mettle and talent. She does not know until bitter experience has taught her that the trial ground of her young strength and colossal inexperience in foreign ways and methods is already strewn with the record of a mortal carnage as dire as that which once reddened the plain of Waterloo. And if she is warned of it she ignores the warning.

Strife rampant and pregnant hums within its market place—a strife of unworthiness coupled with favoritism. A two headed monster, named jealousy and venom, confronts her at the gate of her would be paradise. If she storms the citadel of place and comes out on the other side intact, her intentions are fortunate if they are not torn in shreds and her character in tatters because of vicious innuendo.

It has been said that to the pure all things are pure. Just as thoroughly has it been proved that to the vile all vileness is of the vilest, and what is pure is considered only a grade of vileness all the more reprehensible because it is obviously impossible of comprehension by minds attuned to less harmonious chords.

The victims of an unjust interpretation are many in this world of ours. The seekers for any place whatsoever, in a cruel, albeit imperative, thrust into prominence, which reads not always pre-eminence, are rich material for that pack of wolves who, devoid of individual creative ability, fall to upon more gifted creators' wares as their personal opportunity. Too often they in this superfluous recreation praise it, to its lamentable discomfiture, in order to enforce the fact of the translator's perspicacity or condemn it to accentuate its critics' comparative impeccability. The victim has no redress. If voices, like birds, could be adjudged on their own merits through personal conviction, eardrums would be considered the ablest critics and hearts the noblest translators. If singers could sing their glad song up to glory, instead of begging for the chance to be heard or being obliged to sell their tones as so much gold dust to the too often self constituted expert, there would be less room for the ground sparrows to twitter of their prejudices. The proof of the singing would be in the song.

But, alas, voices, like genius, go down to posterity too often on the wave of hearsay. An accredited "musical critic"—whosoever that personage may be—is more often than not paid for extirpating the dross from the gold and believed implicitly by persons too ignorant to think for themselves.

When an American girl unwisely chooses—it is always unwise—to exhibit her voice before the glaring white light of foreign public opinion, the abuse which assails that sweet organ of almost divine import is like a flash radiance turned upon a vital part—a part which is not criticised on its own merits, but on the merits of its owner's charms. The voice must undergo a set to with comparison, which in France is considered inevitable rather than odious. It is compared unmercifully with the voices of the past and the present. Then its owner is stoned and subjected to the rack and hacked and besmudged and relegated to the cliffs of good riddance and spitefully misused and purposely misunderstood, and, finally, if in one chance out of a thousand her instrument wins the right to soar indefinitely, an emanation from its owner's heart, a spontaneous outburst of her innermost soul, an utterance of her oversoul, it is as exhaustively discussed as though it were fashioned of fiber and tissue instead of gush and outpour, as though of flesh and blood instead of embodying the nucleus of inspiration.

Does that voice win its way to the stars, giving evidence of a sweetness which is supposed to embellish only the main turnpike to Parnassus, the wolves that have failed or the carrion that has faltered or the onlookers who have stolen spurious achievement instead of worked for the legitimate article or the impotent who have twirled their thumbs while waiting for fame turn and rend, with the hurtful slur of their weak wrath, the being who through sheer grit and indomitable pluck and colossal self abnegation has lifted his or her God given gift in an honest fight for better things.

This is not an exaggeration.

The night Constance Brilla made her debut at the Paris Grand Opera was one of those bitter nights when the elements war with personal comfort outside and personal comfort wars with itself within. The galleries were literally gorged with the Paris student world, which congregates about the musical and art arena with deathless fidelity whenever one of its rank and file dares to throw his or her effort for recognition within its midst and claim for it, on the ground of merit, adequate recompense. The American girl students, in last year's coats and hats, their countenances pallid and pinched with want, their eyes and lips sharpened with expectancy, sat huddled together in the topmost gallery, with their opera scores on their knees, their tongues chattering like magpies on the tree of knowledge.

The question was, Would the apple of wisdom, of such eminent desirability, of so delightful an import, fall within the hands of their enviable contemporary, or would it smile maliciously, turning its rosiest side toward the breeze of public protest, and refuse to be coerced? Long haired students, dreamy eyed and originally clad, as though indifferent to the law of fashion or custom, with stocks about their slim throats, hats retained between the acts and the odor of last night's tussle with a poverty stricken Bacchus in their breaths—Bacchus who was a poor specimen of his richer relative in that he had substituted absinth for grape juice and nicotine for tobacco—lolled against the railing of the gallery at the left of the highest tier.

In the boxes were the stockholders and their overdressed or underdressed wives, who, ever on the scent of novelty, hired their places semiannually to infuriate the management and spent the other six months grumbling at a government institution which demanded dear pay for cheap ability.

In the parquet were seated the critics, that body, or rather army, of men who exemplify the attenuating aperature through which merit must creep in order to attain a hearing. Their souls were charged with a cynicism as bald as it was bland, but their pens were tipped with the most corrosive acid extant. Some of them, men with families and the record of experience in their lined physiognomies, affably discussed the newcomer's indubitable pluck and imminent fiasco. Desmoulins ogled the galleries skeptically, regarded his nails diligently, whispered solecisms in the ear of his companion, who was no less a personage than De Lacaze, and awaited with impatience the rising of the curtain upon the event of the hour. There were two loges in the house which claimed his attention. One was a narrow one on the fourth tier. It contained all the members of the pension in their best bibs and tuckers, the World, the Flesh and the Devil predominating. The other was a large one on the first tier, in which were seated Priscilla, radiantly lovely in pure white; Aunt Mildred, sparkling with magnificent diamonds; Stornmouth and Doxie. The two latter had arrived three days before. Their arrival had scattered as dire a consternation in the opposing camp as though these untitled specimens of a new country, universally reproached for its puling infancy, represented a dynamite fuse newly organized and warranted to go off with or without cause, according to its own sweet will.

Priscilla was pale and unnerved. She had spent the night, a sleepless one obviously, with Constance. She had suffered the same anticipatory stage fright, the terror, the nauseating fear with which Constance was assailed now she clutched at last her life's opportunity. She shudderingly recognized that, now the die was cast, she could not draw back.

"You will succeed," Priscilla said encouragingly, ignorant of the incongruity displayed in her dark circled eyes and pallid lips, which were in such violent contrast to her brave words. "I looked at the moon over my right shoulder last night, and I am wearing my little turquoise ring on my left finger instead of my right."

"If it were only that!" Constance shivered. "You cannot imagine. My throat is so dry and my heart feels as if it were in a different place from usual, and," she concluded mournfully, with the ashen tint of utter exhaustion fastened on her waxen features like a death mask, "I never know whether I am going to have stage fright or not. When it comes, it clutches me like a demon. I can't cry out. I am dumb. I just bear." Then very sadly, "It seems to me, Priscilla, that is the whole of life—just endurance."

"Don't," Priscilla had answered chokingly, with a little sob. "Please don't."

The eventful day had dragged along heavily, as though holding back its inevitable decree reluctantly, at least so it seemed to Constance's feverish imagination. Even the sunshine seemed to her like a horrible farce of some kind, a demoniacal grin at her superlative fatuity. There was no future for her after tonight unless she succeeded. She found herself leaving her letters unread or unposted. The days or weeks had been numbered up to the night of the debut, not past it. Every blue bloused butcher boy whom she chanced to perceive idly perusing the coming event of her temerity on the yellow posters pasted on the signboards at the right and the left of the Opera, which cast their highly tinted shadow before, seemed to her a possible carping critic or a scoffing agent of the secret police sprung out of the multitude, for the sole purpose of encompassing her vocal ruin. She wondered when she climbed the stairs of the pension after a run around the block to assure herself that her other faculties were not paralyzed, like her throat, if in the early morning hours of the ensuing day she would climb them with a heavy heart or a joyous one. When her humid eyes looked upon her little bed, she wondered if the pillow would smother her tears of womanish impotency or welcome her sighs of infinite relief when the ordeal was over and her triumph was complete.

Desmoulins had been with her all the afternoon, accompanied by six journalists of renown, among whom was De Lacaze, fully cognizant of the superlative importance of his organ. They discussed the new singer's "points" in her hearing, as though she were a prize heifer, and argued out loud the undesirability of one of the opposite sex embracing so arduous a career, which they did not hesitate to denominate a sale metier.

Constance's sole response had been to smile defiantly, a little burning flush purpling her cheek under the eyes, like the glow of an orb which, supposed to have set, suddenly reveals itself once more, as if to give the lie to its mourners. To her they all appeared like tormentors who experienced intense delight in augmenting her torture, in dragging her fears out before the merciless test of their skeptical analysis.

Geoffroy, the great opera manager, had visited his new protegee and counseled coolness and precision, perfunctorily, taking unsympathetic notice of her waxen face and heavily shadowed brilliant eyes. Then he departed, with a good natured "Courage, mademoiselle," and an undisguised contempt in the lift of his Gallic shoulders. Geoffroy knew what stage fright was. He knew its crippling power and its clutching insistence. He knew such fright could cut off a voice like a knife laid wantonly against a rose stem or hoarsen it into a hideous apology of song or render it strident or force it out into an apology of sound which seemed to mock, like an echo of pain, at its owner's mortification. But Geoffroy was wise in his managerial generation. He waited. American pluck was proverbial in the Paris musical world. He had himself signified unusual daring in his choice of a foreign voice, unknown, unsuspected, unjudged except by himself and that inner circle which constitutes the vocal judgment firmament in Paris. His other prime donne, who were languishing in durance vile awaiting the opportunity to appear, had not hesitated to scoff at him for his conviction so absolute. He had laughed in their faces. "We wish to fill the house," he confided later to one of his satellites. "There is a large foreign colony in Paris. The debutante's friends and enemies will come to witness the slaughter of the innocent. If she fails, they will swallow the pill with miraculous submission. Human nature is wont to be extraordinarily submissive where other people's disappointments are concerned. If she succeeds, they will reorganize their doubtful judgments and confess they suspected their countrywoman's undeniable ability after all."

They discussed the new singer's "points" in her hearing.

The corps de ballet had pestered him with questions as incisive, as rife with Parisian wit and cynicism as a prize pug would address to his master if he had the faculty of speech.

He had shaken them all off good humoredly. He "knew a good thing when he saw it," he said. Then he wondered in a softened mood why, after all, there was so little good in the world, totally unconscious of the truth that he might have seized his managerial opportunity as an instrument toward music's uplifting import instead of just the contrary if he had chosen.

Geoffroy was but a caterer to the public pulse. No more, no less. If that pulse beat sluggishly in the veins of a too pampered audience, which palpably required a shock to set its sluggish blood astir, he considered that he did his duty did he administer the requisite shock through his prima donna, his orchestra or his corps de ballet. It would be fully as justifiable for his purpose of self advertisement to register a fiasco as a success. It would set the newspapers agog and establish a nine days' wonder. The sacrifice of a singer or a coryphee was but part and parcel of his debt to that government institution, the Paris Opera.

When after the prologue—the opera was Gounod's time worn if none the less exquisite one of "Romeo and Juliet"—the curtain rose on the ball scene at the house of the Capulets, Constance descending the staircase with her hand upon her father's arm, there was a pregnant silence. The critics were awaiting a confirmation of their adipose skepticism or a trial exhibition of mediocrity. They were universally defiant as regarded foreign issues. Paris was overrun in their opinion with irreverent foreigners who attacked art superficially, music as a means of financial restitution and literature as a record of self advertisement. They had fine fingered emotions for so long that they attributed their own motives to other persons' acts, and in the process hugged to themselves the gratifying consciousness of superlative ability. A little body of paid workers, they told their "truths" with gusto, perceptibly swayed by personal prejudice, after the fashion of an orchestra swayed by the conviction of the man who holds the baton. They were quite unconscious that in this display of personal prejudice they exhibited their own insignificance as critics pure and simple.

It had been agreed that tonight Desmoulins was to set the tune to their antics. He had hinted at big spoils in connection with this debut to rush in from some mysterious quarter. They were quite as willing to sign their names to an adequately remunerated appreciation as to an unjust rebuke clothed in graceful metaphor and choice vocabulary.

The little figure stepped toward the footlights when her turn came and sang the cadenza. The voice was farreaching, possessed of unusual richness and bore the impress of absolute erudition and a musical sense as rare as it was unexpected. The new prima donna was greeted with a storm of applause which, started up in the gallery by the claque—those reprehensibly hired appreciators in France—happily found its way down to the body of the house. It was repeated twofold after the waltz song.

Priscilla, rosily enthusiastic, with one little dimpled arm crushed up against the box edge, her hands clasped speechlessly before her in intense sympathy, sat with confessedly fear haunted eyes as the full notes soared forth firmly and saluted her anxious ears. Constance appeared electrified. Vanished was the waxen mask of that morning. It had made way for a crimson bloom like rose stains on cream. The pathetic face, with its mass of clustering blond curls caught and held carelessly in their gold traditional fillet studded with pearls, stood out like a cameo from the background of Venetian tapestry and wax lights. Her gestures were natural, unstudied, although Priscilla knew how many years it had required to assume their present proportion. The diction, that most difficult accomplishment for American girls—an accomplishment seldom taken into consideration by the unenlightened, but which is none the less the rock upon which most Anglo-Saxon would be vocalists split in France, to go down with all on board—the diction was openly discussed as "remarkable."

Stornmouth's eyes had been fixed upon Doxie, who, attired in one of his employer's dress suits, which set off his broad figure to great advantage, had restlessly mopped his sunburned brows while awaiting the rise of the curtain. He was conspicuously impatient as regarded the lack of ventilation and the development of Stornmouth's seemingly humorous plan to "introduce him to a new singer." But the big, honest fellow had trembled undisguisedly as Constance walked toward the footlights, had given vent to a guttural exclamation when she began to sing, and then had broken forth hoarsely, to Aunt Mildred's visible consternation, with "Grit, pure grit! Who would have ever imagined the little woman had it in her?"

Afterward a great silence had fallen upon him, but it was a golden silence, fraught with memories. There had come to Doxie, as there comes into most lives at the time of a supreme crisis, an atmospherical association which had been with him when he had experienced his greatest heart swell. It was the faint whiff of new hay, the echo of a thrashing sound, the odor of salt and sedge. His mind had traveled back, there in that crowded auditorium packed with the titled and the illustrious of the eastern continent, to a clover patched meadow, bound in with scrub oaks, which, like a frieze of spice about fulfilled promise of summer, exuded a familiar happiness redolent of hope and youth and peace.

"Hush," Stornmouth whispered succinctly, with a quick comprehension—a revelation to Doxie in its masterful tenderness and its subsequent action. "Hush! We will see her after the opera." Then, very low, "Brace up; Rome was not won in a day," with which enigmatical suggestion Stornmouth won his new friend's perpetual allegiance by turning his back abruptly upon his ungovernable emotion.

In return for that plethoric promise, Stornmouth's concealed hand, which hung over the back of Priscilla's chair, experienced a grip, a moment later, which was essentially farmyard in its unbridled eloquence.

Doxie's blue eyes glanced across his, the way a sword glances across steel, leaving the flash of more to come behind it.

That glance, to Stornmouth, weary with the past month's smothered pain and quicksilver evolutions, seemed like a knock at the chained portal of his own despair, which he had fiercely striven to shut out in order to make way for his customary phlegmatic philosophy—in vain. It gaped hideously at him now as when he was alone. It reminded him that he was living on the brink of a mental precipice wherefrom he dared not even contemplate the gulf below. He sighed shortly and turned toward Priscilla.

"Will you take me into the foyer?" that unwise and daring young woman asked. "I wish to speak to the count and M. Desmoulins." The curtain had fallen on the second act.

A COLONIAL VALENTINE.

In the days of patch and powder—
Dream ful days of long ago—
If the damosels were prouder
Than to-day we may not know;
But it is no elf of fancy
That low whispers to us how
Love's persuasive necromancy
Then was much the same as now.

On the island of Manhattan
Dwelt there one of beauty rare,
Where sleek beeves were left to fatten
In the pastures broad and fair.
There, in his provincial glory,
Ruled her sire—so stories run—
In the times of merry Tory,
And of Colonel Washington.

This sweet maiden had a lover,
Though her father kept her hid (Trust a youth's eyes to discover Beauty neath the closet lid),
And at every tender meeting
Would he urge her, "Love, be mine!"
And he pondered such a greeting
For an ardent valentine.

How he marred the virgin paper
Ere he saw a perfect page,
Burning many a mid night taper
In his "fine poetic rage!"
But at last when he had penned it
Neatly o'er and made no blur,
By a servant did he send it,
Waxed and perfumed, unto her.

Came the servant dashing faster,
Faster still the highway down,
Cried, "Your lady says, my master,
That her sire has gone to town."
"Not in vain did I implore her,"
Thought he as he cleared the stile,
Surely happier adorer
Never rode a madder mile.

Little at the door he tarried;
Sought he out the fair one's shrine:
"Let us fly, love, and be married;
Be this day my valentine!"
We will draw the modest curtain,
For she answered with a kiss;
If she had not, I am certain,
I should not be writing this!
—Clinton Scollard, in Harper's Magazine.

A VALENTINE.

Before the buds awaken,
Or pink the blossoms blow,
While yet the bough forsaken
Hangs ghostly in the snow,
Love journeys forth elated
To seek the happy shrine
By lovers dedicated
To good St. Valentine,

And there before the altar
He kneels beseeching grace;
His heart forgets to falter,
Remembering your face;
All his words are fashioned
Into a single line—
A lover's prayer impassioned
To his saint, Valentine.

His eyes with rapture glisten,
His heart with hope is high,
He almost thinks to listen
And hear your footsteps nigh;
Ah, Sweet, when he shall find you,
And voice his prayer and mine,
Let no vain doubtings blind you—
Say yes, my Valentine!
—Felix Carmen.

A Witty Bishop.

A good story is told of a war of words between the paradoxical Oscar Wilde and a witty bishop whom he met at a social gathering. Church and stage crossed swords and it was not the church that bit the dust.

"I am yours, my lord," said Mr. Wilde, bowing low, and smiling ironically, "to my shoe buckles."

"I am yours," said the courtly bishop, "to the ground.

The author of "An Ideal Husband" continued:

"I am yours to the centre of the earth."

The pillar of the church quickly responded:

"I am yours to the antipodes."

Oscar Wilde began to feel decidedly nettled. Indignant at his defeat by a mere clergyman and a man of piety he exclaimed, as a last thrust:

"I am yours to the lowest pit of destruction!"

"There, Mr. Wilde," responded the divine, "I think I'd better leave you!" —Exchange.

Answered by One of the Brethren.

A tedious monotonous preacher had exhausted the patience of his hearers by an elaborate dissertation on the four greater Prophets, when, to their sad disgust, he passed on to the minor, and asked, "And now, my brethren, where shall we place Hosea?" A man rose from the congregation and made answer, "You can place him here, sir. I'm off!"

Tonight, the Parks will roll three games on their own alleys against the Elizabeth Club, in the Central Journal Bowling League. The Parks are still second in the league with Elizabeth a pretty close second. A decided victory for Elizabeth will cause the latter team to step ahead of the Parks. While the Parks have the advantage of being on their own alleys, they will nevertheless have to put up a strong fight as Elizabeth has several of the famous "Terrible Ten," on her team.

VARICUS SPORTS.

This evening will see the resumption of roller polo at the Crescent Rink. The match will be between the teams of the Plainfield A. A. and the Elizabeth Club. The game will begin at 8:15 o'clock. Every effort will be made to make the game a success. The building will be thoroughly heated and special arrangements will be made for the ladies. There is every prospect of an exciting game. Roller polo in itself is a lively sport and the rivalry that exists between Plainfield and Elizabeth promises to make it doubly so.

CRACKED THE SAFE.

clined to believe that the burglars were acquainted with the place. The thoroughness with which the work was conducted evidenced that it was the work of professional safe crackers.

Chief Shurts, of the Somerville force, sent a general alarm out to all the neighboring cities and towns to look out for three strangers. Unless the burglars had a particularly good cover in Somerville, it is probable that they left town by driving as no train leaves the place until after 6 o'clock in the morning. The trains have been watched but no suspicious characters have yet been apprehended. Owing to the fact that there were so many strangers in town to attend the ball, the advent of three men was not noticed.

County Prosecutor N. Y. Dungan has taken the case in hand and will start an immediate investigation. When interviewed by a Press reporter, this morning, he was unable to give any definite facts, but promised to bring the offenders speedily to justice if possible. Crow did not see his assailant until the latter had fired and then fled down the street. Mrs. Brown was unable to describe the men she saw. As yet, no others have been found who saw the burglars. There was no clue left as to their identity. All Somerville is greatly excited this morning over the case.

Before the Grand Jury.

Lawyer Robert M. Clark was summoned to appear in court at Elizabeth today. He had not the slightest idea what was wanted until he appeared before the court.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver, of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongued coated, pain continually in the back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters;' and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. WORK OF THE Y. M. C. A. REVIEWED FOR A YEAR.

Annual Meeting of the Association Held Last Night.

SEVEN DIRECTORS CHOSEN.

PRESIDENT CAHOONE'S REPORT SHOWED EXCELLENT RESULTS.

Report of H. O. Newman, the Treasurer, Showed That the Receipts for the Year Were $5,435.64—During the Year $8,300 Has Been Paid on the Association Debt—Funds Contributed.

The annual meeting of the Y. M. C. A. was held last night in the small parlor of the association building and was well attended. Owing to the absence of the president, Stephen Cahoone, the vice-president, E. L. Bonney, presided at the meeting. The business was not long in being transacted. Seven new directors were elected to take the places of those whose terms have expired, reports were read and the general affairs of the association were discussed.

Owing to the changed constitution adopted last year, eighteen new directors were elected then. Six of them were to serve for three years, six for two years, and six for one year, the terms of the various members being decided by themselves. Those whose terms expired January 1st were E. R. Ackerman, G. H. Batchelor, G. S. Clay, A. C. LaBoyteaux, H. M. Maxson and Dr. Carroll. Mr. Chapman, who was elected last year, refused to serve, so seven new directors had to be elected last night. J. R. Robinson and M. C. VanArsdale were appointed tellers and the election resulted in the choice of E. R. Ackerman, G. S. Clay, G. H. Batchelor, A. C. LaBoyteaux, H. M. Maxson and J. R. Joy to serve for three years, and G. F. Brown for two years.

The physicial director reported a good year in his department. Out of 209 members who are entitled to the physical department, 124 are in classes. Almost all of the 62 members of the boys' department are also in one of the various classes.

H. O. Newman presented the treasurer's report for the year is as follows: Receipts, $5,435.64; loan, $1,130; balance, January 1st, 1898, $69 69; total receipts, $7,235.33. Disbursements, $7,089.81; balance $145.52.

In connection with this report W. D. Murray arose and stated that in addition to the $5,435.64 raised in the association, during the past year, $8,300 had been paid on the debt.

The work of the association in army and mission fields was also assisted by the people of this city, who last year gave $700 for army work, $1,500 for missions and $250 for State work. Mr. Newman said that the association owed $1,200.

A vote of thanks was extended to the Ladies' Nine, the band of young women who assist the men at the social affairs. The press of the city also came in for a share of thanks for the notices they have given the association gratis. A resolution of regret that illness kept the president at home was offered by H. P. Reynolds and passed.

The president's report, which is printed below, is comprehensive and thoroughly rehearses the history of the association for the past twelve months.

The president's report is as follows:

The past year witnessed the retirement of William D. Murray as president of this association, a position which he has filled most acceptably for ten years. During his term of office, our association reached its present high state of efficiency, we have built and occupied our building, and a large measure of our success has resulted from his wise counsels, and active participation in the work.

The most noteworthy event of the year has been the extinction of our permanent debt, amounting to about $8,300. This undertaking was commenced in the latter part of 1897, and its successful completion during times of financial depression, is most encouraging, showing the interest taken by our friends in this association, and in its work for young men.

Our religious work, to which all other departments are subsidiary, is in a prosperous condition, especially our Sunday afternoon meeting for men. The average attendance for the past year has been 108 an increase over the previous year of 8.

Commencing in October, a boys' meeting has been held every Sunday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock with an average attendance of 28. Classes for Bible study have been held as usual during the year, conducted by the general secretary and by Phys-

CHANCE FOR PUBLIC TO EXPRESS THEIR VIEWS.

AN IMPORTRNT TROLLEY LINK.

Elizabeth and Westfield Street Railway Company Want to go Through Roselle.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Roselle, Jan. 20.—The principal topic of conversation in Roselle borough at the present time is the trolley. The Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railway Company has made application by petition to the borough council for a franchise to construct and operate a street railway upon the principal streets of the borough. Three routes have been offered to the public for this south side trolley line, which has already secured franchises from all the municipalites between Roselle and Plainfield.

The first route offered is from the township line of Cranford at Fifth avenue; thence over that thorough fare to Chandler avenue, to Third avenue, to the line of the city of Elizabeth. The second is over First avenue, to Chestnut street, to Third avenue, to the city line; and the third route is over First avenue to Locust street, to second avenue, to Walnut street, to Third avenue, to the city line.

The Council can select any of the above routes which they consider to be the best for the interests of the borough after the people's views have been expressed on the subject, or they can refuse to grant any franchise.

The property owners and citizens will be given a chance to be heard at the public hearing to be held for that purpose at the borough hall next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, and in the event of the hall being too crowded the meeting will adjourn to the Casino. Next Tuesday evening will be the public's only chance to express views on this trolley question, and it is more than likely there will be a large attendance at the meeting.

TROLLEY TALK.

Crosstown Trolley Interesting Mountainside and Clark.

There is much talk now about the crosstown trolley. The people of Mountainside and Clark Township seem to want some means of communication with Westfield, and a trolley is about the only way they can get it. Springfield is anxious for it and have a committee of its citizens taking the matter up with the trolley magnates.

Col. E. W. Hine, of the trolley company, was seen yesterday and said they were going right along with their work on both the Plainfield Elizabeth line and the crosstown line. Probably an application for the franchise will be made at the next meeting of the Township Committee. A crosstown line will open up some of the best section of country about Westfield.—Westfield Standard.

Woman Lawyer Beats Prosecutor.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, Jan. 20.—An exciting trial took place before Justice Kitchen and a six men jury a few days ago. Jacques VanDerbeek sued Geo. M. Bowlby for $35, a balance alleged to be due for plans used by defendant in building his new house across the river. Miss Steele was counsel for VanDerbeek, while Bowlby's interests were looked after by Prosecutor Dungan. The case was stubbornly contested in the court room, and still more so in the jury room, as it was after 10 p. m. when the jury returned a verdict of $25 in favor of plaintiff. The case was called promply at 10 a. m.

GIVING TRAMPS A BED.

SOMERSET COUNTY PEOPLE KICK ON THE EXPENSE.

Those Who Live Outside of Somerville Say That It is an Unfair Rule for Them, as They Get no Benefit From It.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, Jan. 20.—Residents of Somerset county who live outside of this town are up in arms over the decision of the Board of Freeholders to allow Sheriff Schoonmaker twenty-five cents per head for all tramps that he cares for over night in the county jail. The opponents of the Freeholders' action insist that the order is a virtual invitation for the tramps to come to visit the Sheriff and they will be given fine treatment. It is claimed that the Freeholders are exceeding their authority in making such a rule, as the duties and emoluments of the Sheriff are plainly described by law and he has no right to act as the Freeholders have decided he can with tramps.

The grumbling ones insist that the action of the Freeholders is decidedly unfair to the sections of the county that are not in close proximity to the jail, as those towns that are within walking distance of the bastile are now able to tell vagrants and other persons who apply for lodging for a night to go to jail and they will fare all right. As a result of this the towns thus advantageously situated escape the expense that should be borne by them, and turn it off to the county, for which the other towns have it stand their share. But the latter class of towns, not being within walking distance of the jail, are compelled to care for transient paupers out of their own coffers.

CONSTANT GROWTH.

New Contestants in Daily Press Subscription Contest Every Day.

There is no abatement in the interest shown in The Daily Press subscription contest. On the contrary, every day brings new contestants. Some were not acquainted with the methods in vogue of soliciting new subscribers but a short interview with Manager of Circulation C. F. Stout gave them valuable hints that were soon practically used.

As the time passes on, there is fuller realization of the advantages offered by The Press to the winners in the contest. The two courses offered for first and second prize may be the making of the career of some young man or woman. With this knowledge of book-keeping or shorthand, young women can secure more lucrative and pleasant positions while with young men it paves the way for promotion and success.

Will Sell Waverly Fair Grounds.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, Jan. 20.—The annual meeting of the New Jersey State Agricultural Society was held in the State House Tuesday. The old Board of Directors was re-elected, with the exception of Franklin Murphy, who is succeeded by State Treasurer George B. Swain. The stockholders appointed E. B. Goddis and H. Heyward Isham a committee to sell the society's fair grounds in Waverly. The grounds are wanted by Essex county to enlarge its park system. If the grounds are sold the society will get another location for the annual fair.

Chief Back on Duty.

Chief George W. Grant, returned to duty yesterday as head of the Plainfield police force after several week's absence on account of illness. The Chief is still somewhat weak but is feeling greatly improved. Yesterday afternoon, he went down to Somerville to learn the full details of the burglary-attempted murder case.

At the last meeting of the Plainfield Law Debating Society held Wednesday evening the names of three members who do not attend the meetings any more or pay their dues, were dropped. Substantial Prizes.

As prizes for securing new subscribers, the Plainfield (N. J.) Daily Press offers two complete scholarships, the first in the Plainfield Business College, and the second in the Gregg School of Stenograpy, to the young men or young women who turn in the largest lists.—National Advertiser.

It has been suggested that there ought to be some public-spirited man in Plainfield who would give a public drinking fountain for the benefit of the city at large.

A full attendance of the members of Unity Lodge, No. 102, K. of P., is desired this evening at the district meeting to be held in Perseverance Lodge rooms.

PLAYED ON ROLLERS.

PLA'NFIELD DEFEATED ELIZABETH BY FOUR GOALS.

Elizabeth Boys Were Not Used To Game—Robert Eaton Did Star Work For Them—A Small Audience Present.

Plainfield caught a fleeting glimpse of roller polo at the Crescent Rink last evening when the teams of Plainfield A. A. and the Elizabeth Club met. Plainfield won by a score of 4 goals to nothing, after a positively exciting game. The Elizabeth boys came with the reputation of being experts but their reputation belied them. Some found difficulty in even standing up on rollers. As they were short two men Owen Smith and Vernon Waters lent a hand to help them out.

Most of the playing was about Elizabeth's goal and her players put up a desperate defence. McCulley, of bicycle fame, kept goal. "Bob" Eaton, captain of the Elizabeth team, was the life of his team. He was everywhere, falling down, losing his club, but never loosing heart. T. U. Smith did most of the goal work for Plainfield, making one on a pretty back-hand stroke. Simmonds used a little too much strength and sent the ball above the goal to the dismay of the spectators behind it.

One Elizabeth man broke his club and had to play with what was left, there being no extra ones. Henry Ryder made some wonderful runs up the side with the ball. In the second half the team work improved. The visitors were badly tired, however. There were about a hundred spectators present.

The teams lined up as follows:

PLAINFIELD.		ELIZABETH
Ryder	forward	Blake
Simmonds	forward	Hoover
T. Smith	forward	Eat n
Morgan	forward	Waters
Platt	cover point	O. Smith
Carroll	point	Mills
McClure	goal keeper	McCulley

Score—Plainfield, 4; Elizabeth, 0. Goals—Simmonds; T. Smith, (3). Umpires—Roger Erickson and Charles B. Morse.

DEMANDED JURY TRIAL; COURT WAS DELAYED.

HEARD BEFORE JUSTICE MOFFETT.

Defendant Said Principal Witness Was Sick, But This Was Not So, and the Trial Went On.

A case was tried before Justice Moffett yesterday afternoon that caused the court more trouble than usual. It was a case in which Isaac J. Scriven sued D. J. Galbraith for $35. Pope & Runyon represented the plaintiff and Irving L. Brady the defendant.

Pope & Runyon came into court all ready to try the case. Mr. Brady first asked for an adjournment on the grounds that a material witness for his side was ill. A witness on the other side said that he had just seen the alleged sick man in the hall of the Babcock building, so the plaintiff's lawyers refused to agree to an adjournment until the other side had paid the witnesses' fees. This they refused to do, but finally agreed to go to trial without this witness. But then to the surprise of the court Mr. Brady demanded a jury.

The case was called at 2 o'clock, and by the time the jury was called and the parties ready for trial it was 4:30 o'clock. The Justice had to issue his venire, then send out for the constable, all of which took time. Then the constable had to find six competent men who were satisfactory to both parties. Finally he got together Chas. King, John Ross, I. F. Randolph, B. T. Barnes, N. C. Pennington and W. H. Abbott.

The circumstances of the case are these: A. C. Rogers drew up a set of plans for D. C. Galbraith, for which he charged him $35. Rogers sold this claim on Galbraith to Isaac J. Scriven for $25. When Scriven went to collect it Galbraith refused to pay. The latter said he did not owe Rogers anything.

Scriven therefore brought the suit. The jury were out about three-quarters of an hour, and then brought in a verdict for the plaintiff for the full amount.

AN AGREEMENT REACHED

DIFFICULITY BETWEEN DUNELLEN AND WATER COMPANY FIXED.

Special Meeting of Borough Council Held Last Night and Arrangements Made to Establish a Water Supply.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunnellen, Jan. 20. — A special meeting of the Borough Council was held last night to take some action in regard to the Watchung Water Company, who are laying their pipes through the streets of the borough. At the close of the meeting a contract was signed by the borough and Messrs. Werts and Waite, of Jersey City, representatives of the Watchung Water Company, and now no more difficulty is anticipated.

The Council gave the Watchung Water Company a franchise last February it will be remembered. But in August it was rescinded because the water company had not done a stroke of work towards laying the pipes. But two weeks ago the company suddenly sent a force of men to the borough and began to dig trenches the pipes.

The borough did not like this, and Wednesday morning a notice was served upon President Sebring of the company to stop work. He did not do so, however, so this special meeting of the Council was called. The contract between the water company and the borough was signed at 11 o'clock. In the contract the company agree to have the pipes laid and the system ready for operation in four months from last night.

The District Deputy Grand Dictator, A. D'Espies of Elizabeth, installed them. Past Grand Dictator Peter Scherf, of Elizabeth, was also present.

The officers were installed as follows: Past Dictator, John H. Van Middlesworth; dictator, W. S. Williams; vice-dictator, H. C. Reynolds; assistant dictator, A. A. Lake; guide, James J. Phillips; reporter, R. A. Frey; financial reporter, E. G. Smith; treasurer, J. H. Doane; guardian, R. Warnock.

Monday evening a delegation from Senate Lodge will go to Elizabeth and attend a union meeting to be held at Onward Lodge rooms.

WEAK VALVE BLEW OUT.

In Its Flight Through the Air it Nearly Struck the Engineer.

A weak check valve on the boiler of the engine in the Crescent Rink blew out yesterday afternoon. George Frazee, the engineer, had an extra head of steam on to heat the building for the night's polo exhibition. When the valve blew out there was force enough behind it to drive it through one of the doors.

Frazee was standing just to one side when the accident happened. The flying valve just missed him, and so did the column of escaping steam which followed the giving way of the valve. The repairs took two hours before they were completed.

POWER FROM ON HIGH.

Rev. M. H. Pogson Preached an Effective Sermon Last Night.

Rev. M. H. Pogson, who is holding evangelistic meetings this week in the Park Avenue Baptist church, preached a powerful sermon last night to a large congregation. His subject was "Power From on High," and his text was "Tarry ye in Jerusalem until ye be Endowed with Power from on High."

Rev. Mr. Pogson spoke of the power of God and how needful it is to have it. Promptly at 9 o'clock the meeting closed and a short season of prayer was held. Tonight the preacher will deliver his last sermon in the series, and a large attendance is desired.

DOWNED ELIZABETH THREE STRAIGHT.

Parks Rolled Highest Score of the Season.

ON THE PARK ALLEYS.

THE VISITORS DIDN'T HAVE ANY SHOW AT ALL.

Parks Led From the Start in All Three Games—Won by Big Margins—George Worth On the Train Again—Captain Ball Made High Score—Number of Spectators That Were Present.

The Park Club tightened its hold on second place in the Central Journal Bowling League last evening, and incidentally lowered the colors of the Elizabeth Club from third to fourth place. Three games were rolled on the Park Club alleys and the Parks won all of them by high scores. Heretofore the Parks haven't done any sensational work. They managed to run up against the other teams when the latter were rolling low scores, so, despite the fact that the Parks stood in second place, their high score was by no means as high as that of most of the other teams. Last night the Park Club team opened up in its old-time form. It was a surprise to the Elizabeth boys and to the seventy-five visitors who assembled along the alleys to witness the games. There was lots of enthusiasm and applause. George Worth is back once more in Plainfield and appeared on the team. He rolled in excellent form and was cool and steady. Will Thiers kept up his reputation, while the others were rolling well. Captain F. O. Ball managed to make high score for the Park team, 201.

The Parks took the lead at the start in every game and kept it to the end. At no time did the Elizabeth team get near enough to be dangerous. In the first game the Parks smashed all their previous records by rolling 905; then came 819 and then 898. It was great bowling and, if continued, will land the Parks in the lead in the race.

The individual scores were as follows:

PARK CLUB.	1st.	2d.	3d.
W. Thiers	192	155	169
Hibbard	166	169	161
Worth	179	144	200

DR FRENCH VERY LOW

Clergyman's Physician Extends But Little Encouragement.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Newark, January 20.—Dr. J. Clement French, pastor of the Park Presbyterian church, who has been ill for some days, was said to be very low today.

While Dr. French's physical condition is so precarious his mind is perfectly clear, and he seems to realize the danger he is in. Dr. Corwin, the physician in charge, has extended but little encourgement to the family. The heart trouble, it appears, was brought on by a severe throat disease.

His Foot will Probably be Saved.

An operation was performed on Lewis C. Putnam, of East Second street, at the hospital yesterday afternoon for a fractured ankle bone. Mr. Putnam came out of the operation very satisfactory, and the chances are that he will not be obliged to lose his foot as reported yesterday.

Putting Wires in Underground Conduits.

Employees of the electric light company are busily engaged in stringing wires through the underground conduits now laid.

LET US ARM YOU!

It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

THE TROUBLE IN SAMOA

German Consul Blamed For All the Fighting.

WARSHIP ORDERED TO APIA

The Kaisers Representative Forcibly Ejected from the Supreme Court Building by the British and American Consuls.

An Insult to the United States.

London, Jan. 20.--A special dispatch from Auckland, N. Z., says that the British and American consuls were compelled to force the doors of the supreme court at Apia, Safoa, in which the German consul had established himself, and to push him into the street.

All parties at Apia, the special dispatch continues, unite in condemning the German consul for the fighting which has taken place between the rival kings.

It is pointed out that in violation of all agreements, the consul accompanied Mataafa's forces when the claimant invaded the town, and encouraged the opposition to Malietoa Tanus.

When the British and American consuls were informed as to the situation they adjourned the court and locked the building. The German consul then demanded the keys, which were refused him. He then broke open the doors removed the locks and replaced them with others.

He afterward brought the German municipal president into the chamber, and the latter went upon the balcony and shouted to the British and American marines assembled on the square. "I am the supreme court. I am the chief justice!"

The crowd replied with jeers, and the British consul demanded the keys of the building, which were refused.

A Scotchman named Mackie thereupon climbed on top of the building and hoisted the Samoan flag, while the British and American consuls and a number of marines invaded the building, forced the doors open and pushed the German consul into the street.

Then the two consuls formally and legally opened the court and issued a warning against further interference with its jurisdiction, threatening to arrest and imprison any one attempting to do so.

Matters are now quiet and the German consul remains in his consulate.

Auckland, N. Z., Jan. 20.--Further particulars regarding the disturbances at Samoa show Mataafa's followers numbered about five thousand men and that the adherents of Malietoa Tanus were only about one thousand in number.

There was two hours' firing between the rival forces, during which several of the warriors were decapitated.

The American consul issued a proclamation, claiming that the Berlin treaty had the same force as a law of Congress, and that an insult to the supreme court of Samoa is, therefore, equivalent to an insult to the government at Washington.

The Philadelphia to Go at Once.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.--The navy department has prepared orders for the cruiser Philadelphia to proceed to Samoa at once.

The Philadelphia arrived at San Diego yesterday from Acapulco. If, however, any vessel more quickly available can be found--one of Dewey's fleet, for instance--it will be ordered to Samoa.

The commander of the Philadelphia will act in conformity with the instructions of the United States consul, so far as those instructions are in line with the treaty of Berlin, which the United States contends must be literally enforced until amended.

It would take the Philadelphia about sixteen days to make the run from San Diego to Apia, touching at Honolulu for coal.

The Remnants of Spain's Fleet.

Kingston, Jamaica, Jan. 20.--Arrangements have been made with the Royal Mail Company for coaling here of the homeward bound panish warships from Havana.

During the past week four have been coaled, the Martin Alonzo Pinzon, the Nueva Espana, the Hernan Cortes and the Galicia. The two former sailed on Wednesday and the others left yesterday. Twelve more are expected shortly.

While these vessels lay in port and at the coaling dock the most noticeable thing about them was the utter absence of discipline. This culminated in the case of the Galicia the day before yesterday, when four seamen picked up their chests and landed, dressed in shore clothes, like passengers.

Shortly afterward the water police were asked to arrest the men as deserters.

Subsequently a superior officer countermanded the request, without giving any reason, and a petty officer was heard to remark that if half the crew deserted here it would be a happy riddance, for many reasons, one being that wages in the fleet were hopelessly in arrears.

He had no idea how the navy was going to be kept up now that Cuba was lost, and he would not be surprised at a general mutiny among the fleet before it got home.

Students In a Riot.

Rome, Jan. 20.--There have been serious student riots during the last two days at the universities of Palermo and Naples, owing to the refusal of the authorities to grant certain requests regarding examinations and holidays. The students smashed windows and destroyed furniture.

Troops are on guard at both institutions, and the government has ordered them closed.

Glad to Receive Choate.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.--Mr. White, the United States charge d'affaires at London, cabled the state department yesterday that Lord Salisbury, the British premier, said that her majesty would be glad to receive Mr. Choate as ambassador.

THE PHILIPPINE COMMISSION.

A Conference with the President. To Leave Next Tuesday.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.--President Schurman of Cornell University, Professor Worcester of Ann Arbor and Colonel Denby, the three members of the Philippine commission now in the United States, had a long conference at the White House yesterday. They will receive their commissions to-day, when Mr. Schurman will be formally designated as chairman and Mr. Edward W. Harden of Chicago as secretary.

With the exception of Colonel Denby, who will be unavoidably detained here about two weeks, the members, with a corps of clerks and stenographers, will leave New York next Tuesday for Vancouver, where they will take the steamer Empress of Japan, on the 30th inst., for Hong Kong.

It is understood that at the conference the president went over with them in a general way the full instructions, as to the purpose of their mission to the Philippines, the scope of their investigation, and the general conduct of the work in hand.

Grant off for Manila.

New York, Jan. 20.--The transport Grant, which was to have sailed from here Wednesday for Manila, with the Fourth and part of the Seventeenth United States infantry, eighteen hundred men in all, but was detained owing to the fouling of a cable with her propeller, passed out at quarantine yesterday morning.

The Grant goes via the Suez canal, and will require seven weeks to make the trip.

As the Grant passed out through the Narrows she was saluted by various steam craft.

The troops at Fort Wadsworth lined up on top of the old stone fort and gave three hearty cheers for the departing soldiers.

Both Forts Wadsworth and Hamilton fired a salute, which was answered by the waving of flags and cheers from the transport.

The War Vessels at Norfolk.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 20.--The naval vessels Eagle and Vixen left the navy yard yesterday for Cuba. They have been painted white.

The Eagle and Vixen, while assigned to survey duty, will go to Havana to drag the harbor for any mines or torpedoes which may remain.

This was suggested by the evacuation commission, while in session at Havana, and will be done as a matter of safety now that Havana harbor is open to all nations.

The gunboat Nashville, now here, has also been ordered to Havana. It is said that the navy department desires to get war vessels away from the navy yards and keep them actively employed. There are more than thirty warships here.

Settled by Arbitration.

Leavenworth, Kan., Jan. 20.--The mine owners and strikers here have settled their differences by arbitration. A proposition agreed upon by a committee has been ratified, whereby the miners return to work and the coal sent up for a certain number of days will be weighed and recorded as the mine run.

It will then be run over lawful screens and the shale removed and a second recording weight made. The difference is to form the percentage to be deducted from mine run coal in the future.

Joseph Leiter's Plans.

Chicago, Jan. 20.--The Chronicle says Joseph Leiter has returned to Chicago to begin the establishment of a compressed air auto-truck company in Chicago within a fortnight. He is said already to have secured options on land in one of the large manufacturing suburbs, with ample switching facilities on the Belt Line, and to intend at once to begin the erection of an extensive plant for the manufacture of the new motors, the patent rights of which he controls.

The Coal-Miners Union.

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 20.--Yesterday's session of the Coal Miners' Union was devoted to the discussion of amendments to the constitution.

The only important change provides for the resignation of salaried officers upon the acceptance of an appointment or nomination for a political office.

It was decided to donate five hundred dollars to the striking shoemakers of Massachusetts.

The Alesia at Queenstown.

Queenstown, Jan. 20.--The Hamburg-American line steamer Alesia, which left Hamburg on December 27 for Boston, Mass., and which signaled Kinsale Wednesday that her rudder was damaged and that her machinery was working very badly, has reached this port in safety.

The company's officials have ordered the Alesia to repair here and proceed to Boston.

Maine for Expansion.

Augusta, Me., Jan. 20.--The feature of yesterday's session of the legislature was the presentation in the House by Mr. Macomber of Augusta of a resolution endorsing the expansion policy of the administration and inviting President McKinley to visit Augusta.

The resolution passed the House by a unanimous rising vote, amid much enthusiasm.

The Delaware Deadlock.

Dover, Del., Jan. 20.--The third ballot in joint session taken by the Delaware legislature at noon yesterday resulted in no election, as follows:

George Gray, Democrat, 15; J. Edward Addicks, Republican, 15; Henry A. Dupont, Republican, 11; John G. Gray, Democrat, 6; William S. Hillies, Republican, 2; absent, 3; total vote, 45; necessary to a choice, 25.

A Colliery Closed Down.

Hazleton, Pa., Jan. 20.--On account of a threatened strike of the carpenter force at the Honeybrook colliery of the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal Company, because of a wage disagreement, all the works at Audenried and Honeybrook were shut down yesterday, thereby throwing twenty-five hundred men out of employment.

WANT INDEPENDENCE

Significant Speeches at a Banquet in Havana.

UNITED STATES CHEERED

Junta Patriotica Refuses to Attend Meeting Where Speeches Were Made--Seven Men Held for Robbery Without Trial Since 1897.

Havana, Jan. 20.--General Mario Menocal, the chief of police; Domingo Mendez Capote, representing the department of government in the cabinet of advisers, and Juan Gualberto Gomez, of the executive committee of the Cuban assembly, attended the banquet given at the Casino Wednesday night by the Cuban assembly in honor of the Cuban chiefs.

Generals Brooke, Lee and Ludlow were invited.

The two last mentioned sent representatives.

The patriotic speeches delivered were all in favor of the immediate independence of Cuba. President McKinley, the United States, General Lee and Rear Admiral Sampson were cheered. The Junta Patriotica did not accept an invitation to be present showing that real jealousy exists between the Cubans.

The French line steamer Versailles, ashore on the northern coast of the province of Pinar del Rio, continues to lie in a dangerous position on the sands, but is not leaking.

Her agents have cabled to New York and to New Orleans for wreckers. Her cargo is still being brought here on tugs, etc.

The American board of pardons has recommended the release from jail of seven men who have been confined here without trial for the alleged robbery from a safe of funds belonging to the navy paymaster in Porto Rico, since 1897.

The prisoners declare, and information from San Juan tends to sustain them, that the alleged robbery was a plot on the part of Spanish officials to cover up their delinquency and to obtain scapegoats for the Spanish paymaster at San Juan, who, it is further asserted, was probably a party to the dishonesty in appropriation of the funds.

These seven men, after ineffectual torture for the purpose of obtaining a confession, were shipped to Havana in March, 1897.

They still show evidences of the torture inflicted upon them. The board of pardons has examined many other prisoners and has recommended to General Brooke the release of sixty-seven of them who are in confinement.

Quay's Losing Fight.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 20.--The second joint assembly ballot for United States senator yesterday resulted as follows:

M. S. Quay, Republican, 111; George A. Jenks, Democrat, 85; John Dalzell, Republican, 17; John Stewart, Republican, 9; Charles W. Stone, Republican, 8; George F. Huff, Republican, 8; Alvin Markle, Republican, 1; G. A. Grow, Republican, 1; Charles E. Rice, Republican, 3; Charles E. Smith, Republican, 1; J. F. Downing, Republican, 2; E. A. Irvin, Republican, 3; Charles Tubbs, Republican, 2.

Absent and not voting: Senators John H. Brown, Republican, and Higgins, Democrat; Representatives T. M. Brophy, Democrat, Barton W. Weaver, Republican.

Sampson Watches Shell Test.

New York, Jan. 20.--The government steamboat Meigs took to Sandy Hook yesterday a distinguished party to witness the test of the Cathmann shell. In the party were General Nelson A. Miles and Admiral Sampson, General Peter Haines, Colonel Phipps and Judge Outwaite of Ohio.

Major Frank Heath, commanding the proving grounds, caused a salute of fifteen guns to be fired and afterward conducted the test. A shell loaded with guncotton, fired from a modern 12-inch breech loading rifle, with a powder charge, against armor plate, penetrated the plate and completely destroyed it. One 1-inch shell, fired from a mortar, also did destructive work.

The Cuban Commission.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.--The Cuban evacuation commission was dissolved yesterday and its members submitted a report to the president, the secretary of state and the secretary of war.

The report makes no reference to the future government of the island, and embodied no political recommendations whatsoever, consisting practically of a record of its proceedings with the voluminous correspondence passing mainly between it, the Spanish commission and the administration at Washington.

Mississippi Steamer Lost.

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 20.--The Memphis and Vicksburg Packet line steamer Ouachita, Captain Bender, was burned yesterday.

It is believed that everyone on board escaped.

The Ouachita was a passenger and freight boat in the Memphis and Vicksburg trade, and was valued at thirty thousand dollars, with an insurance of twenty thousand dollars.

Major-General Reynolds Dying.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.--Major General Joseph J. Reynolds (retired) is critically ill here, as the result of a stroke of paralysis, and is not expected to live.

Mrs. Reynolds, and his sons, Captain Alfred Reynolds of the army, and Lieutenant Reynolds of the navy, are in attendance. The general is seventy-seven years old.

Nervous Dyspepsia

To Gain Flesh, to Sleep Well, to Know What Appetite and Good Digestion Mean.

MAKE A TEST OF STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS.

No trouble is more common or more misunderstood than nervous dyspepsia. People having it think their nerves are to blame and are surprised that they are not cured by nerve medicines. The real seat of the mischief is lost sight of. The stomach is the organ to be looked after.

Nervous dyspeptics often do not have any pain whatever in the stomach, nor perhaps any of the usual symptoms of stomach weakness. Nervous dyspepsia shows itself not in the stomach so much as in nearly every organ. In some cases the heart palpitates and is irregular; in others the kidneys are effected; in others the bowels are constipated, with headaches; still others are troubled with loss of flesh and appetite with accumulations of gas, and sour risings and heartburn.

It is safe to say that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will cure any stomach weakness or disease except cancer of the stomach. They cure sour stomach, gas, loss of flesh and appetite, sleeplessness, palpitation, heartburn, constipation and headache.

Send for valuable little book on stomach diseases by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich. All druggists sell full-sized packages at 50 cents. Prof. Henry W. Becker, A. M., the well known religious worker and writer of St. Louis,

Secretary of the Mission Board of the German Methodist Church. Chief Clerk and Expert Accountant for the Harbor and Wharf Commission. Public Secretary for the St. Louis School Patrons' Association, and the District Conference of Stewards of the M. E. Church; also takes an active part in the work of the Epworth League, and to write on religious and educational topics for several magazines. How he found relief is best told in his own words.

"Some weeks ago my brother heard me say something about indigestion, and taking a box from his pocket said 'Try Stuart's Tablets.' I did, and was promptly relieved. Then I investigated the nature of the tablets and became satisfied that they were made of just the right things and in just the right proportions to aid in the assimilation of food. I heartily endorse them in all respects, and I keep them constantly on hand." 19eod9

A truck farmer, living in Owen, Indiana, describes an afflicted condition with which almost every one will sympathize. "I want to thank you," he writes, "for the good that Ripans Tabules have done me. I had been all run down for a year and could not build up on account of imperfect digestion and assimilation. I had tried various remedies without relief until I was thoroughly discouraged. My father, who had used the Tabules with good results, recommended them to me, but I had so little faith in anything, that he had to insist several times before I would try them. Finally I got a package and my improvement was both rapid and sure from the first. I shall keep them on hand hereafter for emergencies, and shall take pleasure in recommending their use to any one who may be similarly afflicted."

A new style packet containing THE RIPANS TABULES in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at some drug stores—price, FIVE cents. This new-priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (the tabules) can be had by mail by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (TEN TABULES) will be sent for five cents.

NICARAGUA CANAL BILL.

The Maritime Company's Representatives Heard.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.--The Maritime Canal Company, representing the old concession for building the Nicaraguan canal, had a hearing yesterday before the commerce committee of the House.

There was added interest in the hearing in view of the statements before the committee within the last two days by the representatives of the new Panama Canal Company and by the Cragin-Grace syndicate.

The Maritime Company was represented yesterday at the hearing by its president, Hiram Hitchcock; the president of the construction company, J. W. Miller, and the solicitor of the company, A. T. Mason.

Professor Haupt, one of the Nicaraguan canal commission, was present to present engineering features involved, and Warner Miller, ex-president of the Maritime Canal Company, was also present.

President Hitchcock opened the hearing with an historical review of what had been done, particularly referring to the course of Mr. Blaine, when secretary of state, to protect the interests of the concessions held by the company.

He presented four reasons why the Nicaraguan route was better than the Panama route. It is through a healthier country, is more direct, has a great lake for a feeder, and the abundant rainfall guarantees a steady supply of water.

A. T. Mason of New York, counsel for the company, spoke in the afternoon.

Submarine Boats.

Paris, Jan. 20.--In the hamber of Deputies yesterday M. Paschal Grousset, Radical Socialist, introduced the question of sub-marine boats, in which vessels, he said, successful experiments had been conducted at Toulon, the French naval stronghold in the south of France.

In so doing the deputy pointed out the importance of this matter, which, he alleged, would produce a revolution in naval tactics.

He declared that a syndicate of iron manufacturers had for twelve years opposed the construction of submarine boats, and had tried to prevent the success of the experiments in those vessels.

Therefore he moved the appointment of a committee to inquire into the question, and asked for urgency on his motion.

The minister of marine, M. Lockroy, opposed M. Grousset's motion on the ground that a committee of the hamber of Deputies would be incompetent to deal with the question, which, he said, was in charge of specialists. The trials of the Gustave Zede, he continued, had shown that she possessed the required capabilities, not only for firing torpedoes under water, but for navigability under water.

France, the marine minister also said, was the only power in possession of a practical submarine boat.

The Chamber rejected the motion for urgency by a vote of 357 to 121.

No Hope for the Paul Jones.

Scranton, Miss., Jan. 20.--Lawrence Jones of Louisville and Mayor Taggart of Indianapolis have arrived here from Chadeleur island on a tug. They were unable to confirm the report that the yacht Paul Jones passed there on January 6.

Word reached them on their arrival of the finding of a yacht's telephone and engine house on the Breton Beach.

The men, on learning the description of the things, then gave up hope.

They will go to New Orleans to await news of the finding of the bodies of those who went down with the vessel.

The Paul Jones left New Orleans for Pensacola on January 2, and has not been seen or heard of since.

There were seven persons on board the yacht, which Mr. Jones lent to a friend for the trip.

London, Jan. 20.--The annual meeting of the British Chambers of Commerce will be held on March 14. The business which will come before the meeting includes resolutions expressing satisfaction with the government's protection of British interests in China, urging adherence to the "open door" policy, and requesting the government to arrange with the United States so that British produce and manufacturing shall not be subjected to a differential tariff in the Philippines, Porto Rico and Cuba.

A resolution will also be offered urging the government to utilize every opportunity to co-operate with the United States for the benefit of the commercial interests of both nations.

Herbert Bismarck's Plans.

Berlin, Jan. 20.--Prince Herbert Bismarck, it is rumored, is about to re-enter the diplomatic service.

The report is denied that he intends to reside permanently at Friedrichsruhe. He has refused a request of several student clubs to be present at the transference of his father's remains to the Bismarck mausoleum, because the chapel will only accommodate thirty persons.

KEELY MOTOR A FRAUD

At Least Such Is the Opinion of Investigating Scientists.

THE SECRETS REVEALED

A Careful Examination of the Inventor's Workshop Shows That Compressed Air Was Probably the Agency Used in Experiments.

Philadelphia, Jan. 20.—The Press yesterday published an article covering, with illustrations, more than a page in space, giving the details of an investigation made by that paper of the dismantled workshop of the late John W. Keely, which investigation, the Press contends, clearly proves that the mysterious Keely motor was a delusion and deception, and that its alleged mysterious forces were the result of trickery.

In the investigation, which has been in progress more than a week, the flooring of the workshop was taken up and a brick partition wall was removed. The Press was assisted in the work by Professor Carl Hering, a consulting engineer of experience; Professor Arthur W. Goodspeed, assistant professor of physics of the University of Pennsylvania; Professor Lightner Witmer, professor of experimental psychology at the University of Pennsylvania, and Dr. M. G. Miller, who has had special training in exploration and research in the way of mound digging, and, accordingly superintended all the digging operations.

Clarence B. Moore, son of Mrs. Bloomfield Moore, was an interested spectator.

The statements in the article, which are substantiated by signed statements of the persons named, are to the effect that tubing was found concealed in the brick work and under the floor of the laboratory. This, it is claimed, laid bare the possibilities of deception, as the tubing is of the kind calculated to stand high pressure and could have been used in connection with the great steel sphere found last week in the laboratory which the experts intimate was used as a reservoir for compressed air or compressed gases, and the tubing could thus form an agency for the forces that moved the motor in the exhibition room.

The contention of Mr. Keely and his friends for many years had been that no tubing of any kind was needed to work the machines.

The views of Mr. Hering and Professor Goodspeed are that the presence of the tubing and sphere indicate the use of normal forces and possible deception on the part of Keely.

In this view Clarence Moore concurs, and Professor Witmer feels that the possibility of trickery confirms the diagnosis that most psychologists make as to the delusive character of the Keely mystery.

Professor Hering summarizes the results of the investigation as follows:

"Nothing that I found or saw indicated that he used electricity or magnetism to produce any of the effects in which a great power was developed. I feel satisfied from this and the description of his experiments that he did not use electricity, except, perhaps, for producing insignificantly small effects, probably because he seemed to know very little, if anything, about electricity and magnetism.

"The hidden tubes which were found were not sufficiently well insulated to be used for electrical effects. I found only a pair of abandoned insulated wires near a window, which were apparently used for some signal, and could not possibly have been used for transmitting large powers electrically.

"Personally, I am satisfied now that he used highly compressed air, and that he intentionally and knowingly deceived the public when he held his exhibitions. Moreover, there is nothing wonderful about any of these experiments, of which I have seen descriptions, if he used highly compressed air."

Eagan Charges Prepared.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.--The charges and specifications in the court martial of Commissary General Eagan have been drafted and are in the hands of the president.

The charges are conduct unbecoming an officer and gentleman and conduct prejudicial to good order and military discipline.

The specifications quote largely from General Eagan's statement attacking General Miles before the war investigating commission.

Business Troubles.

Boston, Mass., Jan. 20.--At a special meeting of the stockholders of the Assabet Manufacturing company, holders of two-thirds of the company's stock were represented.

The chief business was the endorsement of the appointment by the directors of A. B. Sisbee, E. N. Fenno and Jeremiah Williams as assignees.

It was said that the exact assets of the firm will be made known very soon.

An Up-to-Date Indian Girl.

Lucy Nicolar, daughter of the late Joseph Nicolar, of the Penobscot tribe, is an accomplished bicycle rider. She is just coming into her teens, and is a young miss of marked beauty, and wherever she goes with baskets or Indian exhibits many a young American who looks upon the Indian maiden feels that the land of the Penobscots must be "the land of handsome women." Just now Lucy is receiving private instructions that she may enter the Oldtown High School. Her instructor tells me that she is bright in her studies and that mathematics is her forte. Lucy is perhaps the most proficient piano player on the island, being the owner of an instrument. She also sings pleasingly. But the skill of the tribe is not forgotten by this young member, for she can make baskets, etc., as well as some of the older ones. The mother of Lucy is one of the finest looking members of the tribe, a woman respected by all who know her.—Lewiston, Me., Journal.

TO DISCUSS EXPANSION.

President Clark to Submit the Question to Christian Endeavorers.

Boston, Mass., Jan. 20.--President F. E. Clark, D. D., of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, has undertaken to set before Endeavorers certain principles to be considered in determining the attitude of the members of the society as to imperialism or national expansion. President Clark says:

"There is room for decided differences of opinion. We should not be led on by dazzling visions of national greatness, which certain imperialists would dangle before our eyes, nor should we be scared out of our duty by the timid fears of some who dare not attempt great things for God and humanity.

"The boom of Dewey's guns in Manila, and of Sampson's at Santiago, will never cease to echo. We owe a peculiar duty to at least twenty millions of people who a year ago were not under our particular sphere of influence.

"If this question is not settled as God would have it settled, it will be a sorry day for America. If it is settled right it will not only bring untold blessings to those peoples of the West Indies and the South Seas, but it will bring the dawn of a new era to the world, for it will show that a strong nation can interfere with the affairs of another nation even to the point of war, not for its own glory and aggrandisement, but for the elevation and advancement of a weak and downtrodden people."

Wreck of the Glendower.

New York, Jan. 20.--The British steamer Menominee, which sailed from London with eleven cabin passengers on January 5, arrived here yesterday, having on board the captain and crew, twenty-three hands in all, of the British steamer Glendower, from Philadelphia for Sligo, with a cargo of corn.

The Menominee fell in with the Glendower at 8.30 a. m. on January 12, in latitude 49.23 and longitude 31.37. The latter was in a sinking condition and the captain asked that he and his crew be taken off.

The British steamer Georgian, three days ago on its arrival at Liverpool, reported having seen the Glendower in trouble on January 12.

The Glendower at that time had a heavy list to starboard and two steamers were standing by.

The Glendower carried a cargo of 122,000 bushels of corn, valued at $48,000.

Commuter Runyon Wins.

Elizabeth, N. J., Jan. 20.--Judge Vail in the Union county court yesterday morning charged the jury in the case of Elmer E. Runyon against the Central Railroad Company, whose detectives prevented the plaintiff boarding its trains on December 30, 1896, at Jersey City, because he carried several packages.

The charge was favorable to the plaintiff.

The jury returned in twenty-five minutes with a verdict of one thousand dollars for the plaintiff.

The verdict was reached by one ballot in five minutes.

The railroad company will appeal the case.

COMING EVENTS.

January 22—William D. Murray will address the Y. M. C. A. meeting at 4:15 p. m. Music by Miss Ada M. Runyon, T. A. Cuming and a choir of mixed voices.

Col. Berry, a Kentucky Congressman, who recently made some remarks about this country "licking Germany as it did Spain," has aroused the ire of the German Ambassador and the latter has asked the State department to call down the southern gentleman. As a result of this little episode Col. Berry, true to the Kentuckian spirit of the old school, has publicly stated that his address is Newport, Ky., and he can always be found at home when any affair of honor is to be settled. He hints at pistols or swords. After writing such good poetry we are sorry to see Col. Berry so far forget himself as to think that at any time the sword is mightier than the pen. Let the Colonel roll off a few gushing sonnets and all will be quiet on the Potomac. However, the German Ambassador is doubtless ignorant of the fact that Col. Berry is 6 feet 4 inches and weighs 210 pounds.

The Somerville Unionist-Gazette seems to think that it would be a good thing for inland counties like Somerset if the Delaware and Raritan canal could be converted into a ship canal as has been projected. The Gazette says: "It would bring us in easy touch with the great markets of the country even more than at present. The Legislature, however, would be called upon to change our laws, which permit canals to be built provided they are not more than three miles long and a hundred feet wide, pass through no cities and do not go over or under a railroad. That law was passed when the railroad corporations had complete control of legislation in New Jersey."

That it is much easier to destroy than to build is shown in the difference in time it took to build a locomotive on record making time a few days ago and what was accomplished by two powerful engines coming together in accidental manner on the Lehigh Valley last week. In a Pennsylvania shop it took twenty-one hours and thirty minutes to turn out a locomotive complete from beginning to end. That fact was heralded broadcast as a great achievment, and it was. But when those two engines came together at West Dunellen it was all over in thirty seconds, and as if they had never been built as far as their utility was concerned.

The following remarkable proposition is made by a North Carolina editor in a recent issue of his paper: "We will publish a ten-verse poem for a load of wood; a three-column story for a load of groceries, and we will cheerfully give space to obituaries of former subscribers at the rate of six laying hens a column."

SIR HENRY IRVING.

This country has seen the last stage appearance of Sir Henry Irving, and it is doubtful if he ever plays again in London. He is only 62 years of age, but he has been burning his candle at both ends for some time, as actor-manager, and is now broken in health. Irving's fame is world wide, but he is comparatively poor, owing to his lavish generosity.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Hon. C. A. Reed, president of the New Jersey Senate, has made Charles H. Bateman, editor of the Somerville Unionist-Gazette, his private secretary. It is an excellent appointment, and we congratulate both President Reed and Secretary Bateman.—Clinton Democrat.

The justices of the peace come to the front annually with the organization of the Legislature. They want their old-time power restored and extended, but the people want something better. The town crier, the bellman, justices of the peace and numerous other antiquities have had their day. They were useful for a time, but they are as useless today as the stage coach or the wooden plow.—Elizabeth Journal.

Col. "Bill" Potter is the most popular man around the State House in Trenton this week, excepting Governor Voorhees. Col. "Bill" is the hero of the pages and the doorkeepers and the clerks, because he hands out the pastboards, which so delight the hearts of those who are new in State matters. There is nothing that swells the heart of the new statesman and the newspaper writers as the term pass. It seems to be human nature for a man to be supremely happy when he is riding "dead head." The man with his first pass does keep the rails hot, but the free pass sometimes leads to destruction, for men run recklessly up and down the State and wander over into the large cities, and because the ride is free they think they can afford to dissipate a bit and money melts away. Before the end of the session many find that a free pass is an expensive thing at the best.

PASSING COMMENT

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

Owen Fleming, of Park avenue, is the possessor of a real Harlem goat that can trace its ancestry back to the first settlers in that rocky part of upper New York now known as Harlem. The animal was the gift of an uncle who won it at a raffle and sent it to Owen Fleming. Since the arrival of the goat the Fleming family have had no trouble in disposing of all the tin cans they have. The animal, owing to the lack of its usual food, has developed an appetite for most anything it can find. It has even become necessary to tie up the animal on wash days. Owen is considering the advisibility of breaking the goat to the saddle or cart and utilizing him as a means of transportation to school.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

The "Joshua Simpkins" Company, with two brass bands and splendid orchestra, will be seen at Music Hall tonight. The play is made of fun and realism, combining the pleasing features of realistic melodrama and the ever poular rural play. The character sketches are said to be very clever, while there is an abundance of good music, singing and dancing in it. Those lovable old country characters are introduced, and their sayings and doings create much amusement. The company comes to us recommended as a good one throughout. The saw mill scene in the third act is said to be wonderfully realistic. A genuine circular saw is seen in motion, and, just to show that it is the real article, a board is sawed off a log in full view of the audience, after which "Caleb Simpkins," "Uncle Josh's" son, is lashed to the log by the villians and started toward the glittering teeth of the rapidly-revolving saw.

The much talked of railroad scene in the "Heart of Chicago," which comes to Music Hall Tuesday night of next week is said to be a really marvelous bit of mechanical scenic construction. It is covered by twenty-five different patents. A train presenting all the appearance of rapidly lessening distance as it approaches the obeserver finally dashes down to the footlights full-sized. This scene occupies ten minutes.

Viola Allen, it has been decided by Liebler & Co., her managers, will remain at the Garden theatre only until the end of the winter season—six weeks longer—and March 6th will open at the Museum in Boston for a spring run, which will continue indefinitely. This arrangement will give the people of New York and vicinity only six weeks more in which to see Miss Allen in "The Christian." This will be their last opportunity. Next season Miss Allen will not be seen in New York, but will present "The Christian" in seven large cities, remaining several weeks in each. The following season she will appear in a new play which is being expressly written for her. Seats may now be had in advance up to the end of Miss Allen's engagement at the Garden Theatre, Saturday, March 4th.

Westfield, Jan. 20—An exciting runaway took place on Westfield avenue yesterday morning but luckily no one was seriously injured. William H. Barton and Dr. Ellice had been to Plainfield and returning when the horse became frightened and ran up Westfield avenue at break neck speed. Mr. Barton found it would be impossible to steer the horse around the corner so headed him for the Methodist church which the horse struck "head on." Dr. Ellice jumped and sustained a sprained ankle for his pains while Mr. Barton, who stuck to the carriage, was unhurt. The horse and carriage were the property of the doctor. WHITE'S WHITE SALE
THE WHITE GOODS EVENT OF THE SEASON.

Encouraged by the marked success which has attended our previous Muslin Underwear sales, we have made a large purchase for this occasion. Our orders were placed during the makers' dull season. The work has been most thoroughly done, materials and trimmings are of the best, the fit, finish and size generosity is the same as if the garments were made under your own supervision—by your own home seamstress—and the prices are less than you would pay for bare materials.

NIGHT ROBES.
Every feature of this sale is special, but more special than other features will be the nightgown selling. They are among the best creations of master makers and are daintily trimmed with the prettiest laces, ribbons and embroideries. Prices 25c, 49c, 75c, $1 and $1.25.

WHITE SKIRTS.
Some plain with rows of tucks, some with cambric and embroidery flounces with lace insertions; all cut very full, nothing scant about them but the prices—25c, 35c, 49c, 75c to $1.25.

CORSET COVERS.
Trimmed with embroidery, torchon laces, or clusters of tucks with insertions, perfect fitting, high, square or V shape necks, made of fine cambric. Who would bother to make them when you buy at these prices—15c, 25c, 29c, 39c, 50c

DRAWERS.
Made with yoke bands, deep hamburg embroidery, umbrella, flounces or rows of tucks. As some of the best numbers are somewhat limited as to quantity it is advisable that you be among the early choosers as these lots cannot be duplicated at these prices—17c, 25c, 39c and 50c.

THE SUNDAY LESSON.

INTERNATIONAL SERIES WITH COMMENTARY BY DR. STEARNS.

Golden Text—For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life—John iii: 16. Jan. 22.

The new birth. "This is one of the richest and most important sections of the Bible. The sixteenth verse alone contains the whole Gospel in a nutshell, or 'the Bible in a miniature,' and is worth more than all the wisdom of the world. The infinite love of the Father, the mission of his Son, the work of the Holy Spirit, the lost condition of man, the necessity of a new birth from above, faith in Christ as a condition of salvation, the kingdom of God, eternal life—all these fundamental doctrines are set forth by the unerring mouth of our Lord in the interview with a timid yet earnest and anxious inquirer. The central idea of the passage is the new birth, which implies the total depravity of man, and the work of his divine grace. This great doctrine stands in the proper place at the beginning of Christ's ministry. The first miracle of Christ was a miracle of transformation. His first public act in Jerusalem was an act of reformation. His first discourse, a discourse on regeneration. He is not satisfied with mere improvements of the old, but demands a new life, lays a new foundation. True religion in the soul begins with a personal conviction of sin and guilt, and of the necessity of a radical change. Without such a conviction all efforts to convert a man are vain.

According to synoptists, Christ began his public ministry by preaching to the people: "The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand; repent ye, and believe the Gospel." According to John, he made, at the outset of his ministry, the same demand—first indirectly and then directly upon an individual, a man circumstanced, orthodox, honest, unblemished—yea, of the highest rank, a member of the Supreme Council of the theocracy, even favorably disposed to Christ, and almost ready to accept him as the Messiah; in a word, a man endowed with every personal and official claim to membership to the Messianic kingdom, yet lacking one fundamental condition—a new birth from above. Christ answers not so much to the words as to the thoughts of Nicodemus, penetrating his heart to the very core. John 2:25. John does not state the result of the conversation, because it did not appear at once, but some time afterward. John 7: 50; 19:39. "The second birth impresses the image of God on every regenerate soul. It may not as yet be developed in every part, but all its parts are there in the germ. It is not a partial, but a complete result which regeneration effects. It is not one member but a complete equipment of the soul in all graces.

Requisite. "Ye must be born again." V. 7. "Except a man be born from above he cannot see the kingdom of God." Vs. 3, 5. Jesus "must" be lifted up to expiate sin (v. 14), and we "must" be born again to inherit the kingdom of God. As Jesus "must" become a Son of man for our redemption, we "must" become sons of God for our salvation. The necessity of the cross softens the necessity of regeneration. But it remains a necessity. A spiritual birth is as essential to the enjoyment of heaven as the natural birth is to the enjoyment of earth.

Not learning, but life, is the requisite for entrance into the kingdom of God, and life comes by birth. Jesus did not come to instruct the old nature, but to create a new. He does not teach reformation, he gives regeneration. Jesus was a perfect man, a perfect example, a perfect teacher, but to those who believe in him only as a teacher he comes with the searching statement, "Ye must be born again."

The natural man will always "marvel" (v. 7) at spiritual things, for he cannot understand them. As the saintly Summerfield was lying ill, he was asked by a clergyman, "How old are you?" His answer was, "I was born in Preston, in England, in 1798, and was born again at Dublin, in Ireland, in 1817." The visitor expressed surprise and curiosity. He did not know what it meant. Summerfield answered in the words of Jesus, "Art thou a master of Israel and knowest not these things?" And then related the experience of all conversion.

Supernatural. Christ compares it to "the wind." V. 8. As the natural man cannot see the wind, tell its origin or destination, nor comprehend its motion or laws, so he cannot understand the freeness, fulness and power of the Holy Spirit. "The things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God." 1 Cor. 2:11-16.

A poor illiterate man, slowly spelling the verse out by the roadside, coming to the word, "Whosoever," strove in vain to pronounce or comprehend it. He called a schoolboy passing by, but the lad shook his head and said, "I can't tell you what it means," and would have turned away, but the anxious man said, "You're a good scholar, surely you know what it means." "I don't," said he, "unless it means you, me or anybody else." "Why didn't you say that at first? I can understand that. Now read the verse again, please, and put them words in, instead of the long one." The lad read, "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that you, me, or anybody else, believing in him, should not perish, but have everlasting life." The poor old man lifted his heart and thanked God for his mercy to such a poor sinner as he.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 22—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—A student's prayer.—Ps. xix. 1-14. (A meeting for the day of prayer for colleges.)

The day of prayer for colleges may well be observed by the Christian Endeavor organization. Many Endeavorers are in college subject to the peculiar temptations of college life. They need and want our special prayers. The present is particularly opportune for this observance, because recently a great religious movement has been begun in our colleges and universities. The trend of college thought and life today as never before is toward religion, and the Christian religion. It is one of the most hopeful signs of the times that the educated young men of our country are turning more and more toward religion. The proofs of it are flourishing college Young Men's Christian associations, the wonderful students' volunteer movement and great interest on the part of thousands of students in general religious services and work. These facts are matters of great rejoicing and thanksgiving and invite our earnest, united prayers for their continuance, under the richest blessing of God.

The prayer of the Nineteenth Psalm may well be called a student's prayer. It is the prayer of one who was himself a student, and the petitions contained in it are particularly applicable to students. The writer is a student both of nature and of the revealed word of God. He sees the glory of God revealed in the heavens, the firmament, day and night and in the sun. This knowledge has come from study. He has also studied the revealed law of God, and has seen its beauty and its utility.

The petitions of this psalm are also peculiarly adaptable to students in our colleges and universities, away from home surroundings and influences and cultivating the intellectual side of man. For these things we may well pray for all students.

1. The first petition is for cleansing from secret faults. "Cleanse Thou me from secret faults" (verse 12). College life abounds in temptation to "secret faults." The boy who at home has kept nothing from parents finds it so easy to do many things which he would not have them know. There is a temptation to deceive professors in recitations and in examinations. Let us pray earnestly that our young men at college may be delivered from "secret faults."

2. The second petition is for deliverance from presumptuous sins. "Keep back Thy servant also from presumptuous sins. Let them not have dominion over me." College life breeds presumptuousness. What the undergraduate does not know, in his own opinion, is not worth knowing. It is a scholastic presumptuousness that leads to skepticism and even to atheism. Pray that our students be delivered from sins of presumption.

3. The third petition asks for acceptableness of words and thoughts. How important that educated and intelligent men and women should think and speak only things acceptable to God. Their thoughts and words have increased weight because of their learning, and for this reason we should utter this petition of this prayer.

Bible Readings.—Lev. iv, 1-3; Num. xv, 30; Deut. vi, 6-9; xvii, 12; I Sam. xv, 1-26; II Sam. vi, 6, 7; II Kings xx, 1-6; Ps. li, 15; xc, 8; Math. vi, 5-15; Luke xviii, 1-14; Col. iv, 2-6; I Tim. ii, 1-4; II Pet. ii, 9, 10.

Be Still and Know That I Am God.

God takes no pleasure in pain or sorrow, but He will impose both if thereby He may bring us to love Him or make us more like Himself. At such a time it is selfish, unbelieving, to complain and murmur—very wicked to find fault with God. There are medicines which, taken with wisdom and in moderation, baffle disease and restore health; but abused, they weaken and destroy. So with sickness and sorrow, as we please to use them. To some they are what God means them for all, a savor of life unto life; to others, a savor of death unto death. At such a time it is only wise to be very considerate, very humble, very submissive.—Lutheran Observer.

No Sure Sign.

Prominence in the church is no sure sign of personal piety and certain safety. Christ denominated the heads of the ecclesiastical departments of His day as a "generation of vipers," whose warning to flee from the wrath to come was as daring, and their heeding that warning was as astonishing as its worthlessness would be proved unless they "brought forth fruits meet for repentance." Hypocrisy will save no man because he happens to be the head of some ecclesiastical department.—Church Standard.

No Reason.

Because you are not of the most impious class of transgressors is no sufficient reason to despise others nor to boast before God how good you are, so that your prayer does not need to ask for the Divine mercy. Some have prayed for grace just because they have been so dreadfully wicked. Others in this age rather boast of their extra degree of sinfulness, thinking to make them apparently more fit for redemption.—Reformed Church Messenger.

Peace.

There is a peace that cometh after sorrow,
Of hope surrendered, not of hope fulfilled;
A peace that looketh not upon tomorrow,
But calmly on a tempest that is stilled;

A peace that lives not now in joy's excesses
Nor in the happy life of love secure,
But in the unerring strength the heart possesses
Of conflicts won while learning to endure;

A peace there is in sacrifice secluded,
A life subdued, from will and passion free,
'Tis not the peace that over Eden brooded,
But that which triumphed in Gethsemane.

—American Friend.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 22. "Growth in Grace." Text, Ps. xx. 1-9.

"In the name of our God we will set up our banners."

Flags and emblems are most frequently decorative in their use, but their greatest value lies in a different direction. They stand for principles and serve as rallying points in conflicts where those principles are at stake. In armies there is not only the national ensign, but each corps, division and regiment has its own special emblem which on a banner designates the headquarters and serves to guide the organizations in their movements.

Nothing will more stir the sentiment than the sight of the flag of one's native land, especially when under its leadership forces are massed for the protection of one's life and liberties. March, camp and battle incidents illustrate the power of the flag to move men to endurance and deeds of valor.

So the psalmist feels toward God and His work. The cross of Christ had not in the times of David become the sacred emblem of God's people, and the significance of self sacrifice as the essence of religion was not known as it is now, but the rulership of God and the need that men should obey His laws were known. David, with all his faults, clearly saw the necessity for divine leading. He felt intensely the nearness of God. The Hebrew consciousness of communion with the eternal spirit of righteousness was highly developed in him. God was king. Men were servants and soldiers of Jehovah. They acted under His eye. Earthly events were under guidance of God and executed His plans. God moved to battle against evil everywhere. His banners led the human host to sure victory. Goodness and godliness alone were powerful. Sin and evil were weak as well as wrong and must be overthrown. God was in visible but all powerful. As Zion, the citadel of Judah in Jerusalem, was the stronghold of the earthly king, so God was conceived of as dwelling in the impregnable Zion of heavenly power, glory and grace.

Growth in grace means several things. It should first of all be seen in actual increase in individual uprightness and goodness. As one grows older in Christian life the hold on spiritual things should be firmer. One should actually know and love God better, be purer in speech, gentler in action, more helpful and generous, more loving and lovable. Then God actually can love more and bless with greater prosperity.

Appetite and Digestion.

Dyspeptics abound on the street, in the home and in the church. Devotional exercises are painful, and there is no relish for sermons, songs, prayer nor even for the collection. If a morsel of truth is got hold of, the chances are that if it doesn't choke one in the swallowing it lies like lead, undigested, after it is down and makes life miserable or else is wholly cast up and rejected. The low condition of piety generally is recognized quite fully, its causes are sought and remedy inquired for. It is well to note the symptoms and carefully diagnose the disease that cause and cure may more surely be found.

If you wish to know your condition of soul health, note if you have hearty relish for the means of grace. Do you enjoy reading the Bible? Is it food for your hunger that you relish, or do you force it down because you ought to do so and with no real appetite?

Is prayer a task or a delightful banquet with God? Do the church services seem stale or full of exquisite flavor? Do you delight in speaking of Christ and for Him, or do you find yourself weak and trembling? No digestion without appetite and no growth but by good digestion. If your piety is consumptive or dyspeptic, better go to the Great Physician at once. There is a sure cure.

Our Special Blessings.

As a nation we have special reasons for thankfulness to God at this time. During the past year we have seen an army created, a navy equipped, a war prosecuted to successful end and political changes of great magnitude concluded to our advantage. A year ago the most sanguine prophet could not have predicted the wonderful events of Manila, Cuba and Porto Rico. For the success of our arms by sea and land we owe praise to Almighty God. For the bounteous harvests, producing wealth beyond that of mines of gems and gold, for business prosperity and employment for the working people we owe thanks to the Lord.

Beyond all these material benefits is the sure indication of the dawning of a better era of soul life. The peace proposition of the czar of Russia is a token of advancing Christianity. The very troubles in China are an augury of better civilization coming up the centuries.

The raising of the missionary debt gives promise of better things in the church. Prosperity should be celebrated in greatly increased liberality as well as in songs and sermons. "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

The Lord Needeth Thee.

Jesus, Thou needest me,
Even me, Thou Light divine!
O Son of God, Thou needest me—
Thou needest sins like mine!

Thy fullness needs my want,
Thy wealth my poverty;
Thy healing skill my sickness needs,
Thy joy my misery.

Thy strength my weakness needs,
Thy grace my worthlessness;
Thy greatness needs a worm like me
To cherish and to bless.

Thy fullness, Son of God,
Thus needy maketh Thee!
Thy glory, O Thou Blessed One,
Seeketh its rest in me!

It was Thy need of me
That brought Thee from above;
It is my need of Thee, O Lord,
That draws me to Thy love!

CHAPTER IX.

Desmoulins stood against a marble pillar, chatting with a knot of cronies. De Lacaze, his dyed mustache bitten nervously between his yellow teeth, gazed piercingly about him in search of Priscilla. She came, finally, down the corridor, crowded with that portion of the audience which, Paris fashion, deserts the loges between the acts to imbibe fresh air while exchanging stale platitudes. She was on Stormouth's arm. She looked like a white rose in the midst of a hothouse of forced flowers, sun kissed, instead of gaslit, into fairness. Her eager young face, fine and spirited, bore the hint of a womanly self reliance which was like a whiff of something delightfully uncommon to De Lacaze's jaded epicureanism.

Desmoulins held forth, oracleswise, to a man on his right, who was dubbed ironically by his confreres the "patented moralist of France." Cavally had convictions and held to them. In this instance he had barefacedly opposed Desmoulins' criticism and declared that the debutante had won "hands down."

"She will have a big fight, that young one," he asserted, with a worldwise wag of his head. "She has voice, talent, beauty and intelligence. Her comrades will damn her future if she does not frustrate their diabolical intrigues with consummate tact. She is too near perfection to attain popularity except among the just, and the just are in the minority here," he added under his breath, with a refractory lift of his brows.

"Absurd!" ejaculated Desmoulins. "Notoriety is not attained so easily this side of the water. They come, these young novices, and dare to try and take us old dogs by storm. She is neither a skirt dancer nor a ropewalker. More's the pity! She poses as an artist. She has much to learn. The third and fourth acts will determine her fate. If I am not mistaken, she lacks sustaining power and temperament."

Temperament in foreign translation is that element which a pure American woman is brought up to ignore and which histrionically inclined Frenchwomen are exhaustively counseled to cultivate. It is what the sun is to the sky, what the heat is to summer, what the blue is to the sea. It is the body of any achievement. It ranks its owner as a woman who has "lived" materially. Without this hint of temperament, which obviously is portrayed in greater perfection if emulated from the standpoint of personal experience than through any copy, no matter how arduous its reality, an actress is contemptuously alluded to as an "ignoramus," and laughed at for being a weak interpreter instead of exemplifying the epitome of vital delineation. Playing at love, as in Constance's case, rings false on French ears. The critics forgot that Juliet was 14, her materialism therefore in its baldest infancy. They remembered only a once great artist, long since dead, who sang the role to their complete satisfaction because she sang it from a standpoint of many sided temperament, an obvious outgrowth of her own erotic experience.

The critics called Constance "icy," therefore, and "characterless," and yawned out a protest at her evident "unfamiliarity with the boards," totally indifferent as to whether this were her first appearance upon the French stage or not. Had they been asked to consider her tenderly, they would have answered that the debutante had not considered them in her exhibition of imperfection. Yes, the voice was good; small, but sweet. But the girl lacked experience. One could see that she was "raw and colorless"—this, after repeated nudges from Desmoulins, and frowns, fierce and undeniably contradictory, from De Lacaze.

De Lacaze, out of the depths of his own talent for using his friends to make the biggest moves on the world's chessboard, so that he might retire unsuspected of collusion from behind a possibly brought to light intrigue, had discerned, with acute apprehension, the policy Desmoulins proposed to pursue. It was to be a case of blackmail. De Lacaze knew blackmailing methods root and branch. He had pursued them for years with recognized proficiency. Desmoulins was to constitute himself the go between, in journalistic influence, which would determine Constance's future, by substituting a flank movement where Constance's friends were concerned. In this manner he proposed to trip up his adversary if he were caught endeavoring to make off with the whole of the spoils and demand remuneration of his victim for having governed the verdict. He was holding back the tide now, the tide which had turned in favor of the new debutante, whose lucky star had set fair did Desmoulins not turn it in its course.

He seemed an important personage enough, with his broad shoulders, which stood full two inches above most of the men who surrounded him. It was evident Desmoulins could control by sheer cupidity what mere integrity would have no power to accomplish. He made such flashing promises, he exuded good humor and prosperity and the odor of fine wine and the best cigars. His was the success of one of the few who succeed. Nothing is more intoxicating to the unwary and timid. Desmoulins was a born leader. De Lacaze felt suddenly stung into unwilling acknowledgment of his manager's proficiency, as though a poisonous gnat were buzzing in his ears and confusing his heretofore considered cool judgment.

It was to be a case of blackmail.

He approached Priscilla. She was chatting brightly with her aunt and Stormouth. As the count neared her she colored perceptibly and stepped forward lightly.

"You are late," she said reproachfully. "Why did you not come to our loge, as I asked you?"

"Mademoiselle was occupied," returned the count discreetly, with a low bow to Aunt Mildred and a lower one to Stormouth, who returned it frigidly. "Mademoiselle has the air of a young queen. And what a success that of Mlle. Brilia! But a few hours and she will be famous. Ah, you Americans, you beautiful Americans, with your wonderful talents and great courage, you rule the world!"

Priscilla had taken his arm and was strolling with him a little ahead of the others.

"I have not spoken with M. Desmoulins," she said, interrupting the count's flow of compliments serenely. She had grown accustomed to them in the past few months, and they no longer annoyed her as they used to. "I would like to speak with him. Perhaps I could influence him in regard to Constance. He is very powerful, is he not? He can decide Constance's fate, can't he?"

De Lacaze nodded his head without responding. "And mine," he thought dismally.

"Will you tell him I wish to speak with him?" continued Priscilla.

"Come with me," said her companion. "Mon ami will be flattered if you consult him before his friends."

As they approached the little circle fell back and fixed its gaze upon Priscilla. She walked up to Desmoulins and gave him her hand. "Good evening, monsieur!" she said in her fresh, ringing voice. "I have come to ask you and your friends to say a good word for Mlle. Brilia."

"Your word is a command, mademoiselle."

"Her success is assured, is it not?"

"That," replied Desmoulins, with a subtle smile out of one corner of his handsome eyes, "can never be foretold. It depends."

"Upon what?"

"Mademoiselle," began Desmoulins, with a cynical smile about his lips, "we can all succeed if we pay the price."

"I do not understand you," said Priscilla.

"Mademoiselle is too clever to misunderstand me. Miss Brilia is poor. If Miss Brilia controlled a purse of gold, Miss Brilia might add to her chances—mind you, I say only 'chances'—of success did she disburse that gold."

"Do you mean to insinuate," cried Priscilla, drawing up her slight young figure indignantly, "that criticism is a matter of dollars and cents?"

"That is putting it roughly." Desmoulins smiled, with a swiftly dissimulated scowl, speaking almost under his breath. "Turn the phrase more pleasantly, if I may be so bold as to ask it. Your nation has a straightforward way of speaking which is a trifle—confusing. Can you steal pictures, mademoiselle? Can you steal law? Can you steal medicine? Why, then, should you steal criticism?"

Priscilla hesitated an instant. Then she asserted firmly, "There is such a thing as principle, monsieur."

Desmoulins made a wry face and raised his handsome brows.

"There is such a thing as conviction. I have read of men who starved on a crust rather than renounce one tittle of what they believed."

"Critics are not of that order, mademoiselle."

"When they are not, what they say should be considered of no value," returned Priscilla hotly.

"Softly, softly, mademoiselle. What they say is of vast importance. The way they say it is of no account. Miss Brilia has won her instruction. Why has it never occurred to her to win her possible detractors?"

"But say she has no money?"

"That is her misfortune, not ours. I have no doubt we might, in time, instruct your friend in the methods to pursue as regards the career concerning which she is so obviously ignorant. She could entertain her friends at supper. She could offer them from time to time a seat at her performances. She could recommend them as superlatively capable in their profession. She could do much—I speak disinterestedly; what I say for Miss Brilia is an evidence of true friendship—which I have no time to explain here."

"Thank you," said Priscilla artlessly. "I thank you, M. Desmoulins. I felt you were honest." Her little fingers slid into Desmoulins' astonished grasp.

Desmoulins inclined himself a trifle fantastically. Then, with a perceptible increase of color in his enigmatical countenance, he remarked: "I have just been saying to my confreres," denoting those gentlemen with a wave of his hand—they had been intent listeners to the above farce, and some of them were still smiling broadly, albeit deprecatingly—"I have just been saying that the next two acts will determine Miss Brilia's fate. Sustained power is what is most requisite in a singer. I fancy your friend is devoid of that."

"On the contrary," cried Priscilla, tapping her foot on the tessellated floor impatiently, "she has more sustained power than any woman I ever knew."

"My niece," interrupted Aunt Mildred's quiet voice in English, "is a warm advocate of her comrades, M. Desmoulins. It is our new world custom to fight our friends' battles."

"Admirable!" returned Desmoulins in the same language. He was noted for his bilingual capacity. He inflated his chest and smiled with gratified pride at being surrounded by so well dressed a party. For the past few moments the little knot had been the observed of all observers who passed to and fro. "Admirable! Your country is indeed a wonderful one, madame."

Aunt Mildred shrugged her shoulders and turned to Stormouth. "As if it needed that oily specimen of the Latin race to confirm it," she whispered very low.

Stormouth did not reply. He was biding his time. There was a gigantic protest surging like burning lava through his veins. It took all his strength to choke it down.

"Aunt Mildred," whispered Priscilla, "I wish you to invite all these gentlemen"—with a little sweep of her arm which included the count, Desmoulins and six or eight journalists—"home to supper."

There was a sudden ungovernable movement on Stormouth's part, which vanished as soon as it made itself evident. He folded his arms stolidly and appeared to be watching a woman with dyed hair and a magnificent tiara who stood on the first landing of the great marble staircase.

"Because," Priscilla whispered, "it is the thing to do for Constance. It will put them all in good humor, and they will say nice things of her in the newspapers."

"You don't say so!" cried Aunt Mildred. "Well, I never! Now, how in the name of heaven, Priscilla, did you find that out?"

"Somebody told me," whispered Priscilla mysteriously. Then, with a rosy warm arm thrown suddenly about Aunt Mildred's neck: "Come, do, like a dear, for my sake. Will you?"

"What do you think of it, Mr. Stormouth?" Aunt Mildred questioned cautiously.

"Miss Priscilla," answered Stormouth, with his staring eyes indifferently fixed upon the ceiling, considering the far famed frescoes which had made their illustrious lodging there, "Miss Priscilla evidently knows what she is talking about." With this tactful evasion of the main issue he brought his gaze down from the ceiling and directed it, strained and pertinent, at De Lacaze.

That gentleman was smiling a trifle ironically at the turn affairs had taken. He was inwardly convulsed at Desmoulins' audacity. He considered his manager was to be wined and suppered at his—the count's—expense. He was conscious more than ever that he was in the toils of a master spirit. His little romance was working out into a gorgeous work of art indeed under the hands of a professional adventurer.

"I will leave you with Mr. Doxie for ten minutes, then," said Aunt Mildred, with her usual bustling air when any entertainment of her own instigation was under way, "while I indite a telegram to send home. Gentlemen," she added, turning to Desmoulins and his party, "it will give me great pleasure if you will sup with us after the opera at 53 Avenue Montaigne, to meet Miss Brilia."

Desmoulins interpreted her remark in French to his comrades, who bowed low in response and signified in the same language their satisfaction at being thus honored.

"Might I suggest," remarked Desmoulins coolly, "that madame invite my friend the Duc de la Tour d'Auvergne also? He is a great power and a charming man."

The count gasped.

"By all means," returned Aunt Mildred cheerily.

The count mopped his brow.

"That will make—let me see," counted Aunt Mildred, "one, two, 20 of us, counting Miss Brilia and the duke."

"Precisely."

"Thank you, M. Desmoulins."

"It is for me to thank madame," Desmoulins smiled, with a grave inclination.

"Farceur," muttered the count under his breath explosively.

Desmoulins gave him a warning if triumphant glance. The count smothered his indignation as best he could.

"Come and tell me," urged Priscilla to Doxie, "what made it occur to Mr. Stormouth to cross with you? He has told me so much of many of his friends. He never mentioned your name."

Doxie blushed awkwardly. "It is a long story, Miss Delno," he said, "and I haven't the gift of speech. All I know is that Mr. Stormouth is a man in a thousand—one of nature's noblemen. If he ever desires a return in any degree in compound interest for his disinterestedness, he has only to call upon Stephen Doxie."

"I don't consider him 'perfect' by any means," remarked Priscilla mutinously. They had strolled into the foyer and were seated on a velvet bench under a huge mirror, watching the crowd. "It is singular to me that I never meet any one who does not go off into ecstasies over Mr. Stormouth's perfections. Aunt Mildred, for instance"— She checked herself suddenly and bit her lip.

Doxie did not answer. He had mastered Stormouth's secret from a look he had seen in his face. He regretted that Miss Delno appeared so indifferent to it.

"Were you ever in love?" asked Priscilla suddenly, apropos of nothing whatsoever as far as Doxie could perceive.

"Once," he answered.

"Did you love her very much?"

"Better than life."

"How did you feel?" Priscilla demanded. Then, as Doxie hesitated, visibly disconcerted at her inquisitiveness, she leaned forward and pressed her little gloved hand lightly on his. "The reason I wish to know is," she explained lucidly, "because I wish to know. That is all."

"That is a very good reason. But why do you wish to know?" Doxie was quite unconscious of having administered a counter thrust until he all at once was vividly made aware of it through the sudden brilliant carmine which overspread Priscilla's cheeks.

"That's telling," said she, lifting her hand and pretending to arrange a soft tendril of hair which had fallen along her cheek like an itinerant moon ray across pink velvet.

"You don't feel," explained Doxie hoarsely after a few moments' pregnant pause, "you know."

"How do you know?"

"It fills you up," said he.

"Are you happy?"

"Happy and miserable."

"Are you glad?"

"You can't tell."

"Does your heart beat?"

"What nonsense!" laughed Doxie. "One's heart always beats."

"I have had times in my life," Priscilla confessed, with a faraway gaze in her translucent eyes, "I have had days when at the coming of one person—perhaps the person I love—my heart has beat so I could scarcely breathe. My hands have grown cold—so cold—and

"It is a long story, Miss Delno," he said. my throat so dry, and when he came I could say nothing, and when he went I have spent whole nights thinking over what I might have said and didn't."

"That's it," cried Doxie.

"What?"

"Love," explained Doxie briefly.

"But do you call that happiness?" asked Priscilla indignantly. "I think it is so unpleasant."

"It is unpleasant if the one you love does not love you. Not otherwise."

Priscilla flushed even more vividly. Then she glanced about her hurriedly and seemed to dismiss this entrancing subject with a supreme effort of the will.

"I want you to know," she said, "my friend Constance Brilia. I think she is just the sort of woman a man like you would love. She is so brave and so quiet, the little thing. She is just my opposite. She does not fly into passions over nothing. She does not dream of great things and fail at them. She sets her teeth and arrives."

"Have you failed at anything?"

Priscilla's eyes filled with tears. She bit her lip.

"Yes," she confessed reluctantly. "I have failed at two things since I have been over here, but I do not propose to tell you as yet what they are. You will probably see for yourself some day."

"We all fail some time or other," said Doxie comfortingly. "Often what we consider a failure turns into a blessing in disguise."

"Yes? But I like blessings that are not disguised," she answered dolefully. Then: "There goes the bell for the third act. Let us go back to the loge. There are Aunt Mildred and Mr. Stormouth. What did you order?" she shouted as they came within hailing distance. "Oysters?"

"No," returned Aunt Mildred. "Lobster salad, cold partridge and champagne."

"Did you hear that?" whispered Desmoulins in De Lacaze's ear. "She is going to kill the fatted calf." He laughed.

"The fatted calf," repeated De Lacaze fiercely to himself. "The scented fox, you mean. Saperlotte! Desmoulins, mon vieux, you have shown your fangs too soon."

A NEW KIND OF SYRUP.

A Reminder of When Prohibition First Struck the Country.

A good story is told of a Kansas farmer who entered a general store in Emporia, Kan., and inquired for "somethin' nice to put on griddle cakes."

"Molasses?' said the storekeeper.

"Naw, somethin' nicer. Be'n eatin' molasses for twenty years. Ain't ye got somethin' slicker?"

The grocer told him about maple syrup and praised it highly. All the "toney people" of Emporia used it, he said.

"That's what I want. The high-tonedest you've got."

By a strange mishap when the boy went to pack the goods for the socially ambitious farmer he took a tin of varnish, the varnish coming in square cans of a kind similar to those containing the maple sap. Three or four months afterward the man came back to town and reported at the store. The storekeeper, having made the discovery of the error, was in a panic. At length he mustered up courage to ask how the maple syrup had answered.

"Oh, she was all right," said the customer. "Kinder highfalutin, but good. My wife at first said she thought it was some rancid, but when I told her what you said about it bein' a hightoned dish that the best people in Empory jes' nacherally craved she seemed to take a second holt, and now she won't eat nothin' else. I thought there was a kind of a snap an' bite to it that sorter reminded me o' what we used to git when prohibition first struck the country, but in gineral it's mighty good stuff."

"Was there any bad effect at all?" inquired the amazed storekeeper.

"Well, now, I can't say there wasn't. You see, it was my wife's first experience with dude grub, an' she kinder lost her head. Got ambitious. Allowed that if we was good enough to have that kind of eatin' we was good enough to have some other things to match. Bought a lot o' new chiny dishes from a peddler an' made me promise I'd get her a new hat with red in it an' a dress this trip in town. Yes, I s'pose you might say that they was some bad effects, because vanity is certainly sinful, but you're a married man yourself, an' you know they ain't no way to stop a woman's ambitions when she begins to kinder get in society. Gimme a couple gallons more o' that syrup, an' if you have some that has jes' a little more o' that pleasant bitin' sting to it, why, let's have that."—Chicago Record.

F. O. Ball, captain of the Park Club team, has improved his average and stands well up in the lead in the contest for the highest average score.

Next week Friday evening the T. A. B. bowling team from Elizabethport, will come to Plainfield and bowl a game with the team from the Plainfield Catholic Club.

William J. B. Thiers quite distinguished himself at Cranford Monday evening when he went there on the Park Club team. It was the second series in which he has taken part and he rolled like a veteran.

Westfield's downfall Tuesday evening on her own alleys was a general surprise. After the showing of her team in recent matches it was expected that she would defeat the New Jersey Athletic Club in all three games or at least two. As it was, Westfield only managed to win one. Her players did meet with exceptionally hard luck, however. Eight splits is really more than one man's share for a game but that was what Baker had in the second game. The Westfield players are rather downhearted over the defeat as it spoiled their chances for second place. With the Parks the result was satisfactory, as it put one of the Parks' strongest rivals out of the race for a time.

VARICUS SPORTS.

The single stick drill was first tried in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Tuesday evening at the regular meeting of the evening class. The announcement that it was to be held brought out the largest attendance, thirty-three, yet on record at a meeting of the evening class.

The fourth section of the indoor athletic contest at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium will be held tomorrow evening. The events to be contested are the fence vault and the potato race. The latter, in particular, promises to be exciting. The record in the fence vault is expected to go down before the efforts of Berry Egan and Raymond Carroll.

$6,000 FOR THE LOSS OF AN EYE.

Miss Bardzik Was Injured in an Electric Lamp Factory Where She Worked.

(Special to The Daily Press.

New Brunswick, Jan. 20.—Miss Mary Bardzik recovered a verdict Wednesday for $6,000 for the loss of an eye. She sued for $10,000. The defendant was the Beacon Lamp Company, of this city. Miss Bardzik worked for the company, and it was her duty to seal electric lamp bulbs. The day of the accident at the factory she handled a 100-candlelight globe, six inches in diameter, and had prepared it to have the air exhausted. The globe was then taken to another room, where it was tested. In doing this the globe was filled with gasoline vapor. Then the globe was sent back. Ignorant of what had been done to the globe, Miss Bardzik applied fire to it to seal it. An explosion followed, which knocked her senseless and sent pieces of glass into her eyes and face and destroyed the sight of one eye.

INVESTIGATING THE WRECK.

Prosecutor Voorhees and County Physician Long Commence Their Task.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, January 20th—Prosecutor John S. Voorhees and County Physician Samuel Long commenced conducting the investigation into the Lehigh Valley wreck at West Dunellen in New York yesterday afternoon. They left this city on the 12:18 train for that purpose.

The prosecutor or county physician would not disclose where the investigation would be conducted, as they wanted to avoid being hounded, as the county physician expressed himself, by the New York reporters. It is probably being held at the general office of the company in the Havemeyer building. The train despatchers at Easton and the tower operators at Bound Brook have been subpœnaed and the orders received by the two engineers directed produced. The prosecutor thinks the placing of the responsibility will be a simple matter.

Gus Smith Honored.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Paterson, Jan. 20—The semi-annual meeting of the State Grocers' Protective Association closed with a banquet. The following officers were elected to serve during the coming year: President, William H. Everett, of Newark; first vice-president, Jas. A. Smith, of Plainfield; second vice-president, John Lowe, of Trenton; secretary, John C. Hendrie, of this city, and treasurer, P. S. Atkinson, of New Brunswick.

—As soon as the weather permits the work of laying stone walks on West Third street will be started.

—C. E. Hepburn, the druggist, will open his new store, corner of Park avenue and Second street, this week.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver, of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongued coated, pain continually in the back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters;' and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50cts., guaranteed, at L. W. Randolph's Drug Store.

CROW SLIGHTLY IMPROVED.

No New Developments Reported in the Case as Yet.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, Jan. 20—No new developments have appeared today in the sensational burglary of the office of the Somerville Beef Company early yesterday morning. Manning Crow, the policeman, who was shot by the burglars as they made their escape, is slightly improved, but he is still in a very precarious condition.

County Prosecutor N. Y. Dungan is working on the case and making every effort to run down the men who entered the place and shot the policeman. There are practically no clues to work on, so the discovery and conviction of the burglars will give the county authorities the hardest puzzle to solve for many years.

Citizens Will Pay for Welcome.

(Special to The Daily Press)

Elizabeth, Jan. 20—The appropriation of money from the city funds for the purpose of welcoming home the men of companies of the Third regiment on their return from service is found to be illegal. WORK OF Y M C. A.

The educational department has conducted as usual; evening classes for men were held in the following studies: Mechanical drawing, mathematics, bookkeeping, Spanish, German and stenography. Average enrollment for year, 54; average attendance at all classes, 43, which is considerably less than the average for previous year.

The work in the physical department has been well maintained, and is accomplishing good results. We do not seek to produce athletes, nor is the distinguishing feature of this department basket ball as some may suppose; we rather aim to build up the body, as we strive in other ways to minister to the soul and mind, combining scientific and healthful exercise with pleasant recreation, and for accomplishing this purpose our physical director, Mr. Heywood, is abundantly qualified. The average attendance of the different classes has been as follows: Evening class, 18; business men's, 8; youths' 9; boys', 33; a leader's class has also been held with 30 sessions, and the average attendance at basket ball has been 15. During the year Mr. Heywood has made 89 physical examinations; two of the city physicians have sent men to the building for physical treatment, and candidates for the city police force have been examined in the gymnasium by Dr. Carman.

Our membership, which is now 366, including Juniors, might be increased, taking into consideration its ratio to the population of Plainfield and the borough, and more persistent effort should be made to raise it to the proper numerical standard.

The treasurer's report shows receipts of $7,235.33 and disbursements of $7,089.81, and contains a detailed account of the financial operations for 1898.

Our indefatigable secretary, Mr. Manning, and his assistant, Mr. Davis, have been actively engaged in supervising all branches of our work, and in carrying out its various details.

VISITING ARCANUMITES.

Greenbrook Council Received a Call From Grand Council Officers.

Last evening the members of Greenbrook Council, No. 1725, Royal Arcanum, enjoyed an annual visitation from the Grand Council officers. There was also a large delegation from Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, and a delegation from the Fanwood Council. A sociable time was enjoyed during the evening, during which all enjoyed a smoker. The home council received ten applications for membership and action will be taken at the next meeting. The Grand officers present included Grand Vice-Regent L. A. Lightfoot, of Westfield; Supervising Deputy Grand Regent Samuel Drummond, of Bound Brook; Grand Orator James Rodgers, of Cranford; Grand Orator James Rodgers, of Cranford; Grand Warden Collins, of Fanwood, and Grand Trustee J. Farrell, of Passaic.

In the good of the order speeches were made by the visiting officers and members, as well as by officers of Greenbrook Council, and a collation was served before the event came to a close.

The Daily Press Thanked.

At the meeting of the Queen Esther Band of Grace M. E. church held Wednesday, it was moved and seconded that a vote of thanks be extended to the Plainfield Daily Press for so kindly noticing the musical and bazaar, held by that society, on the evenings of December 15th and 16th, 1898. Mabel Stevens, Secretary.

OVERCOME BY FUMES FROM BURNING COAL.

Kelms' Narrowly Missed Death by Asphyxiation.

THE MOTHER SAVED THEM.

ALL WERE UNCONSCIOUS WHEN SHE STAGGERED AWAY FOR AID.

The House Was Closed Tightly and The Damper in the Stove Pipe Shut—Two Children Fell to the Floor Overcome by the Gas—Wonderful Escape of Mrs. Kelm—All Will Recover.

The noxious fumes from a huge coal-stove nearly asphyxiated the entire family of Henry Kelm, a hard working German farmer living near Union Village, yesterday morning. Father, son and three daughters had lost consciousness when the mother gathered sufficient strength to reach the door, admit the fresh air and totter to the home of their nearest neighbors for assistance.

The Kelms live in a little story and a half frame house on the Dugway road, near Union Village. The family consists of Mr. and Kelm, Hugo, twenty years old; Emma, sixteen years old; Julia, fourteen years old, and Mamie, eight. At night they occupy three rooms that open out of the living room, which is heated by a huge coal stove.

It was quite cold Thursday night and so every window and door in the Kelm home was closed tightly to keep out the chilly night air. A generous fire was burning in the big stove. Mrs. Kelm was the last to retire and, as she did so, she closed the damper in the stove-pipe to check the fire.

At 4:30 o'clock yesterday morning Mrs. Kelm was awakened by the cries of her youngest child. The room was filled with suffocating gas. When she reached her child's bed the little girl had lapsed into unconsciousness and could not be aroused. The frantic mother then called the two eldest children. They staggered from their rooms only to fall to the floor in the dining room, overcome by the gas. Her efforts to awaken her daughter, Julia, were without success. Mr. Kelm was still conscious but too weak to move.

Rushing through the poisonous fumes that pervaded the living room, Mrs. Kelm swung open the door and almost fell outside. The pure air revived her somewhat, so that she was able to open several windows. She then hurried to the home of the nearest neighbors and roused them out. They hurried to the Kelm house with restoratives.

All of the family remaining in the house were found unconscious. The husband was the first to recover, but he could do nothing on account of his great weakness. The daughters, Julia and Mamie, were soon restored to consciousness. It was two hours, however, before Emma and Hugo recovered from the effects of breathing the coal gas.

No serious effects are expected now and all the family are on the fair road to recovery, although still weak from the exposure to the poisonous fumes.

NEW LOAN ASSOCIATION OFFICERS.

Mayor Rockfellow Made President of Mutual Association.

The fifth annual meeting of the Plainfield Branch of the State Mutual Building and Loan Association of New Jersey was held last evening in the offices of William A. Woodruff, corner of Park avenue and Front street. There was a good attendance and officers for the ensuing term were elected as follows: President, Geo. W. Rockfellow; vice-president, C. H. Rugg; secretary, E. M. Laing; treasurer, L. S. Pocock; solicitor, W. R. Codington; trustees, Wm. A. Woodruff, A. A. Stryker, T. S. Armstrong, C. B. Clifton. There is yet one vacancy in the board of trustees. A member was elected to the place, but his acceptance has not yet been secured. At present there are between 400 and 500 shares of stock in the hands of the members and there is a notable increase constantly.

LEHIGH MAY BE TAPPED.

PROPOSED NEW STEAM RAILROAD TO SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Representatives of the Enterprise at Work Securing Right of Way—Lehigh Valley is Interested in Its Success.

Though the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company is not showing its hand openly, it is an understood fact that that company is making strenuous efforts to get into Plainfield from their South Plainfield station with a short branch to run between the two places. Several times within the last few years agitation has been current about such an enterprise, but it has generally melted away into nothing until recently. Of late a representative, ostensibly acting for independent capitalists, has been going over the proposed route to see what could be accomplished in the attempt to get a right of way to build the road. It is calculated, however, that this will not be a hard job.

The plan of the proposed branch is to have it leave South Plainfield a short distance east of the depot at that place and run in a northeasterly direction towards this city, striking the course of Cedar brook and following that stream to Park avenue, this city. Part of the proposed route lays through swampy land in the vicinity of South Plainfield, and it is thought the right of way over such a route can be secured for almost nothing. The idea is to have the depot in this city located near Park avenue and Prospect avenue. One of the biggest property owners in that section of the city has been interested in the enterprise and he has promised to aid it all that is possible.

At present there is an agreement between the Central and the Lehigh Valley for the latter road not to come into Plainfield, in return for which the Central gives certain exclusive territory to the Lehigh in Pennsylvania. But that objection will be overcome by making the branch an independent corporation.

ALL IS SATISFACTORY NOW.

Seating Arrangement In Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium Complies With the Law.

At the meeting of the physical work committee of the Y. M. C. A., the following report was accepted and sent to the board of directors:

The report has gone abroad that we have been violating section 42 of the building ordinance of this city. That section reads, in part: "All aisles and passageways in said buildings (referring to buildings of a public character) shall be kept free from campstools, chairs, sofas and other obstructions." The rest of section 42 need not be quoted. The Inspector of Buildings held that by placing chairs in the gallery of our gymnasium for the purpose of seating spectators we were violating the ordinance. At a meeting of the physical work committee, it was ordered that the chairs in the gallery be limited to seventy-two in number and that they be fastened to the floor in groups of five so as to be immovable. This work was done, and December 31st the physical work committee together with Messrs. Ackerman, Murray and Runyon, of the board of directors, met the Inspector of Buildings and examined the new arrangement. All were satisfied with the work, and it was approved by the Inspector.

RECUPERATING HIS HEALTH.

Former Prosecutor Enters Brookside Retreat for His Health.

James Meehan, formerly Prosecutor of Somerset county, who recently received his discharge from Company H, of the Third Regiment, and went to his home in Somerville from Athens, Ga., is an inmate at Dr. Cooley's Brookside retreat in North Plainfield.

Since Mr. Meehan has returned from soldier duty he has been in ill health, and a few days ago it was decided that it would be best for him to live quietly for a few weeks. His friends prevailed upon him to enter the Brookside retreat.

Grand Jury's Labors Finished.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Jan. ,20.—The Union County Grand Jury finished its labors yesterday, and on next Wednesday will present its report to Justice VanSyckel The petit jurors have all been discharged until that date. The number of bills found by the Grand Jury, it is said, is small. David J. Williams, of Rahway, who was arrested there a couple of days ago for insulting women and girls on the street, will be arraigned before Judge Vail to-day for punishment. Williams is ready to plead guilty.

Mr. Johnson, the attentive clerk at the domestic counter in Woodhull & Martin's store, has been transferred to the carpet department down stairs.

JUDGE RUNYON SAYS JUSTICE FOR ALL.

Race Persecution Must Stop at Once.

FINED ONE OFFENDER.

HARMLESS HEBREW PEDDLER SET UPON AND BEATEN.

Alleged That David McLernon, Jr., Was the Offender—Claimed That Hebrew Called Him Names—Special Officer Martin Interferred—Patrolman Flynn Investigated—McLernon Was Fined $6.

City Judge Runyon has declared that there has been a malicious persecution of certain inoffensive characters for reason of their race and religion. He further announced this morning that it was going to be stopped if it took all the power of the Plainfield police force to do it. By way of an example he sentenced David McLernon, Jr., to pay a fine of $6 or go to jail for twelve days for assaulting a Hebrew lad.

Roundsman Flynn says there is too much disorder about the station among some of the hackmen and young men who congregate there. Yesterday a young Hebrew peddler was set upon and beaten in that vicinity and the Roundsman investigated the case.

David McLernon, Jr., was arrested and haled before City Judge Runyon this morning on the charge of roughly handling the peddler. He pleaded not guilty.

The story as told by the city's witness was that McLernon had thrown his glove in the face of the Hebrew. The latter did not see who threw the glove but addressed a remark to who ever it was. McLernon turned on him, it is said, and handled him roughly. Another hackman tried to interfere. Special Officer Edward Martin arrived on the scene in time to prevent any serious injury of the peddler.

McLernon said that someone else had thrown the glove and that he had not struck except in self defence. The Judge didn't put much fairth in his story. He said that it was well known that McLernon "had it in" for Hebrews. The Judge found him guilty and fined.

NEW PIANOS IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Board of Education Wisely Selects the "Fischer" for Use.

Recently two of the finest upright pianos made by the old and reliable firm of Messrs. J. & C. Fischer, were placed in the Washington and Irving Public Schools. These pianos are in every respect the very best made, and the use of such high grade instruments will no doubt greatly increase the appreciation and love of good music among the children.

The Board of Education acted very wisely in selecting Fischer pianos and the town generally is to be congratulated on securing two such splendid instruments. We understand that over 106,000 of these pianos are in use, and the fact is in itself a positive guarantee of their merit. The tone of this instrument is singularly pure and sympathetic, and it possesses great staying in tune power. It lends itself to the varying moods of the performer with a mobility that is positively inspiring. From both a musical and artistic standpoint, the Fischer piano is perfection itself.

CONNETT SET FREE.

City Judge Runyon Decided There Was No Evidence to Convict Him.

City Judge Runyon announced in open court this morning that Harry Connett, also known as Hartpence, was discharged. It will be remembered that Connett was charged by the police with being the man who escaped from the establishment in the Manning flats the night of the police raid. The Judge said that he had investigated the case, interviewed the wife of the prisoner and could not find that he had been implicated in the case. As there was a large doubt in his mind as to the guilt of the prisoner, the only thing was to discharge him.

Connett was not present at court, neither were the officers who made the raid, whose testimony regarding Connett has never been given at a public hearing in the case.

CROW'S VERSION OF THE FIGHT WITH BURGLARS.

INJURED MAN'S STORY OF SHOOTING.

All But One of the Desperadoes Vanished as He Approached—Thinks He Wounded One of Them.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, Jan. 21.—No trace has been discovered of the thieves who robbed the Somerville Beef Company Thursday and shot Policeman Crow and the probabilities are that as they have eluded capture thus far they will not be taken into custody. There is talk of having the authorities offer a reward for the capture of the burglars.

Crow has given his version of the shooting. He said that as he was approaching the office of the Beef Company, one man was going through the window. He says he was not shot while chasing the men afterward, but while the man was still in the office, and the shot fired at him on the street later during the chase was not effective. Crow said one man went inside the office as he approached, but the others vanished. He supposed they had fled, but as he reached the office, a shot was fired from across the street. He returned the fire, and then opened fire at the window. The man in the office got out, and Crow followed him.

The officer says he was fired at by both the men who had been inside and the one who was across the street. He is positive he hit the man who had been in the office, for before the burglar turned to fire on him, he staggered. Crow sticks to the belief that he wounded one of the thieves.

A surprise party was given to Horace Huff, of Codington avenue, last evening, in honor of his birthday. The affair was arranged by his wife and proved a complete surprise. A graphone and games occupied most of the evening. Refreshments were served toward the close. The guests finally departed for their homes at an early hour this morning.

EVENING PLEASANTLY SPENT.

Epworth League Entertained Its Members and Friends Last Night.

The members of the Epworth League of the First M. E. church and their friends gathered in the parlors of Vincent chapel last evening for a literary and social evening. There was a large attendance. The first part of the evening the audience was entertained with an exhibition of shadow pictures, arranged under the direction of Harlan Snodgrass. Then followed "titled cities," in which the names of various cities were represented by a collection of articles placed on exhibition. The guests circulated among them and guessed the names and incidentally became quite social. Refreshments followed.

The affair was arranged through the joint efforts of the literary committee, of which Mrs. Harry Gee is chairman, and the social committee, of which Miss Persis Snodgrass is the chairman.

HACKMEN QUARREL

Judge Runyon Looked Into the Circumstances of the Case.

Roundsman Flynn's resolution that good order must prevail in the vicinity of the North Avenue station resulted in the arrest of James Moore and Cornelius Guinee. Moore was arraigned before City Judge Runyon, yesterday afternoon, while Guinee was unable to leave his home as a result of the fracas. The Judge, on hearing the evidence, decided that Moore was more sinned against than sinning and so discharged him. Guinee was thought to have had sufficient punishment.

The two were fooling, it is alleged, about the station yesterday, and that Guinee then lost his temper and chased the other driver with much vigor. Moore retreated in good orner and with effective use of his fist.

Died After Short Illness.

Mrs. Sarah Davis, of 836 South Second street, aged 29 years, and wife of James Davis, a machinist, died at her home yesterday, after a short illness. The funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, and interment will be in Evergeen cemetery.

CAMPBELL PRESSES TO BE MADE ABROAD.

Company Formed With a Capital of $1,250,000.

H. D. MORRISON PROMOTER.

ONLY MACHINES FOR FOREIGN MARKET TO BE MADE.

It is Not Expected That the New Enterprise Will Work Detrimental to the Interests of Plainfield—Deal Made Through the Energy of Mr. Morrison Who Has Scored a Business Success.

The Condor Agency, of London, Eng., has been purchased by a company of English capitalists, and with it the English patents of the Campbell Printing Press and Manufacturing Company, part of whose output is made at the Potter Press Works, of this city, part at Taunton, Mass., and a part at Scranton, Pa., this being necessary to meet the demand, notwithstanding that an addition was built on the Potter works about two years ago to increase the capacity of the works to one machine a day.

The demand for the machines abroad was made by two young Americans, who engaged in the business under the name of the Condor Agency. They were determined to gain a foothold in the English market for the sale of American machinery generally, and printing machinery in particular. One of the young Americans in the agency referred to is Henry D. Morrison, who until less than a year ago was a Plainfielder.

It was not the first time efforts had been made to convince the English people that American machinery was superior to their own or that of any other country in the world, but until Messrs. Morrison and Stone, as the Condor Agency, engaged in the business, success does not seem to have crowned the repeated efforts.

They, after a hard struggle, finally succeeded in convincing the English not only of the excellence of American machinery generally, but of that made in Plainfield in particular.

The result has been that the Agency built up a fine trade, which increased the demand for Campbell machines to about one machine per week with corresponding benefit to this city, where these machines were made, resulting in leaving a large amount of money here during the past year.

As there were difficulties which could not be overcome in selling machines manufactured 3,000 miles away to compete with machines manufactured on the spot, it became necessary to make some other arrangements. It was at first intended to form a company of the American manufacturers to manufacture for the foreign market in or near London, but some English capitalists made an offer, which was accepted, and organized themselves into a company under the name of The Printing Machinery Company with a capital of $1,250,000, to engage in the manufacture of the Campbell presses and other kindred machines on a large scale. The English company's works will be at Birmingham, Eng., and the main office in London, with branches in the British colonies all over the world, excepting Canada, which will be controlled by the American company.

It is thought that the increased prestige secured for the Campbell machines by this deal will more than offset the difference in the output of machines from this city, which might otherwise be affected.

The machines will contine to be supplied from here pending the erection of the English works referred to, which will not probably be ready to produce machines much inside of a year.

Mr. Morrison, with a part of his share from the sale of the business and patents referred to, purchased a large amount of the stock in the new company, and he and his partner were elected managing directors. They will have their headquarters in London as hitherto.

The many friends of Mr. Morrison in this locality will be pleased to hear of his extraordinary success. It seems to have been continuous from his boyhood, which was also spent here, where he is very popular, as he has been everywhere else.

New Officers Take Their Place.

The Woman's Relief Corps met last evening for the first time since the election of the new officers. There was a good attendance and the meeting was one of interest to all. The new officers assumed their positions in a creditable manner and all business of the evening was tranacted in shot order.

HER AGE WAS A RIPE ONE

DEATH OF MRS. DANIEL MARSHAL IN HER NINETIETH YEAR.

She Survived Husband and all of Her Four Children—Had Lived in Plainfield Since 1849—Funeral to be Held Monday.

After a life of over 89 years, over half of which was spent in this city, Mrs. Phebe P. Marshall, widow of the late Daniel J. Marshall, passed peacefully away last night, and Monday will be laid in the grave beside her husband and the children whom she has long out lived.

Mrs. Marshall was born at Lyons Farms, New Jersey, September 29th, 1810. Her maiden name was Clendenin. Later she moved to New York, and while still quite young married Daniel J. Marshall, who was born in Scotch Plains, in a little yellow house that still stands there on the main street. The couple moved to Plainfield about 1849, and a few years later took up their residence in the old house on Park avenue, where Mrs. Marshall died.

Four children were born to them, Charles, George, Annie and Lot, all of whom died previous to their mother's death. Her last son, Lot, died last June. The only direct desendants who survive her are four grandchildren. Harry Marshall, of this city, Mrs. William Alghen, of Brooklyn, and two others. A sister, Mrs. George Straut, of Chicago, and a brother, Abraham Clendenin, of Ohio, also survive her.

In her day Mrs. Marshall was a great worker in Reform Hall, a temperance organization which does not exist now. The funeral will be held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, from the house. Interment will be in the North Plainfield cemetery.

Mrs. Marshall lived a quiet, peaceful life up to the time of her death. Since old age has overtaken her she had not gone out much except to drive, a recreation she was very fond of. A month ago she had an attack of the grip which brought on bronchial trouble and ended in her death. She died at 10:40, the same hour in which her last son, Lot, passed away in June.

DR. POGSON'S LAST SERMON.

Discourses to Baptists on the Subject of Being Faithful.

Rev. M. H. Pogson delivered his last sermon in the series last night at the Park Avenue Baptist church upon being faithful. "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give ye a crown of life," was the text from which Mr. Pogson spoke. It was a parting sermon, and the talk was a tender one, urging his hearers to faithfulness in every walk of life.

The meeting closed before 9 o'clock so as to enable Mr. Pogson to leave on an early train. Today he goes to Saratoga where he will engage in another series of meetings there. During the two weeks Mr. Pogson has been here, holding evangelistic meetings, he has spoken to large congregations. No definite idea of the result of the work can be known yet. There have been no conversions from the preaching, as far is know, but one or two unconverted persons have shown an interest which is regarded by Rev. J. W. Richardson as likely to bear fruit.

Trolley to Mizzen Peak.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Lincoln, Jan. 21st—Superintendent Rand, of the Brunswick Traction Company, visited Mayor Drake yesterday afternoon and looked over the project of building a trolley road from this place to Mizzen Peak. Mr. Rand seemed to think the project was feasible, and if consummated would prove a great success. Later in the day he visited the Central and the Lehigh officials in New York to see if he could secure their co-operation in making the Peak a summer resort.

Mrs. W. O. Chapman, of Albert street, is suffering with an aggravated attack of the grip.

NO CORONER'S INQUEST INTO LEHIGH WRECK

Middlesex Officials Finish Investigation of the Disaster.

COMPANY IS NOT BLAMED.

BLAME LAYS BETWEEN TRAIN DISPATCHER AND OPERATOR.

County Physician Long and Prosecutor Voorhees Have Looked Into the Matter in a Thorough Manner, But Just What Action is to be Taken Does Not Yet Appear to the Public.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, Jan. 21.—John S. Voorhees, Prosecutor of Middlesex county, announced yesterday that no inquest will be held as to the cause of the fatal wreck on the Lehigh Valley Railroad at West Dunellen, in which seventeen lives were lost. He holds that the railroad company was not criminally responsible for the wreck.

This decision has been arrived at as a result of the personal investigation made by Prosecutor Voorhees and County Physicim Long yesterday. The investigation was held in the New York office of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, at the Havemeyer Building, and was made with the co-operation and assistance of the railroad authorities.

The investigation was for the purpose of determining if an inquest were necessary. Yesterday morning Prosecutor Voorhees stated that while the investigation was not yet complete, it had progressed to such an extent that he was able to state definitely that no inquest would be held, and that the company was not responsible for the wreck.

This is taken to mean that the investigation places the blame for the disaster upon either the train dispatcher at Easton, the telegraph operator at South Plainfield, or the crew of one or the other trains. He would state nothing further, and would not say whether or no the matter would be made the subject of Grand Jury investigation.

CHAS. HAND CALLED AS AN EXPERT

Testifies That Boulevard Commissioners Made Fair Awards.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Jan. 21—The property objectors to the awards of the commissioners on the proposed Westfield avenue boulevard concluded yesterday the presentation of their side of the question to Special Commissioner Herbert Knight, of Newark, who was appointed by Justice VanSyckel to take their testimony.

The county attorney called to the witness stand A. Denman Mulford, a prominent real estate agent, of Elizabeth, and Charles Hand, a contractor and builder, of Plainfield, who testified, sustaining the awards of the commissioners. Mr. Mulford was on the stand three hours and was subjected to a rigid cross-examination by the lawyers for the objecting land owners.

PATIENT'S QUEER STORY.

Robbed Gage's Bank and Tried in Vain to Kill Himself.

Chicago, Jan. 21.--Alfred Jackson, who is lying at the Cook County Hospital with a bullet hole in his head, says he robbed the First National Bank of Chicago of fifteen hundred dollars fifteen years ago, was chased by detectives for fifteen months, gave himself up to Lyman J. Gage when Mr. Gage was president of the bank, was pardoned and afterwards tried seven times to kill himself.

Jackson is fifty years old and his home is in Western Springs. He says that he is a safe builder and that he was employed on the First National Bank safes when that institution moved into its new building in Dearborn street in 1884.

There were twelve new safes in the bank, and according to Jackson money was put into some of them by the bank officials before they were ready for use.

One day, when Jackson was working on the safes, he looked into one of them and seeing several bundles of paper money, took two, containing $1,500. He became afraid of the disgrace of being found out and told Lyman J. Gage all about it. Mr. Gage told him to return the money. This he could not do, as it was all gone.

He told Mr. Gage he ought to send him to the penitentiary, but he refused to do so.

At last, Jackson says, the disgrace weighed on his mind so hard that he made up his mind to commit suicide. First he tried to contract pneumonia. He soaked two sheets in water, wrapped himself up in them, opened his bedroom window and sat there until the sheets froze to his skin. He waited patiently, but failed to get sick.

For his next attempt Jackson says he drank a pint of alcohol and then went out and sat on a snow bank and prayed that he might catch pneumonia or something just as bad. His prayer was not answered, he says.

The third time Jackson says that he mixed a pound of potash in water and drank it. Outside of a mild attack of sore throat he felt no ill effects.

But Jackson did not lose hope. He had heard that people who were nearly starved and who ate heartily died from the eects. Accordingly he went without eating nine days and then sat down to a banquet of fried oysters, Newburgh lobster, dill pickles and ice cream. But the next morning he felt better than ever. The next time he drank eight ounces of horse liniment without any ill effects.

As a last resort, on Christmas day, he fired a bullet into his head. It entered behind his right ear and penetrated the brain slightly. He is getting along nicely.

He appears to be in full possession of his faculties and he has puzzled the hospital surgeons, who declare he is a remarkable case.

Canal Bill Blocks the Treaty.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.--The Nicaraguan canal bill still blocks the way of the peace treaty, and Chairman Davis seems disposed to give the friends of the canal a chance to pass their measure before endeavoring to force the fighting in behalf of the peace treaty.

The opponents of ratification, under the leadership of Senator Gorman, are now holding out the hope that if the Senate shall amend the treaty or pass a joint resolution declaring that the Philippines are not to be held as dependent colonies, the treaty can be ratified promptly.

This proposition has been rejected, and the advocates of ratification will make no concessions or agreements in advance.

Chairman Davis and those who with him are working for ratification are determined that no action shall be taken which will in advance tie the hands of the administration and handicap the president in his policy of dealing with the newly conquered territory.

Otis Suppresses a Newspaper.

Manila, Jan. 21.--The newspaper American has been suppressed by General Otis upon complaint of the German consul, for publishing an article alleging that the German residents of Manila were giving financial assistance to the Filipino cause.

La Independencia, the Filipino organ, says that President McKinley's appointment of a Philippine commission was made only for the purpose of delay until the arrival of reinforcements, when the United States will ratify the American sovereignty over the islands.

London, Jan. 21.--A dispatch from Hong Kong to the Exchange Telegraph Company says that the commander-in-chief of the British China squadron will leave Hong Kong for Manila on January 26.

Gen. Eagan Not on Duty.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.--While at the war department yesterday General Eagan was not on duty nor in charge of the commissary general's office.

The charges formulated by Judge Advocate General Lieber have not been served upon him.

Lieutenant Colonel George B. Davis, who is to be the judge advocate of the court, has arrived from West Point. The charges and specifications were placed in his hands and his examination undoubtedly delays their dispatch to General Eagan.

Guns for Sandy Hook.

Cincinnati, O., Jan. 21.--Four of the new twelve-inch breech loading rifle coast defence mortars which the Niles Tool Works of Hamilton, O., are making for the United States government have been shipped to the government proving grounds, Sandy Hook, N. J. The guns are fourteen feet in length, weigh thirty thousand pounds, and throw a five hundred pound dynamite shell ten miles.

Strike at Colon Continues.

Colon, Colombia, Jan. 21.--The strike of the railroad laborers continues. The crews of arriving steamships are obliged to discharge the cargoes, and business is wholly suspended.

The railroad company is determined to resist the strikers to the last, and soldiers are guarding the piers to prevent the strikers from getting possession of them. The situation is very critical.

MUST PROTECT THE ISLANDS

United States Flag Floats Rightfully Over the Philippines Says Senator Nelson—Redstone Bill Vetoed by the President—Other Proceedings of the Senate.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.--In the Senate yesterday Mr. Caffery, Democrat of Louisiana, offered the following resolution, which, under objection from Mr. Allison, Republican of Iowa, went over until to-day:

Resolved, That the president be requested, if not incompatible with the public interest, to furnish the Senate copies of any communications received by the state department from any representatives or agents of the so-called Philippine republic, and also furnish any information in his possession, or any documents filed before the state department relative to the boundaries of the territories in the Philippine islands, together with the number of inhabitants therein held respectively under the control of the American forces and the authority of the so-called Philippine republic, showing particularly what islands or parts of islands, if any, can in any event be delivered by Spain to the United States.

Mr. Vest's resolution denying the constitutional right of the federal government to acquire territory to be held and governed permanently as colonies, was sthen taken up and Mr. Nelson, Republican of Minnesota, addressed the Senate in opposition to the resolution.

He argued that the right of the United States to acquire territory was no longer an unsettled question. It had been settled by the supreme court and by practice and precedent. The government of the United States had inherent power as full and comprehensive as any other organized government to acquire territory, either by treaty, conquest, purchase or by exploration and discovery, and there was nowhere in any paragraph of the constitution or in any judicial opinion any intimation or suggestion that the right was limited to such territory as might ultimately become states.

"We hold the Philippine islands today," said Mr. Nelson, "practically as we held New Mexico and Upper California, by conquest. That country is as lawfully held by the president as commander-in-chief and our flag floats there just as lawfully as in the state of Illinois. What right have senators to say that we have gone among the Filipinos as a conquering nation? They had been sold by their leaders. They were bound hand and foot. They were still in the shackles of Spanish tyranny when our fleet entered the bay of Manila.

"We came there not as conquerers, not to vanquish them. We came there by their invitation, to help them, and to relieve them from Spanish oppression.

"We are there to give the people of these islands a good and just and fair and free system of government. We cannot do it in a day, but we will do it. We are there, not only to keep them out of the hands of Spain, but we are there to keep them out of the hands of any of the great powers. It is for our interest as a nation that the Philippine islands shall never be the property of any of the great powers. If they can be independent, well and good; and if not, we should protect them and give them the best government that we can possibly give them."

The earlier proceedings in the Senate were routine in nature.

The credentials of Mr. Lodge, Republican of Massachusetts, as senator from March 4 next, were presented and placed on file.

A message was received from the president vetoing a bill for the relief of Albert E. Redstone, a pre-emption claimant on land covered by the Sierra Forest Reservation, one of the reasons given by the president for his veto bein gthat the claim had expired long before the establishment of the reservation.

Senator Nelson on Expansion.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.--In the Senate yesterday Mr. Nelson, Republican of Minnesota, made a speech upon the Vest anti-expansion resolution. His address was a constitutional argument in support of the right of the United States government to acquire and govern foreign territory.

He maintained that the arguments that taxation without representation was tyranny and that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed, were true only in a limited extent.

A majority of our people, he said, were without direct representation. Women, minors and imbeciles were without representation in our government and had to bear their share of taxation. They had in other words, to undergo the burdens of our government without any voice in its control.

THE SAMOAN TROUBLE.

Hopes to Settle the Kingship Dispute—Powers to Hold Conference.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.--The state department is directing all its efforts in the Samoan matter to the use of lawful and regular means to settle the kingship dispute. In fact, it was its insistence upon the compliance of all of the parties to the tripartite treaty with the terms of that document so long as it stood undenounced and unamended that has made its position so strong legally at this juncture.

There is still a lack of official reports upon the details of the events at Apia. A brief statement of these events has reached the department through the United States agent at San Francisco, but so far as can be gathered it is not yet known just why Chief Justice Chambers decided that Mataafa, the German candidate for the succession to the throne of Samoa, was ineligible. It is suspected here that the decision was based on the use of improper influences by outside but interested parties in the election of the king.

That, if established, would be sufficient to disqualify Mataafa under the strict terms of the treaty, which expressly provides for an untrammeled choice by the natives according to their own established customs.

The navy department's orders to the Philadelphia did not go out to Admiral Kautz until yesterday. They were in the shape of instructions to take on a full supply of coal and make ready for a cruise to Samoa.

There was not an explicit order to start, but simply to make ready for the voyage.

If the admiral, as reported in the press dispatches, finds that his ship's bottom is so foul through her cruise in southern waters as to be unfit for the voyage to Samoa, he probably will be authorized to use divers to clean the hull, for the department has decided that the ship should not be sent to the Mare Island navy yard to be fitted out.

It is stated here that it must be presumed that whatever overt action was taken by the German consul in Apia was not with the knowledge or consent of his sovereign, but rather was taken on his own account, and that such action, should it be found to amount to an unjust usurpation of authority under the treaty, will be promptly disavowed by the German government. It is believed that the conference of the three powers will be held at Berlin and at an early date.

The Quay Deadlock.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 21.--Yesterday's ballot for United States senator resulted:

M. S. Quay, Republican, 93; George A. Jenks, Democrat, 69; John Dalzell, Republican, 14; John Stewart, Republican, 9; Charles W. Stone, Republican, 8; George F. Huff, Republican, 5; Alvin Markle, Republican, 1; Galusha A. Grow, Republican, 1; Charles E. Rice, Republican, 1; C. E. Smith, Republican, 1; J. F. Downing, Republican, 1; E. A. Irvin, Republican, 3; Charles Tubbs, Republican, 4. Absent and not voting, 42. Necessary to a choice, 108

The ballot was perfunctory. So many members of the House and Senate had paired and gone home until Monday night, that no effort from any source was made to reach an issue.

There will be a suspension of hostilities until Tuesday's ballot, but there will be no rest for the opposing forces. All their time will be engaged in strengthening their lines for next week's battle.

Late Havana News.

Havana, Jan. 21.--The Spanish Bank of Havana was requested to pay coin for $365,000 of its notes, backed by the government, and refused, saying the Spanish government alone could make this payment.

A legal protest was made against the bank's action.

A $6,000,000 silver guarantee, deposited in this bank, was withdrawn by the government to Spain under the administration of Captain General Blanco.

Mr. Hannis Taylor, the former United States minister at Madrid, has arrived here.

There are 118 sick Spanish soldiers in the Alfonso XII Hospital. Fifteen returned to Spain yesterday.

The Fate of the Paul Jones.

Mobile, Ala., Jan. 2.--Mr. Taggart, and Mr. Jones have practically abandoned hope of ever seeing the party on board the yacht Paul Jones alive. The finding of a telephone by a trapper near the mouth of the Mississippi and the identification of it from a description as a part of the fittings of the yacht, and the finding of two trunks washed ashore, containing clothing belonging to Miss Florence Taggart, have convinced them that the yacht met with disaster.

It is barely possible that the party have survived and are in the Louisiana marshes near Bird island.

The Carter Court Martial.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.--Colonel Thomas F. Barr, deputy judge advocate general, has reported at the war department for duty in connection with the consideration of the long pending case of Captain Oberlin W. Carter, Corps of Engineers, court martialed for irregularities in the government works near Savannah, Ga.

The president recently referred all the papers in the case to Attorney General Griggs for review.

Colonel Barr was judge advocate of the court and thoroughly familiar with the case in all its bearings.

It is generally understood that Captain Carter was convicted of [illegible] and sentenced to dismissal from the army.

Hotel Fire at Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, O., Jan. 21.--The Sherwood House, on the east side of Walnut street, above Sixth street, caught fire yesterday morning. Many of the guests were members of theatrical companies.

The women guests were badly frightened and the men had difficulty in restraining some of them from jumping out of the windows.

The firemen were active in carrying out the women, and most of them were rescued by the stairway, but several were taken down the ladders and by the fire escape.

ONE BLANKET A YEAR.

THE BEAUTIFUL WEAVING OF THE NAVAJO INDIANS.

An Art Which Seems Destined to be Lost, Chiefly Owing to Laziness or the Lack of Desire to Accumulate More Than is Necessary to Live.

The Navajo is the most perfect blanket. Neither Ottoman fingers nor British machines have ever produced its peer, and this matchless weaving is the handiwork, not of some Old World craftsman, not of a trained heir of civilization but of a wild nomad, a dirty foxy, barbarious denizen of a corner of the Great American Desert.

The Navajo Indian of New Mexico and Arizona cannot vie with the modern Turk in rugs, nor with the extinct Yuma in fringes, but when it comes to blankets he can beat the world. Or, rather, he could—for it is nearly a generation since a Navajo blanket of strictly the first-class has been created. Here is a lost art—not because the Navajos no longer know how, but because they will no longer take the trouble. They make thousands of blankets still—thick, coarse, fuzzy things which are the best camping blankets to be had anywhere, and most comfortable robes. But of the superb old ponchos and serapes for chiefs—those iron fabrics woven from vaveta (a Turkish cloth imported specially for them and sold at $6 a pound, unravelled by them, and its thread reincarnated in an infinitely better new body), not one has been woven in twenty years.

The Navajo is a barbarian, to whom enough is an elegant sufficiency. By weaving the cheap and wretched blankets of to-day—wretched, that is, as works of art—he can get all the money he desires. Why, then, toil a twelve-month over a blanket for $500 (which is more coin than he can imagine anyhow) when a week's work will bring $5?

The art of the Navajo blanket is as old as Plymouth Rock—and almost as bigoted. You can tell a genuine just as far as you can see it. It is a curious fact, known to the student that, when left to himself, the Indian never blunders in color. It is only when too long rubbed with our shoddy civilization and poisoned with the ease and cheapness of our accursed aniline dyes that he perpetrates atrocities. His eye for color is elemental and absolutely correct. Red is king—and no bastard magenta, mauve, or lake, but true red. Blue is good, because it stands for the sky, and green, because it is the grass; and yellow for the sun, and white for the clouds and snow—and these are the only colors found in a strictly Navajo blanket. The true old blanket was as perfect in its color scheme as in its weaving—there are those which have for seventy-five years done duty on an adobe floor.

Of course, at all times these gems were comparatively few. Not every Navajo weaver was a master, and not so many could afford a blanket whose thread cost $6 a pound as could stand the natural wool at 30 cents. But what has done most to make the old-time perfect blanket scarce is the fact that it was almost invariably buried with its owner. In the Christian graveyards of the Pueblos, in the barbaric lonely last cuddling places of Navajo Captains, the vast majority of the perfect blankets have gone to the worms. Ponchos not three collections in the world could match to-day have been swathed about the corpse and covered with six feet of earth.—New York Sun.

In the Kitchen.

"Life is such a grind!" sighed the coffee mill to the lamp chimney.

"Oh! I don't know," said the chimney. "Of course, the world is dark and cold at times, but life to me seems bright enough."

"You wouldn't think so," interrupted the match, "if you got your head scratched as I do every day. And, say, you wouldn't amount to much without me, anyway, so put that in your pipe and smoke it."

"You seem to consider yourself a great card," put in the nutmeg pulverizer, "but I am a grater."

And then, shaking the match roughly, the grater added:—"You red headed skeleton! Why, you are nothing but a stick!"

At this juncture the cook came in. The lamp chimney looked at her wickedly, the coffee mill ground its teeth, and the match lit out.—New York Herald.

Nearly Caught.

A builder in a small town was walking down a street in which he was having some buildings erected, when he observed one of the men standing on the scaffolding, with his hands in his pockets, smoking a pipe. He went gently up the ladder, and, stepping in front of him, said:

"Now I've caught you. We'll have no more of this. Here's your four days' pay (it being Friday), and you can consider yourself discharged."

The man pocketed the money and went away rather quickly. Just then the foreman came up, and the builder told him what he had done.

"Why," said the foreman, "that man wasn't working for us; he was only asking for a job."—Tid-Bits.

A Quick Retort.

The marquis del Carpio Viceroy of Naples, was once going into a church at Madrid, and saw a lady entering at the same moment who wore an extremely beautiful diamond on a very ugly hand.

"I should prefer the ring to the hand," said he, with no expectation of being heard; but she immediately touched the collar of his Order, which he was wearing, and said:

"I should prefer the halter to the donkey!"—Answers.

MRS. ROCHEFORT: I was speaking of Ripans Tabules the other day when our maid, who was in the room, said: "I know what those are and I have been after taking them myself and they have done me lots of good." Then she went on to tell us that she used to have 'a horrid burning feeling" in her stomach after eating and some pain, and altogether felt so uncomfortable most of the time that it made it hard for her to do her work. She had heard us speaking of Ripans Tabules some time before and saying how good they were for indigestion and things like that, so she thought she would try them. She had been taking them for a month with so much benefit that now she tells other people about them every chance she gets for she thinks they are "just splendid," and she never has any more of those horrid feelings any more and feels so glad she has found something to help her.

A new style packet containing THE RIPANS TABULES in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at some drug stores—FOR FIVE CENTS. This low-priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (120 tabules) can be had by mail by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (TEN TABULES) will be sent for five cents.

"TOLSTOI'S PETS" COME

2,000 Will Settle in the Canadian Northwest.

SHIP LANDS AT HALIFAX

Doukhobors Hold Service and Shout to God for Safe Arrival from Czar's Domain—Greeted by a Party of Their Representatives in America.

Halifax, N. S., Jan. 21.--The steamship Lake Huron, ith two thousand of the five thousand Russian Quakers, known as Doukhobors, or "Tolstoi's pets," who are emigrating to the Canadian Northwest, arrived in quarantine Thursday evening. The passengers remained on board last night. This morning they will march ashore at Lawlor's island quarantine station and undergo inspection one by one.

This afternoon the steamer will reembark her human freight and proceed to St. John, N. B., where they will land to take the railroad to their future home.

There were ten deaths of infants on the passage from Batoum, Russia. Otherwise the ship and passengers are now and have been throughout remarkably free from contagion of every kind.

The Doukhobors were greeted by a party of their representatives in America, notably Russian Prince Hilkoff and Messrs. Elkinton of Philadelphia and Gildey of Dartmouth, Mass.

Prince Hilkoff said the French government had offered free transportation to the Doukhobors to settle in a French colony. The offer was declined, as the people preferred to settle in Anglo-Saxon dominions, where they would not be subject to conscription.

When the ship came to an anchorage in the spacious waters of Halifax harbor the Doukhobors gazed with interest at their surroundings. They were mainly undemonstrative and stolid in appearance. They seemed comfortable and showed some pleasure at their safe arrival. They wear skin garments and caps.

Mr. Elkinton of Philadelphia and other Quakers who received them wore the broad-brimmed hats peculiar to their sect. They wept with emotion, and as their boat approached the side of the big steamer they called to the people leaning over the rail: "Welcome, Doukhobors!"

At the head of the gangway the scene was affecting. The immigrants recognized Prince Hilkoff and crowded around him, all eager to hear him speak and to kiss him.

The striking feature was the psalm chanting and the solemn services. The chanting began by the passengers themselves as the ship slowly came to anchor. The singing was strong in volume and remarkably plaintive. It was interrupted by the prince's advent on board, and gave place to services, conducted by Elkington, who, with streaming eyes and face raised to the blue sky and outstretched arms, seemed deeply moved.

This service consisted of prayer and supplication. Everybody uncovered, notwithstanding the chilly atmosphere. The singing of the hymn was then resumed. The burden of the chant, as translated from Russian by Prince Hilkoff, was "God is with us. He has brought us through."

Only a short stay on the immigrant steamer was permitted. Certain quarantine officials remained on duty last night.

Few of the Doukhobors can speak English, and a large proportion cannot read or write, owing to the lack of early advantages.

Meat for Philippines Troops.

San Francisco, Jan. 21.--The transports Scandia and Morgan City, which are soon to sail for Manila, will carry a large supply of California meat to feed the soldiers stationed in the Philippine islands.

On the Morgan City four thousand cans of canned meats have been placed, while forty thousand pounds of frozen beef will be put on board the Scandia to-morrow morning.

This is the first shipment of California dressed beef in any considerable quantity sent from here for army rations.

The supply has been carried to the islands from New Zealand, and the bulk of it is still supplied from that source.

The commissary department of this city has been making efforts to bring the trade to this coast.

The Nicaragua Canal.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.--Edwin F. Cragin and Warner Miller were heard yesterday by the committee on commerce of the House.

Mr. Cragin, after explaining the organization of the Grace-Cragin-Eyre syndicate, and its success in securing from Nicaragua a sweeping canal concession at a time when the old concession was about to expire, and the American rights terminated, said in closing:

"We have saved the situation to America, and we have secured a most sweeping and clearly defined contract, as nearly perfect as you can make it This was done with no protest from this government or the government of Nicaragua."

The Hungarian Troubles.

Budapest, Jan. 21.--In the upper house of the Hungarian diet yesterday the motion of Count Szechenyi to present an address to the Emperor Francis Joseph, begging him to exercise his constitutional rights in such a manner as to restore as early as possible the constitutional order, was rejected by a vote of 99 to 69, after the premier, Baron Banffy, had made a speech in opposition to the proposal.

Accident to a Fast Train.

San Antonio, Texas, Jan. 21.--The west bound limited express of the Southern Pacific Railroad ran into an engine near Lacosta, twenty miles west of here, at an early hour yesterday morning.

Alonzo Miller, fireman, of San Antonio, was killed, and Robert Nicholson the engineer, was fatally injured.

None of the passengers sustained any serious injury.

DUN'S WEEKLY REPORT.

Exports Greatly Exceed Imports—Gold Continues to Come In.

New York, Jan. 21.--A new year rarely opens brilliantly. Too many traders have to wait for the demand which in the winter comes slowly. But the industries resist fairly well the tendency to unlimited expansion which some have to meet.

Speculation in products is gaining but little, while in stocks an enormous volume of business results in continually higher prices.

In some branches consumption is running beyond the producing capacity, but in others it is hindered by doubts about the future supplies and prices of materials.

The boot and shoe industry has shipped less in quantity of boots and shoes than in any year of the past four, and new orders are still small. Although leather has yielded a little in some grades, it is yet relatively above the prices asked for boots and shoes, although far below the current prices of hides at Chicago, which have declined only a fraction during the past week.

The woolen manufacture is still waiting, with only a moderate demand for goods as yet. The production is large, and considerably larger than in recent years, but does not nearly approach the capacity of the mills.

The cotton manufacture has a large demand for goods, but raw cotton has so rapidly advanced that possible buyers apprehend a fall, and there is hesitation in the purchase of staples.

Much cotton remains in the fields yet unpicked owing to bad weather, and is deteriorating in quality. The silk manufacture, notwithstanding many threats of interference, and disputes about duties, seems to be making steady progress.

The iron and steel manufacture leads all others in the volume of new business. While production is much the largest ever known, many of the works are withdrawing all quotations or naming prohibitory prices in order to check orders which they cannot fill for months to come, and do not want to accept at current prices.

These conditions favor continuance of the extraordinary foreign trade, which resulted in the greatest balance in favor of this country ever known. January reports thus far indicate a similar excess of exports over imports, and while wheat exports have increased every month since last August, they have been in three weeks 15,078,077 bushels, flour included, from both coasts, against 11,899,952 bushels last year.

Corn exports have been quite up to last year's unprecedented record, amounting to 9,509,899 bushels, against 9,270,189 for three weeks of January last year, although prices have declined about half a cent.

More gold is coming, $2,250,000 at San Francisco and a little direct from Europe for the week, and the debt of other countries to this is rapidly increasing.

Nobody has explained how it is to be settled, and the decline in European bank rates appears to indicate a strong desire to limit the indebtedness.

Failures for two weeks of the year have been $1,623,208, against $4,455,65 last year, $8,407,254 in 1897 and $12,538,617 in 1896.

LEHIGH COAL-MINE TROUBLES.

Operators Using Severe Measures to Check the Disturbances.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Jan. 21.--The measures adopted by the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal Company in regard to the troubles in the lower end of the county since the Lattimer shooting in September, 1897, which culminated on Thursday in decisive action by the company, it is hoped will settle the disturbances.

The trouble has been chiefly at the three big collieries at Audenried and Honey Brook, hardly a month passing in which some of the employes, nearly three thousand in number, did not go on strike, owing to some alleged grievance.

The company was then put to great expense and annoyance.

A few days ago it came to the ears of the officials that there was likely to be trouble at the Honey Brook mine over two carpenters who had a grievance, and a shut down was ordered before the men could get ready to strike.

On Thursday morning a committee of employes representing the United Mine Workers, waited on Superintendent Gomer Jones to learn the intention of the company.

Mr. Jones said that the company was heartily disgusted with the actions of the employes, and had ordered that the works be closed down for an indefinite period.

A further inquiry by the committee elicited the fact that the orders came from New York and that the officials at Audenried had been instructed to notify the railroad officials not to bring any cars to Audenried or the Honey Brook breakers.

A meeting of the United Mine Workers was held Thursday evening, and the situation was discussed in all its phases. A committee had held a conference with the local officials during the afternoon, and an agreement had been reached.

The company agreed to reinstate one of the carpenters who had been discharged and to give the other carpenter work of any kind whenever a position is open.

The men agreed to this, and so informed the officials, and it is believed that the head officials will reconsider the order for an indefinite suspension. The officials say that this is the only way to deal with the men, who, encouraged by their partial success in the Lattimer affair, think they can take any liberties with the company.

Payne is New House Leader.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.--Speaker Reed put an end to the speculation regarding the chairmanship of the ways and means committee yesterday by appointing Mr. Payne, Republican of New York, to the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Dingley.

This carries with it the floor leadership of the majority.

At the same time he filled the vacancies in the minority representation on the ways and means and rules committees caused by the retirement of Mr. McMillin, by appointing Mr. Richardson of Tennessee to both places.

Mr. Crumpacke of Indiana was appointed on the census committee.

MAJOR DALY TESTIFIES

Tells War Commission More About the Beef.

RELATES HIS EXPERIENCE

The Meat Reminded Him of a Chemical He Had Used to Preserve Elk While on a Hunting Expedition—Ingredients Unsafe to Use on Food.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.--Major W. H. Daly, chief surgeon with General Miles, whose report condemning the beef furnished the expeditionary forces created a sensation some weeks ago, appeared before the war investigating commission yesterday.

Surgeon Daly's report was the strongest in language of those submitted by General Miles in substantiation of his attack on the beef supplies. Dr. Daly has been too ill to appear before.

He was accompanied by General Miles's own stenographer, despite the presence of the commission's official stenographer.

On being sworn the witness identified the report as his own, changing the date, however, from September 31 to October 31. He was willing, he said, to stand by his report. It was wholly voluntary and was not called out by any request or in obedience to any circular or letter, so far as he remembered.

He had heard nothing of an official circular calling for reports. At Ponce, however, some time between August 1 and 12, he believed he had communicated to General Miles some observations regarding beef supplies.

At Tampa he had noticed a quarter of beef hanging free in the sun on shipboard and he became interested in seeing how long fresh slaughtered beef could stand such moist climatic conditions.

"I observed," he said, "that the flies, especially the bull flies, did not affect it; did not alight on it, or, if they did, they got away from it very quickly."

He had cut off a piece of the beef and cooked it, but it neither smelled nor tasted naturally. Later he helped the men corral some horses and subsequently he had trouble with his stomach, which he first attributed to the activity of corralling. Then he noticed indications that reminded him of a chemical he had used to preserve elk in a hunting expedition in the Rocky mountains some years before. All that day at Tampa and the next he had an unpleasant taste. In the hunting experience referred to he had analyzed the chemical preservative and found it to contain borax and salicylic acids. These were to be used externally on the elk, but he had rubbed it in the raw flesh and also injected it.

Questioned as to these ingredients, he said borax was not safe to be used in connection with food nor for ordinary medicinal purposes, while the salicylic acid was most nauseous, loathsome and disgusting, almost always destructive of digestion.

To Take Up Army Bill.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.--In the House yesterday Mr. Hull, chairman of the committee on military affairs, who has recovered from his recent illness, asked unanimous consent that the army reorganization bill be taken up next Tuesday, with a provision for fifteen hours' general debate.

He said it was exceedingly important that the country should know what was to be done in the matter of the proposed increase in the army.

Mr. Bailey said he realized that this bill was to be considered, and he was willing to agree if some additional time were allowed for general debate by holding night sessions.

Mr. Hull modified his request to include provision for night sessions on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, and as modified it was agreed to.

The Philippine Cables.

London, Jan. 21.--Inquiries made at the office of the Eastern Cable Company here with reference to the notice sent out in New York by the Commercial Cable Company, saying they had been advised that telegraphic communication with the islands of Panay, Negros and Zebu, Philippine islands, was temporarily interrupted, which aroused some speculation as to the cause, show that the cable stations at Panay, Negros and Zebu have been closed since December 27 for the safety of the employes, owing to the prevailing unsettled conditions.

The officials of the Eastern Cable Company do not know at present whether the Americans or Filipinos are masters of the situation. They add that the stations will remain closed until the situation is more peaceful.

Relief Ordered to Manila.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.--At the request of Surgeon General Sternberg, Secretary Alger has ordered the hospital ship Relief to Manila, to serve there as hospital ship, and also as an ambulance ship for the conveyance of sick and wounded soldiers from Manila to Nagasaki, or even to San Francisco.

The Relief is now at New York and will go by way of the Suez canal.

Surgeon Bradley will go with the ship, and some additional medical officers will be detailed to go out to the Philippines with her.

The Spanish Prisoners.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.--The war department has issued an invitation for bids from responsible shipping concerns of all nations for transportation of the Spanish prisoners in the Philippines from Manila to Spain.

The treaty requires the United States to transport these prisoners home without awaiting ratification of the peace treaty.

Bids will be opened on February 1 in New York and San Francisco.

Don Juan De Austria at Hong-Kong.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.--The Don Juan de Austria, one of the Spanish vessels sunk by Admiral Dewey's squadron, and afterward raised, reached Hong Kong yesterday from Manila.

She will be overhauled at Hong Kong and sent to Manila for service under Admiral Dewey.

Raising Standard of the State Bar.

The subject of elevating the standard of the New Jersey Bar is a live and pressing issue among the leading lawyers of the State. Under the present system of examinations for admission to the Bar many men who are obviously unqualified in both character and talent are admitted. Effective reform is demanded by those both in and out of the profession, and as aiming to show what might be done to elevate the standard of the legal lights the New Jersey Law Journal, of which A. V. D. Honeyman, of this city, is editor, has been publishing a symposium of opinions by leading lawyers of New Jersey. Among the contributions printed on this subject in the last issue of The Journal is one by Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, of this city. Mr. Marsh's leading position and his successful career as a lawyer in the State courts make anything he says in reference to the matter of much interest. Mr. Marsh makes the following sensible comments:

The State has no greater moral right to issue to an incompetent man its license to practice at the bar, than it has to such a man its commission to sit on the bench. The danger from an incompetent counsel is greater than the danger from an incompetent judge, since the action of the latter may generally be reviewed by a higher court, whereas the injury caused by the former is often-times remediless.

If the subject is put in its proper light, the public will see that the proposed legislation is in direct line with the trend of that class of modern legislation universally approved, which, from time to time, subjects to more stringent tests the qualifications of certified accountants, electricians, apothecaries, physicians and surgeons, locomotive engineers, pilots, sea captains and other trained men who are entrusted with power over property or health and life.

A strong public sentiment is needed because, as experience has shown, there will always be found in the Legislature a few men who hope to gain easy admission to the bar, and who will otherwise possess sufficient influence with their legislative colleagues to defeat the most meritorious bill that can be devised.

Congressman Howell, of the Third district, has just underwent an experience which few of his colleagues of the present day and generation can put down in their biographies. Down in Monmouth county he succeeded in having a postoffice created and named "Ely." When he got tired of waiting for applications for appointment as postmaster, he looked around to see who wanted it. Lo and behold, not a man in the community could be found who would serve as postmaster. As a result of this condition of affairs, Uncle Sam's officials at Washington considered that this wasn't a case of "get there Ely" and so they abolished the office.

There can be no complaint lodged this winter to the effect that the Legislature is top-heavy with lawyers, or, in fact, with members of any particular calling, for the Solons represent nearly every walk of life. There are merchants and millers and farmers and grocers and druggists and saloonkeepers. Nineteen of the eighty-one legislators are lawyers by profession, half a dozen are general merchants, three are grocers, two are saloonkeepers, one is a physician, one is a brewer, two are insurance agents, two are manufacturers, and so on down the list.

The announced purpose of Assemblyman Murray to introduce a bill into the Legislature to make voting compulsory has not made an altogether favorable impression throughout the State. Indeed, Mr. Murray's proposition has not even been considered seriously by some of the learned editors and statesmen of the State. However, Mr. Murray is not the man to be deterred by a little ridicule and we suppose that at an early date his bill for compulsory voting will make its appearance.

SAINT ANDREW.

There is rejoicing among the Scots and Russians over the finding of the arm of their patron saint at the ancient city of Cologne. The arm of Saint Andrew, which was credited with miraculous power, was kept in a case in Saint Andrew's church at Cologne. It was lost at the time of the French invasion of the city in 1796.

Having corraled a large-sized quantity of American coin the Standard Oil Company magnates are thirsting for more fields to conquer. To that end it is said that they are trying to control the copper mines of the country. They will organize a corporation, with a capital stock of $1,000,000, under the laws of New Jersey. Unless New Jersey takes some decisive steps towards curbing the formation of trusts she will have some hard things to answer for when the day of reckoning comes.

The immense interests represented in loan associations demand that these popular financial institutions receive some supervision from the State as aiming to prevent trusted officers from wrecking them at great loss to the stockholders, as has been in the case of several. There is no reason why loan associations should not be under the same careful official scrunity that banks are, and the proposed law to that effect is quite the proper thing.

In a Kansas town the other day a young man took out a license to marry a girl of his acquaintance, and not until the fact that the license had been issued appeared in the papers did it occur to him to ask the young woman whether she would have him. She not only refused to marry him but has brought suit to recover heavy damages. The experience of the Kansas youth is not likely to make his style popular in New Jersey.

Henry Allen, of Atchison, Kansas, recently delivered an address to young men, cautioning them against wasting their talents in a rush for political position. It was printed in nearly every paper in the State, followed in a few days by the announcement that Mr. Allen had accepted the position of private secratary to Gov. Stanley.

The movement to celebrate the centennial of the Louisiana purchase by a world's fair at St. Louis has reached the point where an appropriation of $5,000,000 by Congress is called for. That is one-third of the sum President Jefferson paid for the whole territory.

The State Board of Taxation has decided that deer, when held in captivity, are taxable. It is expected that this will result in preventing the fleet-footed animals from becoming household pets.

The ripple of excitment that Senator McDermott was expected to cause in the State Senate has spread out into a good sized wave which is expected to wash Hudson county clear of its bad name.

The burning of another "fireproof" building in New York is conclusive evidence that in some cases there is nothing in a name.

Assemblyman Edward E. Cooper, of Somerset county, is one of the nine members of the Legislature who are agriculturists.

From day to day The Daily Press is proving its promise that it will continue to be the best paper in Plainfield in 1899.

Policeman Crow, of Somerville, may not be a fly cop, but he was shot on the wing just the same.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

The Plainfield Daily Press, with all the other leading papers of the country, favors direct legislation. The Press remarks that "by unanimous vote the Minnesota Senate has declared in favor of the election of United States Senators by the people, which is at ought to be." The scandalous senatorial conflicts now on in several States are additional arguments in favor of the election of U. S. Senators by direct vote of the people.—Bound Brook State Center.

We noticed an item in Newspaperdom, a printer's journal, recently, stating as an important fact that the great State of Illinois had three publishers who had been in continuous service for a third of a century. Little New Jersey can beat that "out of sight." In looking over the list of newspapers we recognize the following, in alphabetical order of the counties, who have passed the third of a century mark in service—some of them by several years: H. D. Winton, Bergen County Democrat, 1860; James D. Flynn, Bordentown Register, 1861; Sinnickson Chew, West Jersey Press, Camden, (date not given); John W. Newlin, 1864; Wm. G. Callis, Hunterdon Republican, 1862; James S. Yard, Monmouth Democrat, 1854; Geo. S. Chiswell, publisher, 1863, George Wurts, editor, 1865, Paterson Press; Robert Gwynne, Sr., Salem Sunbeam, 1849; Louis H. Hyer, Union Democrat, 1865. There are some others who are very near the mark.—Rahway Democrat.

THEATRICAL.

Current Dramatic Attractions That Plainfielders Can Witness.

Lincoln J. Carter's great comedy drama, "The Heart of Chicago," and its famous approaching engine scene, will be the attraction at Music Hall next Tuesday night. The play has been well received in the East during the past season, and comes West with the reputation of having already earned a small fortune for its fortunate owner. In addition to the approaching engine scene, some half a dozen other meritorious mountings are necessary to the play. These are: The Masonic Temple Roof Garden, the monster panoramic view of the South Side at night, the Columbus Fountain, the World's Fair Court of Honor during a night illumination, the typical Chicago street scene, and the fire scene showing a section of of Chicago before, during and after the great fire.

MORE ABOUT A CHURCH DEBT.

Treasurer of First Church of Christ Gives His View of Matters.

Joseph F. Schultheiss, of 106 Manning avenue, North Plainfield, who is associated with the First Church of Christ as a member and also in an official capacity, takes exception to some things published regarding the trial of B. W. Hand against the church. A communication has been received from Mr. Schultheiss as follows:

To the Editor of the Daily Press.—I see some items in your valuable paper that are not so. Let me explain. In the first place B. W. Hand never gave an itemized bill to the trustees or church, neither did he keep an account of money collected from the Ladies' Aid Society, Sunday-school, Christian Endeavor Society, the Young Workers' or the church treasurer, and of all the amounts received from other treasurers he could not tell how much he collected from them or from donations from other persons, and yet he claims he paid $183.82 out of his own pocket for the church debt. This he had no right to do as the church did not ask him to do it, neither can he prove it. In keeping books right it looks queer that a man that collected so much as he did from so many sources can not tell how much he collected or paid out on notes, and then send in a bill for $183.82 that he claims the church owes him, when it never borrowed a cent from him. This is all the itemized bill he claimed as stated above, and it was not itemized as stated in your paper. I wish you would print this in your paper for me as I am a witness in the case and I am not ashamed to tell the truth of the whole matter. What is right and just we want and are going to have it though the world is against us. I can prove the statements and you can print my name at the bottom of this letter in your paper. Give us justice in your paper. Yours truly,

Joseph F. Schultheiss,
105 Manning avenue,
North Plainfield, N. J.

P. S.—I ask you as a Christian man to print this in your paper. These are the trustees that signed that note for Mr. Hand: B. W. Hand, president; E. E. Brown, secretary; J. F. Schultheiss, treasurer; E. Conover, J. J. Ackerman.

The Span of Life.

Statisticians compute that the span of man's life has increased in the last generation from three score and ten to four score years. This is in large part due to the abatement of many diseases in consequence of an enlightened care of the eyes. It may add to your years to have your eyes examined, and it will cost you nothing to have it done at Collier's.

At an early date the Thursday Evening Euchre Club will go to Rahway and be entertained by relatives of Benj. LaVere, who is a member of the club.

Miss Gertrude Tier, of Bank place, entertained a few friends at her home last Thursday evening. The time was passed in playing games and listening to good music.

WHITE'S WHITE SALE

THE WHITE GOODS EVENT OF THE SEASON.

Encouraged by the marked success which has attended our previous Muslin Underwear sales, we have made a large purchase for this occasion. Our orders were placed during the makers' dull season. The work has been most thoroughly done, materials and trimmings are of the best, the fit, finish and size generosity is the same as if the garments were made under your own supervision—by your own home seamstress—and the prices are less than you would pay for bare materials.

NIGHT ROBES.

Every feature of this sale is special, but more special than other features will be the nightgown selling. They are among the best creations of master makers and are daintily trimmed with the prettiest laces, ribbons and embroideries. Prices 25c, 49c, 75c, $1 and $1.25.

WHITE SKIRTS.

Some plain with rows of tucks, some with cambric and embroidery flounces with lace insertions; all cut very full, nothing scant about them but the prices—25c, 35c, 49c, 75c to $1.25.

CORSET COVERS.

Trimmed with embroidery, torchon laces, or clusters of tucks with insertions, perfect fitting, high, square or V shape necks, made of fine cambric. Who would bother to make them when you buy at these prices—15c, 25c, 29c, 39c, 50c

DRAWERS.

Made with yoke bands, deep hamburg embroidery, umbrella, flounces or rows of tucks. As some of the best numbers are somewhat limited as to quantity it is advisable that you be among the early choosers as these lots cannot be duplicated at these prices—17c, 25c, 39c and 50c.

THE WOMAN'S WORLD

TO PREPARE LIME WATER.

Very Easily Made and of Much Use in the Household.

To make it requires simply a teacupful of clean, unslaked lime, such as is used by housebuilders. Put this in two quarts of water, stirring thoroughly, till it looks like milk. Let stand till it becomes quite clear. Pour off the first water, which will contain many impurities, and fill the pitcher with water again, stirring thoroughly as before. Let it stand once more till perfectly clear, tying a piece of muslin over the top of the pitcher to keep out dust and insects. When all the lime has settled, pour off the clear liquid into a stoppered bottle for use, being careful not to disturb the lime at the bottom of the pitcher, and stopping if it becomes the least cloudy.

The first water, which was rejected, is useful for a variety of household purposes, and should be kept in the kitchen. It is useful for rinsing vessels which are liable to become sour or musty, such as milk pans and pitchers, tea and coffee pots, etc.

The uses of lime water as a remedial agency are varied, and may not be appreciated by all. It is of great value in the care of the teeth, being invaluable as a mouth wash to be used after eating, especially when acid fruit or lemonade has been indulged in. A teaspoonful taken in a little water will often relieve indigestion, while that amount added to a tumbler of milk given a child, will help in rendering the milk easily digestible, as it prevents the formation of tough curds. A derangement of the stomach or bowels of children may be counteracted in many cases by repeated doses of the lime water in a little milk or clear water.

Decline of the Side Saddle.

It will probably be attributed to the bicycle that the dreaded reform in horseback riding has at last arrived. Women have taken to riding astride, and this not from any chance impulse of their own, but, say the pioneers in the movement, from the conviction born of experience and the advice of physicians and other health authorities who know whereof they speak. For primarily women have chosen to abandon the side saddle because it is uncomfortable and unsatisfactory, and secondly because it is less healthful than the simple method which men have too long arrogated to their own use.

The garb adopted by the women who ride astride deserves nothing but praise. Its upper part differs in no degree from that of the conventional young woman who is bent on riding a side saddle to the end of her days.

The only deviation which the advanced young woman permits herself is the substitution of bloomers for skirts. The long, draggling, cumbersome riding skirt is put away with a sigh of relief, and the bloomers adopted in its stead are so full that they are really more of a divided skirt. They reach a little below the knee and are met by long, trim riding boots, which complete the costume of this end-of-the-country equestrienne.—New York World.

A Movable Playhouse.

A woman who admits that her inspiration came some time ago from a newspaper paragraph, has a curious but most effective playbox for her baby of 14 months. A common pine kitchen table has been turned upside down, and casters put on the four corners of what was intended to be the top of the table. Two rather broad slats are fastened on between the leg spaces, one above the other, at sufficient intervals to forestall any attempts to climb between them, and the slats and legs are covered with cretonne. An old thick quilt has been cut to fit the floor of this cage, and in it, with his toys, baby spends safely and happily many of his waking hours. To prevent that well-known habit of babies flinging their playthings across the room, the toys are tied to the posts of the cage, and are thus kept for his amusement in his own quarters.—New York Post.

Perfumed Flannels.

Perfumed flannels in dainty colors come now for laying in the bottom of drawers, and are particularly nice in drawers where bedding and table linens are kept. They have the appearance of ordinary flannel, and are sold by the yard and cut to fit the drawers, the edges being buttonholed or bound. The flannel emits a delicate perfume, and will scent every article in a drawer where it is kept. The perfume is said to be far more enduring than any of the satchets commonly in use.

Elastic Corsets to Reduce Flesh.

The newest invention is an elastic corset. A French doctor—and they study these things in France—assures us that the constant contact of elastic has an excellent effect on what is politely called "adipose tissue." It checks its development and reduces it when developed. The elastic further tends to produce a long, slim waist, without in any way hindering an easy respiration and a healthy digestion.—St. James Gazette.

Treatment for Neuralgia.

The following treatment is recommended for neuralgia: Heat a freestone and roll it in a cloth; then wet one side of it, pour over it a teaspoonful of essence of peppermint, lay the face on it, and wrap the head in a flannel.

FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

BLESSED IS THE PEACEMAKER.

Even When He Is Only a Poor "Yaller" Dog.

A yellow dog, one of your plain, ordinary curs, acted the part of a peace maker the other day and brought to an abrupt conclusion a schoolboy's fight, says the Chicago Chronicle.

Two lads attending the Haven School, on Wabash avenue, got into an altercation, and in an incredibly short space of time were pommeling each other in the most approved fashion. It was just at this juncture that the yellow cur appeared. Taking in the situation at a glance, he barked once or twice and in a half dozen bounds came up to the fighting schoolboys. Then he started in to make more fun for the half score of unlookers. First he nipped at the legs of one of the boys and then at the other. It was evident that he did not want to bite hard, for the struggling youngsters did not pay the least attention to his attacks. Suddenly he grabbed the shoe strap of the larger boy's shoe between his teeth and began to pull on it for dear life. The lad reeled and then fell. He had been fairly tripped by the dog.

The other youngster picked up his hat and the fight was over. Seated on his haunches near the curb the yellow dog blinked intelligently at the boys, uttered two or three sharp, joyous yelps and started off toward Fourteenth street wagging his tail.

A Boy's Intrepidity.

At the battle of Copenhagen a lad so distinguished himself as to excite the admiration of the great Nelson. He was a Danish boy, about sixteen years of age, by some called Welmoes, but others have given him a different name. Be that as it may, this young fellow was in command of a praam, a sort of raft armed with small cannon and manned by a company of some twenty-four men. Nelson's flag was flying aboard the Elephant; the heroic young Dane resolved to attack the famous Admiral, whose name was a terror, and he forthwith shoved off in his raft from the shore, and gained the stern of the line-of-battle ship, then thundering in broadsides. The marines of the flag-ship promptly discharged their muskets at the gallant little band, and the praam was rapidly converted into a shambles. Twenty fine fellows lay dead and dying, but their boy commander, who stood up to his waist amongst the bodies, stuck to his post until the truce was proclaimed. Nelson had observed the splendid behavior of this lad. He held him in memory, and when he was banqueted at the palace, he begged the Prince to introduce young Welmoes to him. When the boy was presented, the most famous of all sea chieftains put his arm around his neck and kissed him, and, addressing the Prince, exclaimed that the young fellow deserved to be made an Admiral.

"If, my lord," was the answer, "I were to make all my brave officers admirals, I should have no captains or lieutenants in my service."—Harper's Round Table.

Long-Tailed Hens.

Among domesticated birds the Japanese silver phoenix easily takes the first rank. Although a small bird, not larger than a bantam rooster, the tail feathers, as well as the end feathers of the wings, grow to a length of from eighteen to twenty feet on the male birds. This bird, which in Japan is called Katsuraito-no-Chabo, is domesticated there like any ordinary chicken. The hens are good egg producers and hatchers, but in order to keep them small in size the Japanese will not allow them to hatch until late in the year. The birds are very game and proud, and form the pride of the Japanese poultry-raiser. The longer the tail the more valuable the bird is considered to be.—Philadelphia Press.

She Was Evidently Fond of Pets.

A lady in a California town was brought up in court recently to answer for having too many pets. Her house is not a large one, but it contains one hundred canaries, thirty dogs, six parrots and twenty-five cats, while in the yard which surrounded the house, there roamed one horse, one cow, fifty chickens and as many ducks, fifteen goats and five turkeys. The neighbors declared that dogs howled, cats miauled, canaries sang, and the other animals joined in the chorus, and the concert was in progress at all hours of the day and night.

Perforations for Pain.

Tommy had been suffering from a lame back for a day or two and his mother bought a porous plaster for the same and prepared to adjust it. As the eyes of little Mabel fell upon the punctured square she exclaimed: "Oh, mamma, what are all the holes for?"

"I know," interjected Tommy. "They're for lettin' the pain out."—Richmond Dispatch.

Conundrums.

What is that which every one can divide but no one can see where it is divided?—Water.

What part of a locomotive ought to have the most careful attention?—The tender part.

"Which do you love most your papa or your mamma?"

Little Charlie: "I love papa most."

Charlie's Mother: "Why, Charlie, I thought you loved me most?"

Charlie: "Can't help it, mamma. We men must hold together."

Among the Sioux Indians when one family borrows a cooking utensil from another, a small portion of the food cooked in it will be left in the bottom. Disregard of this usage ends the borrowing subsequently.

A WISE DOG.

Knows the Time of Day and Hustles for His Meals Systematically.

Jack of Cummings's mill is described as a remarkable dog. Cummings's mill is in Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn, and Jack was born there while the saws were buzzing and the big wheels were revolving. He is half mastiff, half water spaniel, and is a very handsome animal. His extraordinary intelligence is displayed in many ways, but its greatest development is manifested in the procuring of three square meals per diem for Jack, except on Sunday, when he is content with two. As Jack is only fourteen months old great things are expected of him in future. He is of no expense whatever to Mr. Cummings, the mill owner. He hustles for himself and does it systematically and successfully. The moment the mill engine begins to whistle at 7 o'clock in the morning Jack gets up, gives himself a shake, emits one short yelp and trots off to the house of Mrs. Moss, who lives three or four doors from the mill. Arrived there, he seats himself and gazes earnestly at the gate as if expecting a coming event. He is seldom disappointed, for usually in less than a minute Mrs. Moss emerges from the rear of the house with a basket of bones, which are soon cracking between Jack's splendid white teeth. If by chance the good woman delays more than two minutes precisely Jack throws his muzzle toward the sky and bowls.

At noon the whistle sounds once more and this time Jack hies him to the house of Mr. Burger, a Grand Army man, but he does not stop outside the gate. He enters and scratches at the back door until duly served with his noontide meal. At six o'clock he sallies forth for the third time and descends to the cellar of Mrs. Norton's house, three blocks away, where he finds a plate of good things prepared for him. More than once a predatory cat has forestalled Jack and cleaned the plate. On such occasions the dog will give two yelps.

And now comes the most extraordinary phase of Jack's intellectual character. The mill whistle does not blow on Sunday, and yet at just 7, as usual, he is in front of Mrs. Moss's gate with the usual expectancy in his eye. Only on Sunday, so it is solemnly declared, he never yelps.

And, again, as it is the war veteran's custom to take only two meals on Sunday, breakfast and a 6 o'clock dinner, Jack never gives him a call on that day, but is on time at Mrs. Norton's at 5 o'clock, when she partakes of her Sunday evening meal, her week day dinner being at 6 p. m.

Now, as Jack does not carry a watch the question naturally arises, how does he know the time, even to the minute? Of course he is aware it is Sunday, seeing that the whistle doesn't blow, also that on the Sabbath Mr. Burger has no meal at noon while Mrs. Norton's dinner is at 5 instead of 6 o'clock, but how does he know that it is 5 o'clock?

THIEF AS THIEF CATCHER.

Offers to Keep Crooks Away in Return for Leniency to His Wife.

Insurance of a distinctly novel character was suggested to State street merchants yesterday. Immunity from thieves who operate in crowded stores was offered to Charles A. Stevens & Bros., in return for leniency to a young woman who was accused of shoplifting.

"Be merciful to the girl I love," dramatically pleaded George Smith to the manager, "and I will guarantee that the crooks of Chicago will give your store a wide berth for one week."

Smith followed this startling proposal with the explanation that he was a notorious pickpocket, was acquainted with every man in the "profession" in Chicago, and volunteered to stand guard at the store entrance for one week during the holiday "harvest" and to intercept every sneak thief or "store worker" who sought admission, if intercession was made in his wife's behalf.

Smith spoke freely of his criminal life to the State street storekeepers, as he appealed for clemency for his wife. He said:

"It's her first offence, and you can save an innocent girl. I am the recognized head of a gang of thieves operating in all the big cities of the country. The life is distasteful to me, but I have tried in vain time and again to get a foothold in a respectable position. My past record pursues me, and I cannot make a satisfactory showing to prospective employers. The other night I attended Booth-Tucker's meeting and his talk on criminal colonization moved me to tears and strengthened my determination to devote myself to an honest life. It's hard to get a start.

"My first offence in crime was as a Chicago newsboy. I lost my week's savings in a game of 'craps.' The boy who won them slept next to me in an alley that night, and I could not resist the temptation to rob him. I went from bad to worse, till I had become a recognized pickpocket expert and a familiar police-court character."—Chicago Record.

CHAPTER X.

The curtain had fallen upon the last act. The applause had been riotous and unstinted—not of the claque species; genuine. Stormouth conducted Doxie behind the scenes and presented him to Constance, who, radiantly happy, beaming with girlish relief, her eyes moist with grateful tears, was surrounded by a crowd of stockholders—men with waxed mustaches and eyes like the congested orbs of vultures. As her gaze felt upon Stormouth she stepped forward with both hands outstretched. He grasped them warmly. "I have seen tonight," he began, a trifle awkwardly, after he had offered his warmest congratulations, "an old friend of yours, who begs a reintroduction."

Contance smiled. "I cannot imagine whom you mean," she said carelessly. She stopped short as her glance fell upon Doxie.

There was a sweet volatile flush which dyed her cheeks an instant; then both little hands outstretched again.

"You—in Paris?" she ejaculated. Stormouth could hear her heart beat through the words, but Doxie took her ease of manner as a sign of indifference. Loverlike, he attached the wrong value to outward appearances.

"I came," he answered quietly, "with Mr. Stormouth. He brought me here tonight." He stopped. His hands were grasping those other dear, longed for ones so fast. He had wholly forgotten that they two were not alone.

But she, womanlike, mindful of curious gazers, withdrew hers with a slight frown which was essentially bewitching, since it belied the act regretfully, and said to Stormouth, "When shall I see you again?"

Stormouth's eyes twinkled.

"We are all going around to supper now," he remarked, looking everywhere except at the two somewhat agitated faces before him, which, quite futilely, were so bravely endeavoring to conceal any evidence of emotion, "at Miss Delno's; you, to meet those 'arrows of outrageous fortune,' the critics—according to Miss Priscilla's idea they must be fed and wined in order to award you your just merits—ourselves, to look on at your triumph and appland grit and pluck after the same honest fashion in which we have been applauding them all the evening. Doxie, will you escort Miss Brandford? I must return and fetch the ladies."

Before Doxie could answer, Stormouth had vanished.

"Come," said Doxie, in a strange, smothered sort of voice. The light and the heat dazzled him. The figures of the coryphees hurrying to and fro past and behind them, in and out of the wings, seemed like so many noisome insects let loose to upset his newly found peace. Was it peace, this hammering, thudding anguish of impatience in his veins?

"I must fetch my wraps and change my dress," said Constance faintly. "Wait for me, will you?"

"I have waited," returned Doxie pertinently. Then, considering that he had made an impression which could not be misunderstood, he seated himself quietly, while Constance went off to change her splendid bridal attire for a little brown homespun which looked to Doxie like something his mother used to wear when he, a lad, ran to her weeping for comfort. In reality the frock in question was the girl's best, a marvelous creation by a little Parisian dressmaker who had worked on it reverently, dreaming of its being worn by a great prima donna of the Opera. But Doxie was a man and a lover.

When they arrived at the Avenue Montaigne, Constance was seized by Aunt Mildred, rapturously embraced and placed in the seat of honor at the table, surrounded by all the best known newspaper men of Paris, eager to exchange a word with the coming spoiled child of the public. Constance was strangely, dreamily content. Her nerves were steadied by that hand clasp of Doxie's. Quite simply, he had held her hand in his while they had driven from the Opera to Miss Delno's, and she had poured out to him a running river of her relief, her past struggles, her life. She had not yet had time to think out the sweet promise of his coming, the sternly controlled look in his glad face, the sense of help and protection the mere fact of his presence brought her. She put it all on one side with an effort, as something delightful to be dreamed about with the rest of her triumph of that evening.

the world in the best sense, a diplomat of no mean merit, astonished Priscilla with his French, which all at once, to her surprise, he turned on, with a mischievous look in his eyes, for her special benefit. Up to now she had not attributed to him any linguistic ability whatsoever. He was the main prop tonight, the most inspiring element of the feast. He kept the current of wit and innuendo and repartee flowing in an uninterrupted stream in both French and English. So delightfully did he insert the wedge of his tact into the groove of her inexperience that she radiated therefrom with brilliant sallies also, a reflection of Stormouth's undeniable perspicacity.

De Lacaze frowned and bit his nails from time to time. This brilliant American, with his air of undaunted self respect—the impress of success was on Stormouth's entire personality—crippled his own resources, which were remarkable, if somewhat less subtle. He had heretofore possessed a reputation for keeping the ball of conversation rolling to an unusually original tune. Tonight he felt handicapped by an unattended force—two unattended forces. The first of these was Desmoulins. The second was Stormouth.

Desmoulins was superb, in his glory. On the top wave of apparent and bewildering achievement concerning his venture, he emitted double entendres with startling fidelity, and then and there took a stand with his contemporaries which afterward became proverbial—a stand for unflagging audacity and unadulterated perceptiveness and presumption.

For in their biased souls there nestled that symmetry which is the salvation of the French critic—the poise which controls theoretically, if not always practically, in no mean measure, a firm conviction of the true as opposed to the spurious. They knew Desmoulins rang false, but he held the purse strings, and so, outwardly, they cringed to him, inwardly regretting that so unworthy a man should have, through some odd and esoteric element, been placed in a position of trust.

They feasted until an early hour of the morning. Then they withdrew, with promises of great things for Mlle. Brilla and oily compliments for their hostess.

Priscilla kissed Constance good night and sent her up to her own little white and pink bedroom to pass the night. Then she turned to the count, who had asked her for a short interview before leaving.

Stormouth was chatting with Aunt Mildred. Priscilla and the count withdrew to the farther corner of the apartment.

"Mademoiselle," began the count, somewhat awkwardly for a man of his race and reported breeding, "I have but one question to ask. I think you must have suspected for some time what that question is."

Priscilla's lips trembled slightly.

"Mademoiselle," he continued, "I wish to lay my title"—his was said slowly and deliberately, with an excessive unction which was admirable, considering the worthlessness of the offering—"and my name at your feet."

"Yes," said Priscilla dully. She held her little lace handkerchief in her hands. She was twisting it cruelly.

"Mademoiselle, may I venture to hope?"

There was a short, distinct pause, in which, to Priscilla's chagrin, the conversation at the other end of the room seemed to have ceased. She waited a moment. Then she said gently:

"I cannot give you an answer, count, until you have asked my father's consent. He arrives the day after tomorrow on the Umbria. You must lay your plans before him. If he offers no opposition"—

"Yes, mademoiselle," said the count. He seized her hand impetuously, bent and pressed his dyed mustache upon it.

Priscilla withdrew the little satin palm hurriedly with an enigmatic expression and a vivid, pained flush.

"If he gives his consent, I will offer no opposition."

The count swelled visibly. Into his crafty eyes crept a look which made Priscilla shudder. "Mademoiselle is an angel," he ejaculated in a husky voice.

Priscilla checked him peremptorily. "I said," she repeated in an odd, frightened sort of voice, "if my father offers no objection, count."

The count frowned, visibly disconcerted. "As you will, mademoiselle."

"Quite so," agreed Priscilla dryly. "Come here," she added, "at 11 o'clock on Thursday morning."

"Entendu."

"And now good night."

The count smiled a look of badly concealed satisfaction. Then, with a low bow to Stormouth, who was regarding him with visible contempt, he stepped over the threshold. Aunt Mildred followed him. She wished to suggest something in the treatment of the count's criticisms on the new prima donna.

Priscilla stooped to pick a rose off the floor. It had fallen from the loosened coils of her hair. She sighed wearily.

Stormouth leaned forward quickly—he had walked toward Priscilla as the count and Aunt Mildred made their way toward the door—and held the rose in his grasp before she reached it.

As Priscilla raised her head and looked at him the color rushed in an uncontrollable flood to her face, investing it with a vivid beauty which made Stormouth draw his breath with a little hissing sound in between his teeth.

"Let me keep it," he said collectedly—"the rose, I mean."

"What for?" demanded Priscilla.

"It reminds me," remarked Stormouth, with assumed nonchalance, "of a girl I knew once who was faithful to herself, to her womanhood, to her future; who spurned with horror anything less than her birthright of principle and integrity.

Priscilla trembled visibly.

"A paragon, no doubt, your friend," she replied in a choked sort of voice.

"No," returned Stormouth coolly, "only that best and sweetest of God's creations—a true woman."

"Since when," demanded Priscilla, her vivid color fading to a delicious pink and her lips pouting rebelliously—"since when have you constituted yourself a judge of the opposite sex?"

Her eyes met Stormouth's steadily. Hers were cold and hard.

"Since I loved—a woman," announced Stormouth unflinchingly.

Then, before she could retaliate, before she could turn to leave him as she had intended doing, he stepped forward and laid two gentle albeit powerful hands upon her shoulders. It seemed an age that they stood there in bitter silence, his forbidding, stern eyes steadily endeavoring to force her obstinate lids to lift. Her lips quivered hopelessly, like the lips of a grieved child.

"Let go," she finally managed to burst forth, but her strangled voice, which she was endeavoring to make natural, came only in a hoarse whisper, to her intense surprise and shame. "It is unmanly of you to hold me thus. Let me go!"

"No," said Stormouth's voice, very gently—it seemed very far away to poor Priscilla, whose pulse was beating in incomprehensible wild thuds against her ears—"no. I will not let you go, my beloved, until you lift your eyes to mine and tell me that you do not love me and that you do love the other."

There was a long pause. Then Priscilla whispered something very low to attain cognizance of which Stormouth was obliged to stoop his head very near to hers.

"Coward," said the little voice.

"So," asserted Stormouth. "Only just?"

There was another silence. Priscilla mentally reviewed years afterward as very short and just then rang against her unduly sharpened faculties like the pendulum of a joy clock striking out the hours of a novel bliss unspeakable and accentuating the nucleus of the sweetest, strangest pain she had ever felt. Then helplessly, as though governed by an unseen and irresistible force, her little face a mask of pain and frightened pride, she raised her eyes to those stern compelling ones above.

They held the righteous force of a supreme command.

When souls meet and greet one another, acknowledging conviction across the almost insuperable gulf of conservatism and custom, laying bare a vital truth which storms order out of chaos and sublime peace out of past turmoil, the recording angels fold their wings and steal away appeased.

Then came Stormouth's voice, as though out of a mist.

"What folly is that other craving?" it asked peremptorily. Whereas before the tone had been harsh and almost cruel, it was now rich and full.

Only a little helpless gesture, as sweet as a bird's song in a thicket.

"And you would struggle against our inevitable, my beloved, such a sweet and rich inevitable?"

Still silence.

Stormouth's hand crept strongly under the mutinous chin. "My little girl," he said, "never mind how or why you have chosen to almost break my heart. I will forgive everything you have not said or done in the past few miserable weeks if you will lift those arms and lay them about my neck, and in the doing trust me as a child trusts its mother."

"I cannot," said Priscilla's voice, broken and trembling, but very firm in the settled resolve it contained.

"Why so?"

There was another pregnant silence. Then, very positively, she lifted her soft palms and, quite steadily, pushed Stormouth's hands off from her shoulders. She raised her head and confronted their owner.

"There are reasons," she said enigmatically. Her eyes, to Stormouth's intense consternation, were filled with blinding tears. Quite unaffectedly she wiped them away.

"Reasons?" quoted Stormouth, with extraordinary emphasis, his sternly controlled wrath and jealousy suddenly springing to life and quenching his sense of justice. "What reasons?"

"Never mind," she whispered miserably.

"Never mind!" he repeated. "If that is not like a woman! Can't you see that this is the crisis of my happiness and yours?"

Priscilla shook her head a trifle obstinately.

"Very well," he continued, still more wrathfully, beginning now to pace the room with strong, impatient strides. "We will 'never mind,' then. Ah, you willful woman, don't you know that with a man a joy like this untasted is as cruel as a jagged wound unnursed?"

"Let me go!" cried Priscilla suddenly, wildly now, her sweet face stricken as though with a mortal illness, her hands wringing themselves together unconsciously and with acute pathos.

Stormouth smiled bitterly. There was half a yard between him and this rebellious little bundle of femininity whom he loved better than his life. He wanted to crush her fiercely to his heart and still her sobs and kiss away her tears. All he did was to reach one gentle hand forward and lay it wonderingly on her hair, the prettiest hair, as soft and fine and far more willful than corn silk, with little clumps of rebellious curls along the temples and in the creamy nape of the warm baby neck.

"Go!" he commanded quietly, and then, as she did not stir, he added, "I am not holding you, my beloved." Still Priscilla did not move. As though spellbound, she stood there, drooping under that unexpected gentle caress.

"Priscilla," said Stormouth's voice. There was no command in it now. It was an appeal.

The little figure, with a visible and supreme effort, turned away from that appeal deliberately and marched toward the door.

He sprang forward. It took only two strides to reach the door, upon the handle of which Priscilla had already laid her hand.

He faced the little figure, upright now, peremptorily, a magnificent condemnatory scorn in his whole bearing.

"You love the count!" he shouted furiously in a veritable tempest of wonder and revolt.

And then Priscilla, that remarkable, elusive, bewitching, incorrigible Priscilla, turned toward him at last.

She was trembling no longer. The tears had vanished. The exquisite face had taken on a chiseled sternness, concentrated and set as Stormouth's own. There were righteous contempt and unmitigated indignation in every feature of the countenance, in every line of the figure which had made Stormouth's rainy and sunny weather for the past tumultuous 18 months.

"You have taken the trouble to assert that fact," said Priscilla, in her own clear and steady tones, which at

"Don't judge her at all," she said impertinently.

this particular moment were as cold and incisive as tempered steel, "once too often, Mr. Stormouth. You crossed the ocean to inform my father of it. You have returned, no doubt, to accentuate the fact of your individual talent for private detective business to me, the victim of it. Since you have mastered the case with such capability, why request the defendant to confirm your decision?"

Stormouth fell back, aghast.

"You say, you have said, you believe, I love the count," cried Priscilla, [illegible] tone of ironical impatience [illegible] blood enough [illegible] of your favorite resting subject?"

Stormouth replied, unexpectedly. Like a flash, all the past months' revulsion of feeling sprang to life in poisonous fashion and filled his veins with a seething flood, which put out common sense and cool judgment with wonderful effectiveness for the moment. "Your actions, your evasions, your happiness in his presence, your confusion."

He stopped. Priscilla had turned and measured him from head to heel. Somehow he felt as though he were losing ground.

"You have let go," Priscilla said unkindly, "your principal charm, my friend. Its name was self control."

Then she laughed, not a pretty laugh; a little, wild, strange imitation of the sound which is supposed to indicate mirth. This sound seemed to ring a knell of its own.

"I will offer you a suggestion, Mr. Stormouth," the girl remarked, with a strong emphasis on the "Mr." "Never judge a woman by what she says or by what she does."

"What is one to judge her by?" he inquired desperately, with perhaps pardonable curiosity.

"Don't judge her at all," she said imperatively.

With a mutinous expression which was essentially lovely, Priscilla laid her hand once more upon the doorknob. "Since you say I love the count," said the sweet voice, "go smoke your pipe upon it, O wily dissector of the feminine heart, and pleasant dreams to you."

The door opened and closed. She was gone.

"Constance," whispered Priscilla guardedly as she settled herself upon her pillow to a little crumpled mass of creamy muslin and tossed inky hair which nestled beside her, "Constance, are you asleep?"

"Yes," answered Constance, blinking an eye open.

"Aren't men fools when they are in love?" asked Priscilla irrelevantly.

"Idiots," returned Constance cheerfully with conviction. "But I like idiots. Don't you?"

"I simply adore them," murmured Priscilla, "when I get the best of them." With this frank confession of incipient villainy, this wily practitioner in retaliative methods fell peacefully asleep.

SMOKELESS POWDER.

No Advantage in Naval Work—Spaniards Did Not Have It.

"Smokeless powder is to a great extent a matter of the future," explained an ordnance expert. "There is no doubt that it will come some time, but so far there has been no complete success in that line. Nearly all countries are at work on it, and the best chemists are giving it attention. The result so far is three or four combinations of nitric acid and glycerine or nitro-glycerine, but they are not entirely smokeless. Of course, they are all an improvement on the old-fashioned, black or charcoal powder, which got its explosive power from nitrate of potash, as far as strength is concerned, but so is the brown powder, which is nearly smokeless. There has been a powder on the market for over five years which is known as nitro powder. It is known also as smokeless powder, and, as far as sporting uses are concerned, has almost entirely supplanted black powder. It is a much stronger powder, one-half of the quantity doing the work of black powder when done up into cartridges. It costs slightly more, but there is no reason why it should except that it is a novelty. It has received the endorsement of all the best sportsmen, and for all practical purposes is smokeless as much as any powder, but as I said before, it is not entirely so. During the several days when our army was actually engaged in warfare in Cuba there were frequent references in the newspapers to the statement that the Spaniards were better prepared than our army in that they had an actual smokeless powder. This was an error in fact, and no official report has ever been made bearing it out. The Spaniards had only what we had—brown powder—and there is still some smoke discernable when it is exploded. There have been hundreds of formulas prepared and tested, and while nearly all of them are an improvement on the charcoal powder of former times, it is a misnomer as yet to call them smokeless powder. But smokeless powder will be a fact in less than two years, but we will not have any advantage over nations in its use, for they will be as well off in this particular as we will be. There is a difference in the formulas, but the base is the same, nitro-glycerine. Smokeless powder has a particular value for sharpshooters. It allows them an opportunity to do damage to the enemy and reduces the chances of them being discovered. Sharpshooting is only an incident of warfare and a small one in comparison to others though it is well enough to take every advantage that is fair and possible. This fact is what will hasten the coming of smokeless powder. It will be of no advantage for naval purposes, for naval work has to be done in the open.'—Washington Star.

DOLLAR BILLS AS CALLING CARDS.

A Little Tale from an English Paper of Our Registrar of the Treasury.

A gullible English newspaper tells its readers that Mr. Tillman, the Registrar of the United States Treasury, uses dollar bills bearing his signature instead of visiting cards. "He began the practice," it says, "one evening when he called on some friends and found that his cardcase was empty. Then a happy thought came, and, taking out a new dollar bill, he put it on the salver and pointed out to the servant that his name was engraved in the lower left-hand corner. In a minute or two he returned and asked Mr. Tillman to go into the drawing room. Since that time he has always used the dollar bill. As visiting cards in America cost about four shillings a hundred, the idea is by no means an uneconomical one, but economy, it need hardly be added, had nothing to do with this idea of the discarding of the visiting card."

RIGHT OF WAY IN PARIS OF BICYCLES

All Have the Right of Precedent Over Pedestrians.

A Paris letter in The Chicago Record says that in London, Berlin, Vienna and other large cities of Europe, as in America, policemen are stationed in the crowded thoroughfares and at the street corners to regulate traffic, but in Paris everybody drives to suit himself, and vehicles have the right of way over pedestrians. If a Paris hackman sees a woman trying to cross the street he always whips up his horse and drives for her. Apparently he considers it great fun to see her jump. The police never interfere, and when there is an accident they usually arrest the person who was run over for obstructing traffic and let the hackman go.

The police have just revised the regulations concerning bicycles, which gives them the right of way over all other vehicles and pedestrians.

Theatres Wired by a Woman.

It is not generally known that one of the most expert wirers of buildings for electric lights in the East is a woman. This person is the wife of a theatrical electrician, whose labors she shares, from wiring a theater to designing a switchboard. Some time ago, when it so happened that her husband had gone to Nebraska, she received word that a large Polish hall in Chicago, for which her husband had the wiring contract, must be lit on a certain night on which an entertainment was to be given. The alternative was the forfeiture of a heavy amount. Taking with her two men to do the heavier work she set to work on the wiring with her apprentice, and kept at it all that day and night and throughout the next day until 8 o'clock in the evening. Then she fainted; but she had finished her job.

"What are you bellowing about Bill?" said a mother at the stair-foot one evening, after her two boys had been put to bed.

"Please, mother," said bellowing Bill, "Jim wants half the bed."

"Well," says she, "let him have it, and you take the other half."

"Yes, mother," said Bill, "But he will have his half out of the middle, and make me sleep on both sides of him."

"Hannah," said the mistress, "you can take that brown serge dress of mine and put it in soak."

"Yes, m," said Hannah, "who's your fav'rite pawnbroker?"—London Household Words.

BASKET BALL.

There is some talk of combining basket ball with roller polo at the Crescent Rink and let the halves of the two games be played alternately.

The basket ball team of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. has made an excellent showing this winter and can now be classed with the best teams of the metropolitan district. The five players who have worked together for this end are deserving of great commendation. The boys are willing and anxious to play while the people are glad of the opportunity of watching them. It is to be hoped that Manager George Fuller will make the local schedule as full as possible and give the Plainfield people plenty of opportunity to watch the sport.

Want East Second Street Macadamized

J. J. Kenney, of East Second street, is the promoter of a scheme to secure the macadamizing of that street between Watchung avenue and Richmond street. The property owners agree to pay 10 cents a foot as their share for the work. Mr. Kenney has met with good success thus far and the petition will probably go to the Council at the next meeting. The petition asks that the work be done as soon as possible. This street certainly needs such treatment and there is no doubt but what the Council will at once recognize the needs of the petitioners.

Died Away From His Wife.

John P. Randolph, formerly of Plainfield, but lately of the south, died last Thursday in the south. He was 82 years of age. He had been accustomed to spend his winters in the north of late years, and was preparing to settle up his affairs in the south so that he could join his family in this city. He leaves a wife and two daughters, the eldest being with him in the absence of Mrs. Randolph, who is confined to her home, 56 Somerset street, with nervous prostration. Mr. Randolph was active in gospel work in Virginia.

District Meeting of Pythians.

A district meeting of Knights of Knights of Pythias was held last evening by Perseverence Lodge of that order. Owing to illness none of the grand officers were able to be present. All the local lodges were well represented nevertheless and a pleasant evening was spent. Reports were made by all the local lodges showing them in good condition. Two applications were made for membership and favorably acted upon. Jos. C. Blimm was installed as master of exchequer, the other officers having been installed at a former meeting.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver, of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongued coated, pain continually in the back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters;' and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50cts., guaranteed, at L. W. Randolph's Drug Store.

A STORY ABOUT NELSON.

Ready to Ruin His Prospects for the Woman He Loved.

A pretty little romance gives Nelson's memory a sentimental interest in Canada. During his service at Quebec, in 1872, when he was but twenty-four years of age, he became infatuated with a beautiful Canadian girl. Mary Simpson, daughter of a great Canadian merchant of the period. At the time of Nelson's visit she was but sixteen years old, marvellously beautiful and witty. On October 14, 1782, Lord Nelson's ship, the Albemarle, was ready to sail, and he had a very sad and tender parting with Mary Simpson, and went down the St. Lawrence to board the man-of-war. The next morning arrived and the Albemarle did not heave anchor and Captain Nelson was seen coming back to Quebec in a boat. A friend of Nelson's a man prominent in Quebec at the time, espied him and asked him what had happened. Nelson is quoted as having said: "I find it absolutely impossible to leave this place without again waiting upon her whose society has so much added to its charms, and laying myself and my fortune at her feet." Nelson's friend protested against such a rash act, and told him that, "situated as you are at present, your utter ruin will inevitably follow." "Then let it follow," replied Nelson, earnestly, "for I am resolved to do it." But despite his intentions, the stronger will of his friend prevailed, and he was fairly carried back to his ship and forced to leave behind the girl he loved; and it was many years before he gave up the hope of possessing her, for Nelson never returned to Canada and Mary Simpson died in spinsterhood.—Leslie's Weekly.

A HARVEST OF HUMAN HAIR.

12,000 Pounds Used Yearly—A Regular Market Day for It In the Pyrenees.

Perhaps there is no staple article of commerce about which less is known by the average person than human hair. It will doubtless surprise many to learn that the dealers in human hair do not depend on chance clippings here and there, but there is a regular hair harvest that can always be relied upon. It is estimated that over 12,000 pounds of human hair are used annually in the civilized world for adorning the heads of men and women, but principally the fair sex.

The largest supply of hair comes from Switzerland, Germany and the French provinces. There is a human hair market in the department of the lower Pyrenees, held every Friday. Hundreds of hair traders walk up and down the one street of the village, their shears dangling from their belts, and inspect the braids which the peasant girls, standing on the steps of the houses, let down for inspection. If a bargain is struck the hair is cut and the money paid on the spot.

Dealers in human hair can tell in a moment whether the locks offered them have been cut off or combed out. They do this by rubbing the hairs through their fingers. If the hair has been cut from the head and has not been misplaced, it remains in its original position. If it has been pulled or combed out and put together regardless of the direction in which it grew, one portion of it will slip to the right and the other to the left. It does this because the jagged edges catch upon each other and pull in opposite directions.—London Mail.

DUCKS THAT NEVER SWAM.

Nor Have Any of These Unique Youngsters Known a Mother.

Chicago has a duck farm which numbers 10,000 ducks and ducklings, none of whom has ever seen a drop of water save that which is doled out to them daily as drink.

What is more, not one of these ducks, young or old, ever had a mother, provided the old question as to which is the mother, the duck which lays the egg or the duck which hatches it, be answered in favor of the latter. These ducks were all raised in boxes by the aid of kerosene oil and a lighted lamp wick. When they felt cold after being taken from their hatching place, they were taught to turn beneath coils of steam pipe which sputtered a welcome to the ducklings as they huddled up under the iron pipes, "even as a hen calleth her chickens under her wings."

There is not in this whole collection of quacking birds a single one which can claim a dark feather. Ten thousand strong they are, all as white as the driven snow, a remarkable circumstance considering the fact that not one of them ever had a bath. This duck farm at the south end of Chicago is not yet a single season old, and it bears the distinction of being the only rearing place for ducks in the United States which accomplishes its object without a pond filled with the birds' natural element. The ducks quack and grow fat and bring 25 cents a pound in the market, which is double the price at which water reared quackers are quoted. It is only fair to say, however, that no claim is made that the absence of water increases the price of the bird. Their value is due to the fact that the ducks are of a peculiar strain and are sold when only ten weeks old.

There are at the farm several scores of old ducks which supply the eggs from which the young are raised. A few of the most likely of the offsprings are set aside occasionally to be kept until maturity for egg-laying purposes. A corresponding number of old ducks are disposed of. In about five years' time there will be ducks whose ancestors for ten generations have not known what it is to take a swim.—Chicago Times-Herald.

HOW HUMBOLDT SLEPT.

He is Said to Have Claimed that, when Young, Two Hours were All He Needed.

How many hours' sleep does a man want? In the Cosmopolis Professor Max Mueller records an interesting statement of Alexander von Humboldt on this subject. "As I get old," he said, "I want more sleep—four hours at least. When I was young," he continued, "two hours of sleep were quite enough for me."

Professor Max Mueller ventured to express doubts, apologizing for differing from him on any physiological fact. "It is quite a mistake," he said, "though it is very widely spread, that we want seven or eight hours of sleep. When I was of your age I simply lay down on the sofa, turned down my lamp, and after two hours' sleep I was as fresh as ever."

If Humboldt was speaking seriously, and the habits he described were continued for long periods, the experience is certainly remarkable, for he did an immense amount of work and lived to be 89. It may almost be said that he lived to be 178, for he certainly lived at least twice as many waking hours as most of mankind.

WET DAYS ARE BEST.

For Buying Lumber, Then Cracks and Knots Are More Discernible.

Any timber buyer who knows his business will tell you that you should never dream of purchasing timber on a fine dry day. You must go when the logs, soaking with rain, shine with the wet, and show plainly to a practised eye their cracks and knots. In buying timber from the docks, never select sticks that float low in the water. It is a sign that they are sappy, and have not their due proportion of heart-wood.

Planks sawn out of full-grown timber will bear a much heavier weight than those from young trees, and when the architect has calculated carefully the strains which each portion of the building will stand, the substitution of "deals" for cut timber" becomes a very dangerous experiment.

RAY CARROLL WINS TWO MORE EVENTS.

Indoor Athletic Contests at the Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium.

WON THE FENCE VAULT.

TIED WITH ERIC MORALLER FOR FIRST IN POTATO RACE.

Eight Contestants Were Out—Green and and Egan Were Not Present—No Records Broken—The Potato Race Furnished Several Close Races—Contest Ends Saturday—Chance to Make Up Back Events.

Unless some of the other competitors make a wonderful showing in the few events remaining, Raymond Carroll will carry off first honors in the indoor athletic contest now in progress among the members of the Y. M. C. A. Saturday evening two more events were contested and Carroll won—was first in one and tied for first in the other.

The events of Saturday night were the fence vault and the potato race. Only eight of the competitors showed up, the remainder being kept away by illness and other reasons. There were, however, quite a number of visitors who saw some exciting sport.

The first event was the fence vault, in which the old record was 6 feet, 3 inches, made last year by Frank Marcley. Raymond Carroll won the event after a lively contest with Eric Moraller, who pushed him closely. Carroll won with a vault of 5 feet, 10 inches, and Moraller was an inch behind. William Townsend was third with a vault of 5 feet, 6 inches. William Morgan and Herbert Brokaw were tied at 5 feet, 2 inches. The other contestants were Walter Dreier, Edgar Sheppard and Henry Pierce.

The potato race was not that farcical performance in which the competitors try to carry potatoes on small spoons, but an entirely different arrangement. Two high boxes were placed 31 feet apart. One box contained seventeen oblong corks which the contestants were supposed to take out and carry to the other box. There was one set of boxes for each man and it resulted in each man making a circuit of the boxes seventeen times, or running just a quarter of a mile. The Y. M. C. A. record for the event was 1 minute, 46 1-6 seconds, made by F. O. Bristol. The State record is only a fifth of a second better.

William Morgan and Walter Dreier were the first to run off the event. They started well but Morgan soon began to gain, especially on the turns, and he had the advantage of over half a lap when he finished. Morgan's time was 1 minute, 59 1-5 seconds. Dreier covered the distance in 2 minutes, 3 4-5 seconds. Edgar Sheppard and Henry Pierce ran together next. Sheppard ran in good form and finally lapped his opponent. He finished strong. Sheppard's time was 1 minute, 56 1-5 seconds. Pierce's was 2 minutes, 4 seconds.

William Townsend and Herbert Brokaw were the next team to try conclusions. Townsend took the lead and was doing well when he became entangled in one of the boxes and lost some valuable time. He made up as best he could and finished third in the event with 1 minute, 55 2-5 seconds as his sime. Brokaw covered the quarter in 2 minutes, 4-5 seconds.

The last pair to run were Raymond Carroll and Eric Moraller. They started together and held an even pace through every lap until the last, when Moraller opened out a little distance between himself and his opponent. On the last sprint Carroll closed that up and the two men crossed the line at exactly the same time, making the distance in 1 minute, 53 2-5 seconds. Moraller's time last year was a second slower. They were declared tie for first place in the event.

J. H. Green, Jr., was expected to make his appearance and do some fast work in the event, but he didn't come. He will probably try next Saturday to lower the record and capture the event.

Next Saturday the last two events in the contest will be run off and such of the competitors who have missed any of the events will be allowed a chance to make them up. The officials Saturday night were C. E. A. Heywood and Walter L. Long.

DID NOT PAY HIS WIFE.

AND NOW CHILDREN WANT $1,000 FROM FATHER'S ESTATE.

An Unusual State of Affairs That Has Developed in the Family of the Late Edward Lance, of Whitehouse.

Counsellor S. S. Swackhamer, of the firm of Codington & Swackhamer, went to Whitehouse today to settle up an interesting case where a man, his wife and $1,000 are concerned. The man and wife are dead now, but the children of the wife and the relatives of the husband are carrying on the fight.

Edward Lance, of Hunterdon county, was given $1,000 by his wife years ago to invest for her. Instead of doing that Lance kept the money and used it as his own. It was some time before Mrs. Lance found out the trick her husband had played on her, but when she did find it out and spoke to him about it he promised to return it to her if he died before she did, and if that didn't occur, to leave it to her children.

But Mrs. Lance died first, and the money was still in her husbands possession. He died, too, but there was nothing said about leaving this $1,000 to his children, so they made a demand on the administrators of their father's property for it. The defense of the husband's relatives was that, according to the law, at a wife's death all her personal property goes to her husband, and that the money really belonged to him immediately upon her decease. Mr. Swackhamer, who represents the wife's children, claimed that it did not, as the husband had made a direct promise to his wife to repay it. An agreement was reached, however, through the lawyers concerned in the case, and Monday everythidg will be settled.

LAMP EXPLODED.

Lively Blaze Caused in a Borough House Saturday Night.

Last Saturday evening about 8 o'clock a fire broke out in a bedroom in the house occupied by Louis Bimble and family in Prideville. The fire is supposed to have resulted from an exploded lamp. An alarm was sent in from Box 156, and the department was quick to respond. Nearly everything was destroyed in the bedroom and the fire spread to the parlor directly under the bedroom, where much damage resulted. In all the loss will probably reach $150, on which there is an insurance. The firemen did excellent work in saving the house and much of the contents, and they worked hard. It was not necessary to use the steamer at the fire and consequently not much water was thrown into the house.

"Two Young Men"

Rev. A. F. Todd, of Dunellen, preached yesterday morning in Trinity Reformed church for Dr. Schenck, who had been ill during the past week. He selected for his theme "Two Young Men." The first one was the young man who went to Jesus and asked what he should do to attain eternal life, and when he was bidden to sell all he had and give to the poor he turned away from Jesus sorrowfully, (Matt. 19-22.) The other young man was the Ethiopian eunuch, whom Philip taught the Scriptures and baptized and who went on his way rejoicing. (Acts 5-39.) Mr. Todd handled the subject to the satisfaction of all and brought out many truths that were very convincing to his hearers.

A Fine Showing.

The annual statement of the Dime Savings Institution was issued this morning. It shows that the assets are $528,079.07. The amount due depositors is $496,103.41, and the surplus on hand is $31,975.66. This showing is very creditable and speaks well for the management of the institution.

LOST HOUSE AND HOME BY DISASTROUS BLAZE

Lawyer McNabb's Residence at Dunellen Destroyed.

FURNACE WAS THE CAUSE.

MR. AND MRS. M'NABB JUST HAD TIME TO ESCAPE.

The Building was in Flames Before the Conflagration was Discovered—Fire Department Devoted its Efforts to Saving Adjoining Property—Mrs. McNabb Heard the Crackling of Flames.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, Jan. 23—The most disastrous fire that Dunellen has seen in a long time occurred early this morning. A large frame house, owned and occupied by Charles McNabb, a Plainfield lawyer, took fire about 4 o'clock, and despite every effort made by the firemen and the neighbors, was burned to the ground, and now presents to the sight nothing except a mass of ruins. The alarm was turned in by Charles Tilton, a switchman employed at night work on the Central Railroad of New Jersey. He saw the fire and sent in an alarm from the roundhouse whistle which called out the fire department. When they arrived the house was in flames. The hose was connected with a small creek which runs near the house and the firemen turned their attention to the neighboring buildings which were threatened. The house owned by W. R. Larkin, and occupied by Mrs. George Harrison, stands close to the McNabb house, and had it not been for the quiet night, would have been destroyed.

Mr. and Mrs. McNabb were away from home all day yesterday visiting Mrs. McNabb's parents in North Plainfield. They returned home about 9:30 o'clock, but did not retire until nearly 11 o'clock because the furnance fire was low and needed attending too. When they went to bed Mr. McNabb says the fire in the heater was burning nicely. Several times during the night Mr. McNabb was aroused and compelled to get up on account of his throat which troubled him and seemed to be extremely dry.

About 4 o'clock he was awakened again and so was Mrs. McNabb. Suddenly Mrs. McNabb heard a crackling sound like fire and in a fright asked her husband what it was. He hurriedly investigated and found that the house was afire. There was little time to be lost and the couple had not more than time enough to get a few clothes on and to snatch a few pieces of their property before the flames were upon them and they were compelled to flee for their lives.

Mrs. George Harrison, who lives next door, was awakened by the barking of her dog, and on throwing open the window saw the next house afire. W. R. Larkin was the first one on the scene and says that the fire seemed to be confined to the north side of the house, but the fire spread rapidly.

Mr. and Mrs. McNabb have a baby only four-and-a-half months old. The child they left in Plainfield last night. The couple took refuge in Mrs. Harrison's house until after breakfast when they left for Plainfield.

The house was a new one and was built by Sandford Staples for a home three years ago. Mr. McNabb came into possession of the house last summer and moved into it last fall. The house was worth about $2,800, as it was large, roomy and contained all the improvements. The furniture and everything the house contained was also burned, making the total loss about $4,000, which, it is understood, is covered by insurance.

The fire no doubt caught from the furnace, but whether from too strong a fire, which set fire to the woodwork around the pipes, or to burning soot, is not known.

George L. Harris, of New Market, who passed the house at 2:30 o'clock in the morning, saw a bright light in the cellar, but supposed it came from some one carrying a light.

The people who are in favor of water-works quote the fire as an argument in favor of them. They say that if the engine could have secured its supply of water from a hydrant, instead of depending on a small brook, they might have saved a part of the house.

The furniture was insured by William Woodruff, of Plainfield, for $1,000. Mr. Titsworth, of this place, held the insurance on the house which is is said to be a little less than the house was worth.

DOUBLE DESERTER IS JOHN ANTHONY.

Left His Wife To Enlist As a U. S. Soldier.

PATRIOTISM COOLED OFF.

HE CAME BACK HOME WITHOUT LEAVE FROM HIS REGIMENT.

Now He is Under Arrest as a Deserter and Will be Sent to Chickamauga for Court Martial—Roundsman Flynn Caught Anthony as He Was Preparing to Leave With His Wife.

After having been charged with deserting his wife and family in Plainfield to join the ranks of the United States Army, James Anthony, colored, is now a prisoner in the hands of the Government, held to answer the charge of desertion from the army. He was arrested yesterday morning at 8:15 o'clock by Roundsman Flynn, just as he attempted to board a train with his wife to take them away from Plainfield.

Anthony used to live on East Third street. His wife came here from Rahway. It was said that they were in destitute circumstances and that the two little children were starving. This was at the outbreak of the war. Without warning, Anthony enlisted and left his family to their fate. The sad case of the mother and children was brought to the attention of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children and to some charitably inclined persons. Their needs were relieved and the mother was given work.

Last Thursday, Chief Grant received a telegram from Col. Huggins, of the Eighth Infantry, stating that Anthony had deserted, giving a description of him and requesting that the police apprehend him.

Anthony reached town Saturday, wearing his uniform. He went home and, he and his wife decided to leave town. When arrested, he told the officer that he had a furlough and was then returning to his duties at the camp at Chickamauga Park. The Eighth Infantry is quartered at Chickamauga.

This morning, Anthony was taken to Governor's Island under the escort of Chief Grant. From Governor's Island, he will be forwarded to Chickamauga where he will be court martialled.

RESCUED DROWNING LAD

HEROIC CONDUCT OF HAROLD DAVIS SATURDAY EVENING.

Six-Year-Old Boy Fell Through the Ice on Hyde's Pond—Davis Waded Into the Icy Water to Rescue the Boy.

Harold Davis, of Kensington avenue, made a brave rescue of a drowning lad Saturday evening at Hyde's pond. A crowd of children, ranging in ages from six to ten years, were playing on the pond. At the place where the mill-race enters the pond, there was an open space in which there was no ice. One of the smallest of the children fell in here. His companions were too frightened to scream.

Davis was standing at the other end of the pond when the lad fell in. He happened to see the child plunge into the water and started on a run in that direction. When he reached the scene, the child had gone down twice. Davis waded into the icy water up to his waist and plucked the youngster out by the back of the coat. The child was unconscious for a few minutes, but speedily recovered and was sent home. His name could not be learned. His playmates knew him only as Willie.

THE POLICE RAIDED QUIET POKER GAME.

Eight Colored Individuals Intent Upon the Game.

ALL WERE CAPTURED.

THEY ALL JUMPED FOR THE COIN ON THE TABLE.

Police Locked Up Men and Took Care of the Modus Operandi—All Pleaded Guilty But One—Fined $5 and $8—Henderson, the Manager, Changed His Plea—It Was the Neapolitan Club.

The police visited the rooms of the Neapolitan Club early Sunday morning. The call was not expected. Incidentally the police disturbed an exciting poker game that was in progress. The eight members of the club present accepted the invitation of the police to call at the city jail. Several were suddenly struck with the remembrance that they had important invitations elsewhere. They prepared to depart hurriedly. The invitations of the police took precedence, however. This morning, at the invitation of City Judge Runyon, the Neapolitanffee each made the city a small but subestantial gift.

The Neapolitan Club, which was until recently the Neapolitan Athletic Club, has its rooms at 208 Park avenue. The rooms are on the second floor, over the corner store. It was only recently incorporated, the papers being drawn by City Judge Runyon. George H. Henderson is the soul of the organization, and is alleged to be the proprietor of the place.

The place has been reported to the police several times. Sunday morning, at 1:30 o'clock, Sergeant Kiely, Roundsman Frederickson and Patrolman Vanderweg and Mattox raided the establishment. Kiely, Frederickson and Vanderweg entered by the rear door, leaving Mattox on guard outside. They listened at the door and heard the sound of chips and sundry remarks relating to "raising it," "three of a kind," "two pair," and such other technical terms of the familiar game.

Then the raiders walked in. It is said that Mead was ahead of the game. Andy Oby was keeping score. When the light shone on the badges of the officers there was a wonderful scattering. Every man in the crowd grabbed for the "kitty," there was a clashing of silver and the coin suddenly disappeared from the table.

Henderson bolted for an adjacent closet and the rest scurried about for a hiding place but without success. Then they surrendered. Besides the modus operandi of the game, there was a huge flask of apple whiskey and several glasses, all of which was confiscated by the police. Then the eight occupants of the room were locked up in the city jail. They gave their names as Thomas Phillips, Edward Mead, David C. Martin, Andrew Oby, Joseph Johnson, Jeb Freeman, John Henry and George Henderson.

Five of the number were let out on bail over Sunday. This morning all but John Henry were arraigned before City Judge Runyon. Henry was excused to appear later, as he had to work in the morning. Some 200 colored men surrounded the jail, packed the courtroom and peeped in the windows to see the fun.

The offenders were evidently ill at ease. All but Henderson pleaded guilty of being present and watching or taking part in the game of poker. Mead and Freeman admitted that they had been before the court on a similar charge. They were fined $8 each. Phillips, Martin, Oby and Johnson were fined $5 each.

Henderson was charged with running the establishment and conducting a gambling house and selling liquor illegally. Lawyer Robert M. Clark appeared as his counsel.

Henderson changed his mind during the morning and decided to plead guilty to the charge of running the establishment. The Judge received his change of plea, and sentenced him to pay a fine of $15 or go to jail for thirty days.

The prisoner called John Henry was arraigned later, and fined $5 with the rest.

REV. MR. HAND'S SIDE.

ANOTHER CHAPTER IN THE FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST TROUBLES.

Replies to the Communication Signed by Treasurer Schultheiss—Says That It is an Honest Debt That is Owing to Him.

To The Editor of The Daily Press:—Kindly allow me a word in reply to Mr. Schultheiss' statement, in your issue of Saturday, in regard to my case against the First Church of Christ. Mr. Schultheiss neglected to give a statement of the real point at issue. The point at issue is not whether I paid $183 53 out of my own pocket for the church or not. The point at issue is whether the church owes me the $70 shown to be owing me by its promisory note.

In January of last year, in settlement of accounts with the church, the church gave me a note for $90, payable in three months. Mr. Schultheiss signed that note. At the end of the three months they paid me $10, and gave me a note for $80. Mr. Schultheiss signed that note. At the end of the next three months they paid me $10, and gave me a new note for $70. Mr. Schultheiss signed that note. I am now suing to recover the $70 due on this third note. In answer to my lawyer's questions as to why he had signed the three notes if he did not think the church owed me the money, Mr. Schultheiss said that he supposed at the time the church did owe me the money, but failed to give any reason why, if the church did owe me money at that time, it did not owe it now.

Mr. Schultheiss afterward testified that the board of elders and deacons of the church spent three evenings about three year ago in looking over my books, and at the end of that time after everything had been compared and checked up a balance had been struck. It was for the balance of that amount thus shown to be due that the first note was given.

Does it not seem strange that Mr. Schultheiss should sign three seperate notes if he did not think the church owed me the money?

Does it not also seem strange that after a claim has been settled for two or three years a bill of particulars should be demanded? Any business man knows that the giving and accepting of a note in payment of a debt settles the question of a bill of particulars.

The church by its three seperate notes given on three seperate occasions was an acknowledgment that the money claimed is due me. In the trial of last Tuesday no member of the church nor of the board of trustees was willing to swear that the church did not owe me the money. The dollars represented by this note are not to be compared to the dollars given by me to the church in times past.

The question of the amount of the note does not cut any figure in the case, but the statements which have been made by one or two new members of the board of trustees, attacking my character, does cut a great figure in the matter. I have been obliged, in order to protect myself, to bring this suit. Yours very truly,

B. W. Hand.

CODDING FACTION WAS VICTORIOUS.

Contest in the Republican County Committee.

YOUNG MR. KEAN DEFEATED

HE IS A BROTHER OF JOHN KEAN, TO BE SENATOR-ELECT.

But the Fight Was a Close One and Codding Was Only Elected by One Majority—Candidates for County Nomination for Next Fall are Beginning to Show Up—Democrats Look on Joyously.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Jan. 23.—There is a big fight on among the Union county Republicans over the offices of County Clerk, Sheriff and Senator, all of which are to be filled next fall, and the opening skirmish between the opposing factions took place at Elizabeth Saturday evening, at the annual meeting of the County Committee.

The struggle was over the selection of a chairman for the committee, which, in view of the importance of the coming campaign, was deemed a prize. Former Assemblyman Charles Nelson Codding, of Westfield, a New York lawyer, has been chairman of the committee for several years, and much desired a re-election. To his surprise and that of his friends, he was opposed by Hamilton Fisk Kean, a young brother of John Kean, the caucus candidate of the party for United States Senator.

Young Mr. Kean plunged into the contest with such energy that the chairman found he had the fight of his life on his hands. He invoked the aid of all the machine leaders in Union county that he had ever done any favors for, and the result was the liveliest hustling during the last week that was ever witness among the leading Republicans of the county.

When the contending factions locked horns Saturday the first ballot resulted: Kean, 15; Codding, 15; blank, 1. There was no change on the second ballot, and the third was rejected because more votes were polled than there were members of the committee present. Codding won on the next ballot by getting 16 to Mr. Kean's 15.

The politicians say this means a bitter contest when it comes to distributing the offices next fall. Already there are three candidates in the field for County Clerk—William Howard, of Rahway, the present incumbent; Assemblyman Squire, of Elizabeth, and Sheriff Kirk, of Plainfield.

Assemblyman Houston, of Elizabeth, wants to be Sheriff, and he will have powerful opposition from other parts of the county. State Senator Cross, who was chosen to fill the unexpired term of Governor Voorhees, desires a re-election, but he will have to fight for it.

Democrats are now hoping that the internal war raging among their opponents may result in giving them a chance again to capture the control of the county.

Teachers Met for Mutual Profit.
(Special to The Daily Press)

Bound Brook, Jan. 23—The Somerset County Teachers' Association met here Saturday. An unusually large number of teachers were present. The speakers were Rev. Dr. Reed, of Somerville, who gave an impressive talk on "Moral Training." He was followed by Mr. J. L. Hoffman, principal of the Flemington High School, who held up the teachers' work as "The Greatest Responsibility." Superintendent B. C. Gregory, of Trenton, gave an address on "The Path of the Least Resistance," which was full of helpful thoughts for teachers.

CHEMICALS IN THE BEEF

Government Expert Finds Boracic and Salicylic Acids.

BLOW TO EAGAN'S DEFENCE

Results of the Chemical Analysis Regarded as a Strong Point in Support of Gen. Miles' Contention That the Beef Was Embalmed.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.—Chemical analysis of the residuum beef tea made from the refrigerator beef supplied to the army in Porto Rico bears out the charge made by General Miles that the beef was chemically preserved.

Professor F. W. Clarke, chemist of the Geological Survey, an expert selected by the War Investigating Commission, testified Saturday that he found evidences of boracic acid and salicylic acid in the residuum of the tea submitted by Major Daly. Chemical analysis by which Professor Clarke determined the presence of these acids was made by Professor Clark and Major Daly.

As the case now stands it is shown by the testimony of the government expert now connected with the army, and selected by the investigation commission, that the beef tea submitted by Major Daly contained boracic and salicylic acids, and if this beef tea was made from refrigerated beef sent to Porto Rico for the use troops, as Major Daly swears it was, General Miles is vindicated.

This has a direct bearing on the case of Commissary General Egan, whose only defence is that he was driven to the use of harsh language against General Miles by the latter's criticism of his department and false statements that chemically prepared beef had been fed to the soldiers. The testimony of Major Daly and Professor Clarke, it is believed, will go far toward justifying all that General Miles said, and will thus break down the only defence General Egan has.

Paymaster T. H. Hicks, of the navy, who had much to do with the purchase of supplies during the war, testified as to the good quality of the canned beef supplied to the navy. It was not shown, however, that the navy beef was the same quality as that bought for the army.

Professor Clarke was closely examined. He said the powder was of a brownish color, while the borax was white, but he did not explain the difference.

Witness said he could say nothing of the origin of the materials tested, nor could he state the probable amount of these chemical agents used that would be extracted in making tea from the beef without more material and longer time. Large quantities of such chemicals for preservatives, however, he said, would be unneccessary, and would be an expensive waste.

Boracic acid, he said, imparted no odor whatever to meat. The salicylic acid, also, he said, was odorless, and he could not say whether it formed any compound with the flesh of cattle that would produce odor.

As to the effect on health of using beef injected with the boracic acid, witness said it would be relatively harmless, but the use of salicylic acid would be different and was prohibited by most European countries. The use of the boracic acid on meat furnished troops, in his opinion would be of very little importance from a health view, but the salicylic acid would be objectionable. The effect of the preservatives he said, was to make the meat keep longer. If the meat were kept twenty-four hours after leaving the refrigerator the chemicals might rotard putrefaction.

Paymaster Hicks, assistant storekeeper at the New York Navy Yard, testified that the tinned roast beef was satisfactory in the navy, was palatable and good, and he saw no reason why it shou'd not be a good emergency ration for the army, as it was a regular ration in the navy.

Wreck on the Erie Road.

Binghamton, N. Y., January 23.—Erie passenger train No. 2, the fastest train on the Erie system, jumped the track a few yards east of the depot at Great Bend, Pa., Saturday afternoon. Fireman Ready was killed almost instantly, Engineer James Welch and an extra fireman named Smith, who was "deadheading" were badly injured.

All the passengers escaped unhurt. At the point where the accident occurred there is an embankment of twenty feet. Four coaches and the engine left the track.

Battle in the Backwoods.

Nashville, Tenn, January 23.—On the line between Lee County, Va., and Hancock County, Tenn., a station remote from the telegraph, a battle occurred on Friday between twenty members of the Eddy family of Virginia and the Ramsey family of Tennessee.

The battle lasted several hours which a number of men on both sides were killed and injured. A quarrel of long resulted in the fight, particulars of which are not at present obtainable.

Charged With Swindling.

Chicago, Ill., January 23.—Mrs. D. E. Fitzgerald, alias Mme. Zingard, alias Mrs. Elizaeth Byron, wanted in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Worcester, Mass., to answer charges of extortion, was arrested here Saturday at the request of Chief of Detectives McCluskey of New York. Mrs. Fitzgerald posed as a medium and it is charged has swindled victims out of over $25,000 within the past twenty-five years.

Three Emperors for Peace.

London, Jan. 23.—A despatch from Vienna to the Central News says the report gains credit in official and diplomatic circles that Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria, the German Emperor and the Emperor of Russia have arrived at an understanding contemplating a prolonged maintenance of peace.

Kitchener to Govern the Soudan.

Cairo, Jan. 23.—A decree has been signed appointing General Lord Kitchener governor general of the Soudan.

ADJUSTMENT OF SAMOAN TROUBLE

Germany to Repudiate the Action of Her Consul.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.—It can be stated authoritatively that if the published reports of the events at Apia are true, the acts of the German consul, Rose, and o fthe president of the municipal council, Raffel, were not the result of instructions from the German government, and so far as these acts were violative of the treaty of Berlin, it is not believed at the state department that they will receive the approval of the German government.

The German ambassador, Dr. von Holleben, called on Secretary Hay at the state department and presented two important dispatches from the German government relating to the critical condition of affairs in Samoa. Following this an extended conference was held between Mr. Hay and the ambassador, and then between Mr. Hay and the British ambassador, Sir Julian Pauncefote.

The dispatches communicated by the German ambassador dealt not only with the question of policy involved, but are understood to have presented in detail the facts of the recent collision in Samoa, as viewed from the German standpoint. They differ in many essential particulars from the statements made heretofore.

All of the parties to the treaty are laboring under a lack of exact information as to what actually occurred at Apia. The statements coming from American and German sources vary in some most important essentials, or at least leave unmentioned facts that would largely qualify the matters of complaint.

It is not known here just why Mataafa was disqualified by Chief Justice Chambers, nor just why the provisional government was recognized b ythe three consuls after that legal disqualification. The most important fact that the department of state is confident of is, that the question of the succession to the throne was submitted to the chief justice for that was stated in the reports received in the mail preceding the last dispatches. The submission according to the treaty of the question would seem to indicate a recognition on the part of the consuls of the right of the chief justice to adjudicate it, and the treaty expressly binds all three parties to the obligation to execute the judgment rendered by the chief justice. It is not even to be guessed here, therefore, how the German representatives could have found it consistent with their obligations under the treaty to support the Mataafa party to the extent that hey did.

The Oregon is not going to Samoa, but is going straight ahead to Manila, after taking coal at Honolulu, according to the officials at the navy department.

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 3.—Admiral Kautz of the Philadelphia says he expects to sail direct from this port for Apia next Thursday. The ship is rapidly being provisioned and will be coaled at once.

Health of Cuban Cities.

Washington, Jan. 23.—Reports from officers of the Marine Hospital service show that the sanitary condition of Santiago, under the strict supervision ordered by the military authorities, is still further improving. In the whole population of the place there were only 58 deaths during the last week in December and that was a decided improvement over the sanitary record of the week before.

Reports from Havana are to the effect that the cleaning of streets, which is now practiced daily, has shown important results already in the health of the inhabitants, and that the other measures taken for the cleaning of the city promise to bring a radical improvement in the health of the soldiers and of the people. Precautions regarding the cleansing of vessels plying between Havana and the United States are being observed rigidly.

Trips to and from Manila.

Washington, Jan. 23.—The navy department has decided to use the former hospital ship Solace and the cruiser Buffalo for service in carrying ammunition, provisions, ship stores and sailors and marines to and from Manila and the United States. The Solace will go over the route from New York to Manila and the Buffalo will ply between San Francisco and Manila.

Each vessel will make the trip every six months, so as to insure the arrival of one transport at Manila once every three months. Sick seamen and marines will be brought back to the United States from the Philippines, Guam and Hawaii on these ships.

The Solace is at Norfolk, Va., where she is being fitted out for her voyage. The Buffalo sailed from Colombo, Ceylon, for Singapore Friday.

French Talk of War.

London, Jan. 23.—The Paris correspondent of the Chronicle says that the virtual adjustment of the disputes between Franct and Great Britain through negotiations upon lines laid down by Sir Edmund Monson, the British ambassador, in his interview with M. Delcasse, minister of foreign affairs, fails to satisfy the Chauvinists.

The Echo de Paris quotes Colonel Guerin, parliamentary reporter of the Army Commission, as expressing the belief that war between France and England within a short time is inevitable.

It was this feeling, he says, that influenced the measures voted in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday for the defence of Algiers and Tunis.

Killed Wife and Himself.

Philadelphia, Jan. 23.—Crazed, it is supposed, by poverty, James Mullen, a former brakeman on the Reading Railway, who was out of work and in poor health, cut his wife's throat with a razor and then his own, Saturday, in their attic bedroom at 307 North 11th street. Mullen was 31 years old and his wife was 28. They had never had any discord as far as known.

Smallpox at a Fort.

Cincinnati, O., January 23.—There are new two cases of smallpox in the pest house at Fort Thomas, Ky. Private Nest was stricken three days ago and another case developed Friday. The name of the second man is not known.

FILIPINOS ARE UGLY

Rumors of a Plan of Insurgents to Attack Manila.

AMERICANS READY FOR IT

Two Natives Killed by Sentinal Whom They Attacked—The Advance of an Insurgent Party—Trouble Incited by Insurgent Newspaper.

Hong Kong, Jan. 23.—From an apparently trustworthy source it is learned that the Americans at Manila made every preparation to meet an insurgent attack upon the city on January 15. It is now reported that the plans of the Filipinos were changed late on Saturday, and the contemplated attack was indefinitely postponed.

Though the excitement is now partially allayed and the troops are not so rigorously confined to their quarters, there is still fear of an uprising of the natives. The insurgent leaders admit that they may not be able to restrain them.

Several incidents occurred in Manila between January 10 and 13 showing the intensity of the situation following Aguinaldo's proclamations.

Private Fred Schmidt of Company F of the South Dakota regiment was attacked at an outpost by two natives, whom he shot dead after he had received a severe knife wound. A native engineer of the Manila water works, seven miles out of the city, was murdered and robbed by a band of twenty natives, armed with guns. Private Anderson of the Pennsylvania troops, while pursuing an escaping native convict, was attacked by the latter's friends and wounded with a knife.

A party of fifty insurgents advanced upon the outpost held by the Montana troops on January 13. The Americans retired and Brigadier General Otis went to the scene. After a consultation the insurgent commander withdrew his men to their former position, saying that the Lieutenant in command of the advancing party had acted without authority. This the nearest approach to hostilities that has yet occurred.

The Americans have acted with great forbearance. These manifestations by the insurgents are undoubtedly not countenanced by Aguinaldo, but they are indicative of the increasing animosity of the masses against Americans.

It is reported that there is a secret insurgent malitia in Manila 5,000 strong. Filipino officers who have attempted to obtain recruits in Manila have been arrested. The insurgent newspapers, which are now published outside Manila but are circulated in the city, are endeavoring further to incite the natives by asserting that the American soldiers are deserting and by accusing the Americans of entering into conference with the Filipinos only for the purpose of delaying matters until the arrival of reinforcements from the United States.

Letters pleading allegiance and protesting against annexation continue to be received by the Filipino Government at Malolos from the provinces throughout the island of Louzon.

After the King Million.

Newport, R. I., Jan. 23.—Mr. J. L. Anderson of Ohio, who has been here examining the family record of the late multi-millionaire, William H. King, has gone to Providence to continue his work. The members of the family which he represents reside in Missouri, Illinois, Ohio and Kentucky. They think from relics and traditions handed down to them that they are related to the Kings, but do not mean to make any claim until the relationship is established.

The Kings have placed information at his disposal. He says the family he represents are children and grandchildren of Sophia King, a sister of the late millionaire, who eloped at an early age. The family record here shows that King had only one sister. She was named Anne and she is buried here. Mrs. E. A. Webster-Ross's counsel says that these people will in no way affect her case.

Lynching in Ohio Frustrated.

Zanesville, O., an. 23.—A mob Saturday attempted to lynch E. S. Wright, charged with assault. Wright was arraigned in a justice's court and bound over. While the hearing was in progress a crowd of over five hundred gathered outside and threats of lynching were frequently made.

The prisoner was slipped out of a rear door to escape the crowd, but was detected and quickly followed. Four officers, with drawn revolvers, surrounded Wright and finally landed him safely back in jail.

Something Spain Escaped.

Rome, Jan. 23.—The Garibaldians commemorated with a dinner Saturday evening the anniversary of the battle of Dijon. Ricciotti Garibaldi, son of the Italian liberator, made a speech in which he declared that the Garibaldians were invited to take part in the war of the United States against Spain for the deliverance of Cuba, but they refused the invitation, not being certain that the United States really desired the independence of Cuba. He exhibited documents to prove his assertions.

Europe's War on Anarchists.

London, Jan. 23.—A dispatch from Rome to the Central News says that the Italian government is about to send a diplomatic note to the powers that participated in the recent anti-Anarchist conference, inviting them to state definitely their conclusions relative to the proposals considered.

When the answers of the powers are received Italy will call a conference of the ambassadors with a view of taking united action.

New President of Brown.

Providence, R. I., Jan. 23.—The new president of Brown University has been selected by the committee appointed by the corporation of the college for that purpose. His identity is not yet disclosed, nor is it to be until the meeting of the corporation on February 8.

Nervous Dyspepsia

To Gain Flesh, to Sleep Well, to Know What Appetite and Good Digestion Mean.

MAKE A TEST OF STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS.

No trouble is more common or more misunderstood than nervous dyspepsia. People having it think their nerves are to blame and are surprised that they are not cured by nerve medicines. The real seat of the mischief is lost sight of. The stomach is the organ to be looked after.

Nervous dyspeptics often do not have any pain whatever in the stomach, nor perhaps any of the usual symptoms of stomach weakness. Nervous dyspepsia shows itself not in the stomach so much as in nearly every organ. In some cases the heart palpitates and is irregular; in others the kidneys are effected; in others the bowels are constipated, with headaches; still others are troubled with loss of flesh and appetite with accumulations of gas, and sour risings and heartburn.

It is safe to say that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will cure any stomach weakness or disease except cancer of the stomach. They cure sour stomach, gas, loss of flesh and appetite, sleeplessness, palpitation, heartburn, constipation and headache.

Send for valuable little book on stomach diseases by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich. All druggists sell full-sized packages at 50 cents. Prof. Henry W. Becker, A. M., be well known religious worker and writer of St. Louis.

"Some weeks ago my brother heard me say something about indigestion, and taking a box from his pocket said 'Try Stuart's Tablets.' I did, and was promptly relieved. Then I investigated the nature of the tablets and became satisfied that they were made of just the right things and in just the right proportions to aid in the assimilation of food. I heartily endorse them in all respects, and I keep them constantly on hand." 19eod 9

This statement is condensed from a somewhat extended testimonial of a roller coverer living in North Carolina, who had dyspepsia, so the doctors said, in its worst form, for seven years: "In 1893 I had to give up work. I had nervous dyspepsia, palpitation of the heart, and couldn't stand any excitement. All I could eat without pain was bread and water. I couldn't sleep a wink some nights, and three hours out of the twenty-four was all I ever got. I was a physical and mental wreck. I tried all kinds of sarsaparilla, bitters, tonic, pepsin, liver and kidney medicine, but kept on getting worse. A friend prevailed upon me to try Ripans Tabules, and I noticed a change in a few days, for I could eat pork, cabbage, bacon or anything. Now I can sleep eight hours, and feel better than I have for years."

A new style packet containing THE RIPANS TABULES in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at some drug stores—Ask FOR THEM. This low-priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical. One dozen of the five cent cartons (12 tabules) can be had by mail by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (TWELVE TABULES) will be sent for five cents.

FAILURE FOR CZAR'S PEACE PLANS.

Some of the Proposals Said to be too Radical for Europe.

London, Jan. 23.--Even warm supporters of the czar's peace appeal are astounded at the infeasibility of several items, which, according to the circular of the Russian minister of foreign affairs, Count Muravieff, will be submitted to the congress, and they predict a fiasco for that part of the programme which includes proposals to veto the use of any new weapon or explosive, to place a restriction upon the use of existing high explosives and to put a veto upon sub-marine boats and rams.

All these proposals are regarded as simply impracticable. The idea of the exclusion of the use of sub-marine boats is scouted in France, where the alleged success of the Gustav Zede has caused great elation, and has conjured up visions of terrible havoc among the British ironclads in case of war. The French papers call for the creation of a swarm of sub-marine boats. The Matin has started a subscription to build a second Gustav Zede, and the scheme has been enthusiastically taken up. The sum of 126,708 francs has been subscribed.

The British naval authorities, however, do not seem to be seriously alarmed at the French invention, which, they say, has not yet solved the difficulty of directing a course under water.

They say that, on the contrary, in order to fire torpedoes successfully sub-marine boats needs to rise to the surface. It is persistently alleged, moreover, that in spite of the glowing reports sent to the French press, the French naval authorities are not yet satisfied, and that experiments to test various modifications will have to be made before they are justified in building a number of these boats.

Major General Wm. Gatacre, in command of the southeastern military district, who figured prominently in the recent Afridi and Soudan campaigns, commanding the British division in the Soudan during the advance on Khartoum and Omdurman, has not much faith in the success of the czar's peace scheme. Addressing a meeting of veterans last week he referred to the circular and said that he was a great believer in fostering the fighting instincts of Englishmen. He added:

"That good soldier, Emperor William, went to the top of Mount Carmel and preached peace to the whole world and meant it--till he returned to Berlin, when he sold to the sultan of Turkey 160 of his best Krupp guns. That was one side of the question."

TO PUSH THE TREATY THIS WEEK

Senator Gorman Says There Will be No Organized Filibuster Against It.

Washington, Jan. 23.--Chairman Davis of the Senate committee on foreign relations, will call up the peace treaty in the Senate early this week and use every effort to push the measure through to speedy ratification.

Senator Gorman, who is leading the opposition to the treaty, has broken his silence in regard to the policy he expects to pursue in the Senate debate. He declares that he does not intend to countenance filibustering, as a means of defeating ratification, but that, on the contrary, he expects to oppose the treaty by fair tactics in ordinary debate. Mr. Gorman has made this statement:

"I have always insisted that the treaty involves great questions which should and will receive full consideration. This being the case, I could not ask the Senate to vote on the treaty before the matter has been discussed. As the friends of the treaty have not yet asked the Senate to proceed to its consideration, it cannot be truthfully said that any opportunity which is desired for debating its provisions has been afforded, and thus far there has been nothing to oppose. When the treaty is taken up, however, we shall discuss it, because we believe that the sentiment toward expansion will decrease in this country, and that the future will demonstrate that we are on the right side of this question."

"Will there be any organized filibuster against the treaty?"

"No; on the contrary, if the supporters of the treaty, after fair debate has been had, shall ask that a time be fixed for a vote, no objection will be interposed so far as I am concerned. In other words, the treaty will certainly be voted on, if the administration desires a vote. Of course if the friends of the treaty deem it wise to postpone action until an extra session of Congress they are in a position to carry out their purpose."

Paul Jones Wreckage.

New Orleans, Jan. 23.--Three of the expeditions that went out to look for the lost yacht Paul Jones and her crew and passengers, have returned. The Maud brought back considerable wreckage, tables, blinds, etc., and part of a boat marked "Paul Jones," all found on Breton island.

The Zeta brought a number of pillows and cushions from Sable island The Winona found nothing.

The Winona and Maud are United States revenue boats which the government tendered to assist in the search.

No bodies were found, and if anywhere must be in some of the marsh pockets on the Louisiana coast.

Joint High Commission.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.--The joint American-Canadian commission Saturday had under consideration the Alaskan boundary question but without reaching a decision concerning it adjourned until Tuesday.

Rush to the Atlin Gold Fields.

ancouver, B. C., Jan. 23.--A rush almost equal to the Klondike rush in its zenith has set in here for Atlin. It is reported at the American consulate that the recent alien law will make little if any difference this year and that Atlin will be dug dry by next winter.

All Americans who want to get to Atlin will be there before the present law is enforced.

THE CANAL BILL PASSED

Measure Providing for Government Construction Adopted.

SIX SENATORS AGAINST IT

Bill Now Goes to the House Which May Pass a Substitute at this Session—Features of the Measure—Cost of the Work Limited to $115,000,0000.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.--Senatorial opponents of the Nicaraguan canal bill relaxed their vigilance for a short time Saturday afternoon and the bill was passed without a division before they knew what was happening.

There was a lull in the debate and the presiding officer put the question on the passage of the bill and announced it carried before any of the opponents called for the yeas and nays.

Senator Vest, Senator Caffery and other opponents of the Morgan bill were out of the chamber at the time.

When Senator Vest returned a few minutes later and learned what had been done he was greatly exasperated. He declared that it was unprecedentd to pass a bill of such importance without a roll call and with manifestly less than a quorum of the Senate present. He declared that each senator had a right to go on record for or against the bill.

Senator Morgan, having placed the bill in a parliamentary situation, where it was impossible to delay it further, was willing to allow a yea and nay vote, and he asked for and obtained unanimous consent for a roll call.

The vote stood 48 for the bill and six against it. The six senators who voted in opposition to the bill were Mr. Bate, Mr. Caffery, Mr. Cockrell, Mr. Mantle, Mr. Martin and Mr. Smith.

The bill as it passed the Senate is the original Morgan bill, with some important amendments. It proposes to construct the canal through the medium of the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua, the United States owning all the stock except that set apart for Nicaragua and Costa Rica and controlling the canal.

It provides that the capital stock of the company shall be $180,000,000, or one million shares of one hundred dollars each. The company is to call in and cancel all the stock paid for or partially paid for, except that set apart for the government of Nicaragua and Costa Rica, and to enable the company to do this the secretary of the treasury is authorized to issue warrants of the United States to an amount not exceeding $5,000,000, the amount to be determined by three commissioners.

When the stock, with the exception of that issued to Nacaragua and Costa Rica, has been cancelled, the secretary of the treasury is to subscribe for 225,000 shares of the stock of the company.

The board of directors of the company is to consist of eleven directors, of whom nine are to be appointed by the president of the United States, one by Nicaragua and one by Costa Rica. Directors appointed by the United States are not to be interested in any way in any contract connected with the construction or operation of the canal. The directors are each to receive $5,000 per year, except the president of the board, who is to receive $6,000.

The company, with the consent and approval of the president of the United States, is authorized to contract with responsible persons, citizens of the United States, for the construction, completion and equipment of the canal within a period of six years from the passage of the act. The work is to be under the constant and immediate supervision of the engineer department of the United States army, and is not to exceed in cost $115,000,000, which amount is appropriated out of the treasury of the United States and made a permanent appropriation.

At the beginning of each quarter the secretary of the treasury is to place at the disposal of the directors sufficient money for all wor kto be done during that quarter, the amount to be determined by estimates of the work that would be done.

For security for the repayment of this money to the United States a lien in favor of the United States is declared on all the property of the company.

The neutrality of the canal is to be guaranteed by the United States, and it is to be used by all nations on equal terms as to tolls. By an amendment adopted Saturday the president is given the widest power—in the event of the failure of the present canal project--to negotiate for the control of and for the right to construct and perpetually control some other canal connecting the Atlantic and Pacific. The president is requested to negotiate for the abrogation of any treaty obligations that may in any way interfere with the ownership and perpetual control of such canal.

The bill will now go to the House of Representatives and be referred to the committee on interstate and foreign commerce, a majority of which is opposed to the Maritime Canal Company. If this committee reports a substitute which can pass the House, and the bill goes to conference, it is possible that a law may be enacted before the end of the session.

Terrific Gale in England.

London, Jan. 23.--A terrific southwesterly gale, accompanied by heavy rain and floods swept over England on Saturday.

The Windsor race course is submerged and the valley of the river Conway, in North Wales, resembles a lake. The river Towy, in South Wales, is a roaring torrent, which has swept away and broken into pieces a railway bridge spanning the stream.

The steamboat service between Dover and Calais is suspended.

The Michigan Sails.

Savannah, Ga., Jan. 23.--The transport Michigan sailed Saturday afternoon for Havana with Batteries A, D, F and G of the Second Artillery, including Grimes's battery. The Chester is expected to-day and will take the thirty-first Michigan regiment.

AGUINALDO'S NEW ENVOYS.

Men Sent to Establish a Junta Arrive at Washington.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.--Dr. Jose Lozada, Senor Juan Luna and Captain Marti Burgos, the Filipinos commissioned by Aguinaldo to establish a Filipino junta here, arrived in Washington Saturday. They are all men of good appearance. All three are natives of Manila, but were educated in Europe.

Dr. Lozada is a physician and professor of medicine in the only college in the Philippine islands. Senor Luna is one of the leading literary men of the islands and is a painter and a poet. Captain Burgos is the only one of the trio ho speaks English fluently. He is a nephew of Bishop Burgos, who was shot by the Spaniards as a traitor when, at the beginning of the Philippine revolt, he espoused the cause of the Filipinos and aided in the preparations for war.

Concerning their mission to Washington Dr. Lozada said:

"We have come here as the representatives of the Philippine government, of which General Amilo Aguinaldo is president. We are here under sealed orders from our president to Senor Agoncillo, who is the ambassador and plenipotentiary to the United States. We will place ourselves under his direction for the single purpose of securing the recognition of the Philippine government by the United States. How such recognition will be brought about, of course, I am not at present able to state, although we have outlined a plan of action and will begin work at once, always, of course, in a diplomatic manner. Much will depend upon the ratification or rejection of the peace treaty now before your Senate or its possible amendment. As yet, the American government has not defined its policy toward the Philippine islands, but it is our aim to secure absolute independence, to which we are justly entitled, as much and even more so than the United States were from Great Britain."

Asked what the Filipinos under Aguinaldo would do if the American forces now before the city attempted to land, Dr. Lozada said it had been a month since his departure from the Philippines and he did not feel at liberty to express an opinion on the subject.

"The Filipinos," he continued, "have more than forty thousand arms in the islands and plenty of ammunition. Most of these guns, as well as the ammunition, in fact practically all, was captured from the Spaniards and surrendered by them to us. We have not had to purchase munitions of war. The Viscayas have united under the command of President Aguinaldo, and their representatives, as well as those of the island of Mindanao, have asked to be admitted to the Filipino confederation, so that the authority of the Filipino government extends over the entire islands, with the exception of the city of Manila. We have established courts of justice, something which was practically unknown before in the islands, and in every way we have shown to not only the United States, but to the whole world, our capacity and ability to govern ourselves."

Quesada for Annexation.

Detroit, Jan. 23.--At a dinner at Ionia, Mich., Saturday night, Senor Quesada, the Cuban patriot, responded to the toast, "The Present and Future Relations of Cuba to the United States."

Senor Quesada said that the Cubans are willing to abide by the promises of the administration. Those who said differently, he declared, did not know the Cuban character.

"The American flag is sufficient for him to love and obey," said Senor Quesada, "and in time our star shall take its place in the stars of your galaxy."

This was greeted with great enthusiasm. Senor Quesada was interviewed later and said:

"The immediate annexation of Cuba is not to be thought of. The day when the Cuban republic is placed on its feet and the Americans have redeemed their promises, that day 95 per cent. of my countrymen will gladly vote for annexation, and this is the inevitable outcome of the struggle."

Takes Poison by Mistake.

Troy, Jan. 23.—Mrs. William Hutton, Jr., wife of Assemblyman Hutton of the Second district of Rensselaer county, died in Troy, Saturday afternoon by taking a dose of strychnine in mistake for medicine. After drinking the poison Mrs. Hutton realized her mistake, and her physician was summoned. Upon his arrival Mrs. Hutton's words indicated that there had been no intent at suicide.

"I believe I have done something that will cause my death," she said, and expired.

Mrs. Hutton had been for some time a sufferer with a nervous affliction, and was accustomed to take medicines. She is survived by her husband and a son. She was the only surviving child of William Kennedy, who is associated in the brewing business with Senator Edward Murphy, Jr.

Had she outlived her father she would have been heir to nearly a million dollars, as her father is one of the wealthiest residents of Troy.

Our Troops Near Iloilo.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.--It is said at the war department that the reports received from General Otis about the landing of United States troops on Guimaras island, near Iloilo, did not show that the troops had formed an encampment on the island.

They still retain their sleeping quarters on the transports, but the greatest freedom is permitted the men in going ashore.

The American soldiers, according to the latest reports, were becoming friendly with the natives, and this association was having a good effect in removing the suspicion with which the Filipinos regard the Americans.

A Dubious View.

The recent agitation concerning the condition of the city sewage beds and the great howl of indignation that has come from Dunellen people, has attracted the attention of the Newark Sunday Call, and yesterday that paper printed the following editorial:

There is renewed agitation in Dunellen and vicinity over the condition of the Plainfield sewage disposal works. During the recent cold weather, it is said, the filtering beds became clogged, and it is asserted that the crude sewage has been passing into the stream. This recent complaint is only a little more serious than those which preceded it, and there is a loud demand that "something should be done." East Orange went through a like experience and abandoned its plant, and Summit is a worse example than Plainfield. These three comprise the notable instances of efforts at intelligent sewage disposal in this vicinity. Each cost a good deal of money and each is a failure. The plans were not bad, although probably not on a large enough scale; but the trouble came in operation. The cost of operating is large, the necessity for expensive changes is frequent, and there is a disposition among local authorities to object to expenditures, while work which requires special skill is placed in the hands of political appointees.

People sometimes marvel at the vast expenditures that fall upon large cities for maintenance of the municipal government, but it is a fact in most cases the larger the city the smaller the cost per capita of people. For instance, the president of the Newark Board of Trade gives the following facts and figures of comparison of cost of local government between the New Jersey metropolis and a number of neighboring towns and cities. The cost to Newark is $7.14 per capita, Orange $8.15, West Orange $16.01, Montclair $20 33. The tax rate in Newark was $2.10 last year, in East Orange it was $2.50, Orange $2.76, West Orange $3.98 and Montclair $3.24, and yet in Newark there were large improvements to make the rate higher than usual.

Morristown has decided to appeal from the Supreme Court decision that she is not a third-class city, but just a plain, ordinary town, which has falsely assumed too many citified airs. With its horse shows, national golfing matches and many other events that attract the eyes of the world towards them, it is, indeed, galling for the Morristown people to think that they rank but as a country town. Since we Plainfielders got into the second-class of cities we look patronizingly upon our elite friends over the Watchung spur.

We wonder if John Kean will be able to say when he has been elected United States Senator by the New Jersey Legislature, as Senator Hawley has just said after being chosen by the Connecticut Legislature, that the expenses incident to his election were only $3? We imagine that it has cost Mr. Kean at least $7 to be elected United States Senator.

A correspondent writes to The Daily Press to know what has become of the petition presented to the Common Council a year ago asking for the establishment of a drinking fountain for man and beast in the eastern section of the city. It looks as if it had fallen by the wayside the same as many other suggestions that require expense.

Two of Asbury Park's prettiest damsels have recently taken to the style of winter bathing in the old ocean. If that sort of thing is patterned after to any great extent struggling M. "The Heart of Chicago," Lincoln J. Carter's spectacular comedy drama, will be produced at Music Hall tomorrow night. It contains a story of extraordinary power, well told and relieved by many bright moments of clever comedy. The interpreting company includes some very clever people who ought to do full justice to the thrilling story. All the scenes and incidents are located in the great Western Metropolis, and the story runs through the space of time between the great fire and the World's Fair. We are promised an abundance of handsome scenery, wonderful mechanical effects and mysterious electrical devices. Chief among these many scenic features are the vivid reproduction of a section of the great fire and the wonderful advancing locomotive, which is seen to approach rapidly from apparently miles away and brings up at the footlights full-sized and perfect. This effect is covered by twenty-five patents.

WHITE'S WHITE SALE
THE WHITE GOODS EVENT OF THE SEASON.
Encouraged by the marked success which has attended our previous Muslin Underwear sales, we have made a large purchase for this occasion. Our orders were placed during the makers' dull season. The work has been most thoroughly done, materials and trimmings are of the best, the fit, finish and size generosity is the same as if the garments were made under your own supervision—by your own home seamstress—and the prices are less than you would pay for bare materials.
NIGHT ROBES.
Every feature of this sale is special, but more special than other features will be the nightgown selling. They are among the best creations of master makers and are daintily trimmed with the prettiest laces, ribbons and embroideries. Prices 25c, 49c, 75c, $1 and $1.25.
WHITE SKIRTS.
Some plain with rows of tucks, some with cambric and embroidery flounces with lace insertions; all cut very full, nothing scant about them but the prices—25c, 35c, 49c, 75c to $1.25.
CORSET COVERS.
Trimmed with embroidery, torchon laces, or clusters of tucks with insertions, perfect fitting, high, square or V shape necks, made of fine cambric. Who would bother to make them when you buy at these prices—15c, 25c, 29c, 39c, 50c
DRAWERS.
Made with yoke bands, deep hamburg embroidery, umbrella, flounces or rows of tucks. As some of the best numbers are somewhat limited as to quantity it is advisable that you be among the early choosers as these lots cannot be duplicated at these prices—17c, 25c, 39c and 50c.

THE WOMAN'S WORLD

A Handkerchief Bag.

A handkerchief bag is extremely useful for travellers. When one goes away for two or three days with but a handbag or a small satchel one's handkerchiefs are very liable to become tumbled or soiled before one is ready to use them. But if kept in a little bag they will come forth as fresh and dainty as when they were put in. The making of the bag is within the power of any one who can sew and do simple embroidery.

Buy a quarter of a yard of fine shirting linen. Rinse and iron it before cutting. Cut off from one end five inches, and double for the bottom of the bag, making it an even square. On one half outline in the prevailing color of the embroidery the word, "Handkerchiefs." Baste a two-inch hem across the other piece of linen, and below this embroider scattered flowers. Violets, with stems but no leaves, lend themselves most readily to this design, and are suggestive for a handkerchief bag. Then join the ends, Stitch the hem, and three-quarters of an inch above stitch again, to make a place for the drawing ribbons. Put a frill of narrow lace on top of bag. Gather the bottom, divide into quarters, and sew on the bottom piece, first turning in the edges and basting them together. Get two yards of narrow violet ribbon—wash ribbon is preferable—for drawing strings. A little violet powder laid inside, or some drops of perfume, will add to the attractions of the bag as a dainty, acceptable gift.—New York Tribune.

Mrs. Gladstone's Influence.

A woman's silent influence over the affairs of a nation is shown in the career of Mrs. Gladstone. She is not a social or political leader, nor in any way a diplomat in petticoats. She is responsible, however, far more than is generally known, not only for her husband's vigorous health at his ripe old age, but also for his great ability to accomplish the amount of work which he has through his public life and since his retirement. When he was in office it was her ceaseless care that he should not be distracted by anything that she could prevent, words that meant remarkable self-abnegation. The interests of a growing family of seven children with a fond and proud mother might easily have made considerable demand upon the father's attention, but neither this nor any social duties, nor any household perplexities, were ever permitted to touch his leisure from statecraft cares. Her watchfulness has not decreased these later years; she is still his best physician, and saves his strength in innumerable ways, trifling in themselves, but important in the aggregate, and possible only to one who has made such saving a life study. Blessed herself with excellent health all her life, she wears her 83 years lightly, and still shows many traces of the handsome Miss Glynne, who captivated the rising young M. P. over half a century ago.—New York Evening Post.

Sleeping on the Stomach.

Sound, restful sleep, both by night and by day, is more easily induced if from the first the child be taught to lie on its stomach and face. The only necessary precaution against suffocation is the provision of a smooth, flat, somewhat hard hair mattress without a pillow. The advantages of this position are many. Some one has said that half the diseases of infancy result from keeping the stomach too cold and the other half from overheating the spine. By adopting the position suggested as the uniform one during the hours of sleep, the stomach and abdomen are kept so warm as to prevent colic and stomach ache, and materially to aid the digestive process, while the spine and back of the head are no longer overheated by the increased temperature of the sleeping child. It may be a coincidence merely, but it is at least a significant one, that all the children the writer has known to rest habitually face downward, have been unusually sound sleepers, and have enjoyed more than average good health.—Harper's Bazar.

To Wash White Feathers.

Soiled white feathers, after being washed, are dried by patting and shaking over the fire. A dull silver knife must be used to curl each fibre for the best effect. In preparing for washing, pour boiling water on shavings of white soap and a little soda. When a lather has been formed that is not too hot for the hand, each feather is washed separately. If the lather becomes dark-colored, another must be made. The rinsing water should be cold and a trifle blue.

OUR YOUTHS DEPARTMENT

They are all heroes;
Captain Jim,
Wounded and sore distressed,
With weak and wobbling dexter limb
And stitches in his breast;
And Colonel Price,
with one arm gone
And crippled Major Mears,
And eke the humble Private John,
Who's minus both his ears.

They do not bluster of their wars,
Nor tell how these occurred;
And of their stitches, stumps and scars
They never say a word.
Not one of all the band declaims
With fervor fierce and hot
Of circumstances, dates and names
Concerned with battles fought.

And yet I know that Major Mears,
And also Captain Jim,
Could tell us tales to fetch our tears
And make our eyes grow dim.
And even humble Private John,
Whose head's so smoothly round
Because both of his ears are gone,
Could cause our hearts to bound.

But modestly these heroes bold
Forgo temptations to Grow eloquent of days of old,
When hearts were brave and true—
Crippled in wretched wise and maimed,
They only wait the end—
To pass from view unsung, unfamed,
With not a mourning friend.

Vain be your sympathetic tears!
Alas! They cannot charm
Back to his head the private's ears
Nor mend the colonel's arm.
The only hope for these poor, racked
Victims of Baby Paul's
Is for some Congress to enact
A pension list for dolls.

—Chicago Record.

A Shark in Harness.

On the shallow lagoons of the outer Florida reef the bottom in ten feet of water is often pure white, so that dark objects resting upon it stand out with startling distinctness. One of the frequenters of the reef is a shark, known as the nurse, a huge fellow, 9 or 10 feet in length, who seeks the seclusion of the shallows and apparently goes to sleep. At least, pretends to, as heis seen lying perfectly quiet for hours, often permitting a boat to sail over him.

Naturally so sluggish a fish was easily captured, and one day, after watching the sharks swimming around the lagoon and refusing to leave the white shallow bottom, it occurred to a party of boys that the nurse shark would make an admirable steed, and immediate plans were formulated to capture one.

The sharks were most plentiful near a long, narrow island, and here the boys made their headquarters. Their mode of transportation was extremely primitive. The boat in which they crossed from the main island where they lived was the wooden casing of an arch some masons had been making, a boat-shaped affair, blunt at both ends. This had been caulked and provided with row-locks, and in it the boys made frequent excursions. The plan was to sail the boat quietly over the sharks, then lower a slip-noose down, and take one by the head.

The rope and a pair of grains were thrown into the boat, and, all being ready, the boys started on their expedition. They soon sighted a black spot, which told of the presence of a school of sharks, and a few moments later were quietly drifting over them. Not a word was spoken, and the greatest caution was observed, as one of the boys held the boat in place, while another lowered the noose. Unfortunately, an oar was dropped overboard, and, with a whirl of their tails, the big fishes were off in every direction.

In the excitement of the moment a third boy seized the spear, and hurled it at a shark that was passing beneath the boat. The weapon took effect, and the next moment the line, which was fastened to the pole, stiffened out with a jerk, whirling the boat round and round, and throwing the boys down violently into the bottom. When they picked themselves up they found the flat-bottomed boat dashing along at a rapid rate. They had secured a steed, though not in the manner anticipated.

Up the reef the nurse swam, now pulling the boat down dangerously near the water and sending out a big wave on either side, then turning with a rush to avoid a coral bank, that grew on the edge of the channel, and racing back to the starting point.

All this was very exciting. One boy held the line by bracing back; another took an oar and attempted to steer the craft in its wild race, while the other boy was merely an enthusiastic passenger. Suddenly the shark turned again, and the bow boy, rising to see what new direction it was taking, lost his balance and was jerked overboard. Before his companions realized fully the situation he was being towed along on the surface by the demoralized shark. The reef boys were as much at home in the water as on land, so the unforseen accident simply added to the sport. The remaining boys rowed the boat across the lagoon, cutting off the shark, soon picking up their companion, who had pluckily held the line during the exciting tow. The shark soon became weary of dragging the boat, and was then run ashore by his captors.—C. F. Holden.

TAX ON NAVAL PURSES

REASONS WHY OFFICIALS DON'T OFTEN SAVE MONEY.

The Social Demands They are Obliged to Meet, the Necessity for a Double Outfit of Clothing, and the Miscellaneous Demands are Expensive.

Few officers in the army or navy are able to save a cent from one year's end to another. This is because tremendous demands are made on them, chiefly for social reasons.

Many people believe that the Government furnishes naval officers with their uniforms and living expenses, in addition to their salaries. This is a mistake that makes the average officer groan when he hears it mentioned. As a matter of fact the clothing which an officer requires is a steady and heavy drain on his income. In most foreign countries officers wear their uniforms exclusively. Not so in this. Here it is the custom for them always to appear on shore in civilian's clothes, and they do so when abroad also. This necessitates the maintenance of two complete outfits.

It falls to the lot of the ward-room mess to do the greater part of the general entertaining. In the ward room of every ship of almost all nations there is a regularly appointed visiting committee, whose duty it is to pay official calls on all foreign ships of war, as well as those under their own flag.

The officers of cruising ships do their best to keep up the reputation of the service and the nation and try to extend to the officers and officials of other nations every courtesy and to treat them with genuine American cordiality. Spirituous liquors are not introduced on American ships, so the officers are confined to the use of light wines in their entertaining. This, however, does not prevent the mess wine bills from running up to the top notch, for on board of every American man-of-war there is a constant round of gayety in the ward-room.

The most abused and bothered man in the ward-room mess when it comes to entertaining is the caterer, who is not a hireling, but one of the officers of the mess, elected each month to do the catering.

Then the officers spend lots of money for curios, and are constantly being asked to contribute to all kinds of charities. People go aboard with all kinds of subscription lists and officers are expected to contribute, no matter whether the cause be worthy or unworthy. Once when an American cruiser was lying in Turkish waters an old man came aboard one day. He was a sleight-of-hand performer and had been for so long in the little village port nearby that all the inhabitants knew his tricks as well as he did. He made frantic efforts to get away, but could not persuade the steamship people to take him. His last hope was the American ship. He went there, made a simple, unvarnished request for the money to pay his passage to a far distant port which he wished to make, got it and left on the next steamer.—New York Sun.

The Witness Spoke Up.

"Now, sir, I hope we shall have no difficulty in getting you to speak up," said the lawyer, in a very loud, commanding voice.

"I hope not, sir," shouted the witness, at the top of his lungs.

"How dare you speak to me in that way?" angrily asked the lawyer.

"Because I can't speak no louder, sir," said the hostler.

"Have you been drinking?"

"Yes, sir."

"I should infer so from your conduct. What have you been drinking?"

"Coffee," hoarsely vociferated the knight of the stable.

"Something stronger than coffee, sir, you have been drinking! Don't look at me like that, sir!" furiously. "Look at the jury, sir! Did you have something in your coffee, sir?"

"Yes, sir."

"What was it?"

"Sugar."

"This man is no fool—he is worse!" stormed the counsel.

"Now, sir," turning to the witness, "look at me. What besides sugar did you take in your coffee this morning?"

The hostler collected his forces, drew a deep breath, and, in a voice that could have been heard half a mile away, bellowed out:

"A spune! a spune! an' nuthin' else!"—Texas Siftings

Taken Down a Peg.

On entering a third-class carriage of a train on the Underground Railway, I heard the following conversation. An old gentleman addressing, somewhat pompously, a black man who had squeezed himself into the seat, making the seventh person, said:

"Unfortunately I am in the wrong carriage; I have paid for a first-class ticket."

To which the black man made the following sarcastic reply:

"Oh, don't worry, sir, they both reach the station at the same time."—Answers.

Speyer. Die Orgel in der Gedächtnißkirche der Protestation soll nach einem Beschluß des pfälzischen Kirchengesangvereins, welcher neulich in Leipzig auf dem Deutschen Kirchengesangvereinstag systematisch begrüßt wurde, durch die evangelischen Kirchengesangvereine Deutschlands gestiftet werden. Jeder Kirchengesangverein will zu diesem Zwecke ein Kirchenkonzert abhalten. Bereits sind 17 Kirchenkonzerte abgehalten worden, durch deren Erträgnisse der Fonds für die Orgel auf circa 4000 Mark gebracht wurde.

Kaiserslautern. Redakteur Dörr der „Pfälzischen Volkszeitung" geht nach Hamm. Redakteur Otto Lang scheidet demnächst gleichfalls aus der Redaktion aus; an seine Stelle tritt Redakteur Walter aus Colmar.

Zweibrücken. Eine empfindliche, aber gerechte Strafe verhängte die Strafkammer über die beiden 14- und 15jährigen Sonntagsschüler Jakob Jost und Karl Klein aus Ixheim. Die Beiden hatten den Lehrer Scheid gröblich beleidigt. Jost hatte ihm sogar einen Fußtritt auf die Brust versetzt, so daß ein Rippenbruch eintrat. Jost wurde zu einer Gesammtgefängnißstrafe von 4 Monaten 14 Tagen, Klein zu 1 Monat Gefängniß verurtheilt.

Stuttgart. Dem im hochgelegenen Buoch weilenden schwäbischen Dichter Pfarrer Hiller, der dieser Tage sein 80. Lebensjahr vollendete, brachte der hiesige Liedertranz aus diesem Anlaß eine Ovation dar.—Vor mehreren Monaten war beschlossen worden, dem Vorstand des Stadtpolizeiamtes den Titel eines Polizeidirektors, dem Oberkommissär denjenigen eines Polizeirathes und den Kommissären den Titel Polizei-Amtmann zu verleihen: die Stadtdirektion hat hierzu die Genehmigung nicht ertheilt.

Cannstatt. Das Gesammtquantum des im vergangenen Herbst unter der Kelter bereiteten Weines beträgt nur 424 Hektoliter, ein Ergebniß, wie es geringer kaum je vorgekommen. Nach dem Mittelpreis ist der Geldwerth rund 26,400 Mark. Dies ist der geringste Ertrag seit mehr als 50 Jahren.

Heidenheim. Der König hat dem Bauern und Steinbruchbesitzer Anton Pharion in Steinheim die Verdienstmedaille des Kronordens verliehen. Pharion leitet mit außerordentlichem Geschick die Ausgrabung und Bewahrung der in seinem Steinbruch gefundenen Versteinerungen. Seit Jahren hat dieser unter den Sammlern wegen seiner prächtigen und riesigen Exemplare berühmte Steinbruch einen Weltruf, und sein Eigenthümer, der einfache Bauer Pharion, der die ersten Versteinerungen darin entdeckte, hat sich im Umgang mit Gelehrten und Forschern selbst ansehnliche mineralische Kenntnisse gesammelt und sich zu einem ausgezeichneten Konservator ausgebildet.

Neckarsulm. Ein 13jähriger epileptischer Knabe, der die hiesige Volksschule besuchte, bekam dieser Tage, als er an der Schultafel mit Rechnen beschäftigt war, einen epileptischen Anfall und fiel rücklings so unglücklich vom Podium herunter, daß er das Genick brach und sofort verschied.

Neresheim. Das neugefundene Marmorlager bei Waldhausen scheint zu halten, was es versprochen hat. In dem erst entdeckten Bruch finden sich Blöcke von 40 Centnern. Ein weiteres Marmorlager wurde in der Nähe aufgefunden. Es liegt nahezu offen da und liefert Marmor nicht nur in Blöcken, von denen einer anderthalb Kubikmeter mißt und rund 50 Centner wiegt, sondern auch, was von größter Bedeutung ist, in einer Schichte.

Ulm. Die hiesige Staatsanwaltschaft hat hinter dem flüchtig gewordenen Geschäftsführer der sozialistischen Genossenschaft „Zum weißen Rößl," Maler Frey, welcher bedeutender Unterschlagungen beschuldigt wird, einen Steckbrief erlassen.

Baden.

Lörrach. Die hiesige Vorschußbank, zur Zeit 1600 Mitglieder stark, beabsichtigt, sich in eine Aktiengesellschaft umzuwandeln, an der sich alle Mitglieder durch Uebernahme von Aktien betheiligen können. Die Stammantheile betragen 400,000 Mark, die Reservefonds über 500,000 Mark.

Mannheim. Eine Massenbeerdigung fand kürzlich hier statt. Die Reste von 145 Leichnamen, die in den Gerüsten der im Umbau begriffenen Schulkirche am Schloß ruhten, wurden in 18 neuen Särgen vereinigt nach dem neuen Friedhof überführt und dort in einer gemeinschaftlichen Gruft beigesetzt. Die zum Theil künstlerisch werthvollen Grabdenkmale kommen in die neue katholische Kirche im Osten der Stadt.

Pforzheim. Aus Mißmuth über den unbefriedigenden Geschäftsgang in der Bijouteriewaaren-Branche hat der Bijouteriewaaren-Fabrikant Friedrich Kleffel seinem Leben mittelst einer Revolverkugel ein jähes Ende gemacht.

CHAPTER XI.

The following morning Constance's bedchamber was like a conservatory of flowers. There were bouquets from the scene shifters, expectant of a fee from the new prima donna, from the chorus also to insure that its good graces should be recognized in monetary form, from the orchestra, from the orchestra leader, from the claque, a bill of 300 francs for so called "gratuitous services" from Geoffroy; from Desmoulins, from De Lacaze, from Stormouth, from the World, the Flesh and the Devil, from the entire Pension Picaud, and from numerous persons whom Constance had forgotten, but who availed themselves of this auspicious occasion to refresh her memory of them.

She had not yet risen. With newspaper clippings of every size and hue beside her she nestled among her pillows. Most of the printed criticisms were ecstatic in their praises. The new prima donna was compared with every song bird of the planet. Her grace was lauded to the skies. Her voice was denominated "the sweetest the new world has yet sent us." Her acting was universally deplored. This did not disconcert her, as she had expected much worse, and rejoiced at any evidence of good will. She entirely ignored the fact that the criticisms had been coerced by Priscilla's diplomacy. She was ignorant of the true inwardness of professional human nature. It was only later she discovered that just this outspoken praise of her was the direst calamity which could have befallen her.

Today she was happy, strangely, dreamily happy; contented, like a sick child convalescing from long days of pain and weakness amid her faithful friends, no longer buffeted by the storm tossing in the past, which she now contemplated with a shudder and wondered fearfully at having passed through unscathed. The sympathy in Doxie's face had been the first evidence she received of how great and brave had been her fight in the face of circumstances unsuspected in the realm of home, girlhood and loving care.

Doxie called early and left a message that he would take her for a walk that afternoon. Priscilla would not hear of Constance returning to the pension, for the present at least. She petted and cosseted her inordinately. She astonished Constance by informing her succinctly during the course of that long happy morning that she had given up the stage.

"What changed you in your purpose?"

"Things," returned Priscilla airily. She began a conversation on a totally different subject. Constance had signed a three years' contract with Geoffroy to sing when called upon, to learn a new opera in 15 days if required, to remain in the city all summer, through all the opera season, as well as winter, unless able to present a doctor's certificate that she was so ill she required a change of air and numerous other petty details which she ignored at the time, but which later assumed gigantic proportions.

"Tomorrow," Priscilla announced, "the count calls to demand my hand, and dad arrives from New York." She was looking out of the window into the street. There was a flower cart on the corner, purple with Russian violets and yellow with mimosa. Constance glanced at her sharply. All she could perceive was the tip of a tiny ear and two hands clasped firmly behind their owner's waist.

"What are you going to do about it?" she inquired, with assumed indifference.

"What do you suppose?" said Priscilla.

"I know," asserted Constance positively, "that you will refuse him."

"What an idea!" ejaculated Priscilla sharply, turning suddenly and disclosing a pair of innocent wide eyes and a delicious mischievous smile. "What, may I ask, induces you to suppose anything of the kind?"

"Intuition," Constance remarked just as wickedly.

"What have you intuished?"

"Don't be a fool, Priscilla, and throw away your happiness."

"You are a fine person to counsel wisdom," cried Priscilla daringly. "How about Mr. Doxie?"

"Well, what about Mr. Doxie?"

"He is the man," Priscilla asserted delightedly, with intense conviction, "you sent away from you. I feel it in my bones."

"What makes you think so?"

"There was the sweetest look in your face last night," said Priscilla, "when you fell asleep, and, my dear, I saw Mr. Doxie give you one look at the supper table which taught me everything I wished to know. It was perfectly beautiful." This with an expression of supreme satisfaction which was in its way irresistible.

"He is the man"—

"Thank God!"

"I refused. I had not finished. What had you said to Mr. Stormouth last night before I came up stairs to put him in such a bad humor?"

"I?" cried Priscilla. "What could an insignificant young woman like me possibly say to so important a person as Mr. Stormouth to disconcert him in any manner whatsoever?"

"H'm!" Constance murmured. She was gazing at the ceiling. The end of the remark was incomprehensible.

"What did you say?"

"I said nothing," returned Constance.

"Yes, you did. You seemed to doubt the truth of my last statement."

"Far from it," remarked Constance coolly. "I believed it."

"Believed that what I said or did was of no importance to John Stormouth?" she asked rather shrilly.

"Exactly."

"H'm! I presume you consider yourself very clever."

"Not at all."

"A reader of character and so forth."

"By no means."

"Whatever you consider yourself," cried Priscilla irritatedly, "you never proved yourself so entirely at sea as at present."

"Why so?"

"John Stormouth," Priscilla announced superbly, "adores me. He simply worships the ground I walk on."

"Nonsense!"

"What do you mean by 'nonsense?'" Priscilla demanded. "What do you know about it anyway?"

"Nothing," said Constance. "I merely consider it a pity he cannot care for you, since you are so absolutely lovable." The implied compliment was administered apparently as salt to savor the uncompromising nature of the statement which preceded it.

"A pity he does not care for me!" Priscilla repeated scornfully. "Absurd! He is at my feet—literally at my feet."

"And you at the count's feet. The course of true love never did run smooth."

"I at the count's feet!" cried Priscilla. "I at the count's feet! Where did you get that idea?"

"Observation," Constance replied mendaciously. She was splashing like a fish now in her bath in an adjoining room and was obliged to keep up her end of the conversation under difficulties.

"For once," Priscilla stormed, with a stamp of her foot, which was happily concealed by the thickness of the rug upon which she stood, "for once you are mistaken."

"Indeed?"

"Utterly mistaken. I don't care the snap of my finger for the count, for 50 counts, for all the titles in Europe! There!"

"Admirable!" applauded Constance. "What's a count anyway?"

"That's just it. What's a count who doesn't count?"

"Zero," said Constance. Then, as though thoroughly imbued with the spirit of their exalted discourse, she added flippantly, "Whoever heard of a count who counted two, after all?"

To this obvious effort of the intellect Priscilla scorned to reply.

"I can't imagine," she began tearfully, as Constance emerged from her bath in a crash, looking like a rose leaf steeped in dew, and the two girls seated themselves before the fire with their nail polishers, "I can't imagine why anybody ever supposed for an instant that I desired a title."

"You did desire."

"I did not."

"Well, never mind. We won't discuss it. So long as you have altered your mind we won't quarrel." Then, very gently, she turned toward Priscilla. "You do love him, don't you?" she whispered in a wheedling little tone which was essentially girlish. "He is so entirely worthy of it. He has nothing so much as your happiness at heart. You have made him sufficiently miserable."

"I have not yet finished with him," interrupted Priscilla.

"What has he done to you to make you so cruel?"

"He has supposed," cried Priscilla, with intense indignation of a boiling over quality which would have filled the soul of a student in emotions with awe, "he has dared to suppose that I—I loved a title."

"Well?"

"A mean, miserable title, with a perfect reptile of a man attached to it—a man whom it makes my blood curdle to approach—whose glance is poison, whose touch is a disgrace."

"He was jealous."

Priscilla apparently did not hear.

"He has dared to think," she cried, "that I, Priscilla Delno, a God fearing woman"—this in a burst of palpable satisfaction at having mastered a phrase which, so to speak, filled the bill—"would stoop to pick up a miserable, middle aged, dyed mustached, muddy eyed little whippersnapper like that!"

"There was every reason to suppose it," returned Constance, biting her lips hard to keep from breaking into a ringing laugh. "You evinced no disgust for him in your treatment of him."

"Certainly not under the circumstances."

"What circumstances?"

"You," Priscilla answered tragically, "you ask me to name the circumstances? You must be blind, stone blind."

Constance stared and dropped her nail polisher.

"Priscilla, what do you mean?"

"Constance," said Priscilla, with tears in her eyes, "is it possible you have not guessed my reason for treating the count as I have?"

"What do you mean?"

"You, too, have misunderstood and reviled me?"

"Quite so," said Constance despairingly, unaware of what she was accusing herself.

"You have thought I intended to marry the count?"

"What else was I to suppose?"

Priscilla drew up her slight figure stiffly. "I will explain." And then, with a little half sob, half laugh, she threw herself on the rug at Constance's feet and put her arms about her.

"I did it for you, goose," she said.

"For me?" the other repeated, with great astonished eyes.

"For you. The Count Adolphe Francois Baradet de Lacaze is the musical

"I did it for you, goose," she said.

critic on the Figaro. The Figaro is the most influential newspaper in Paris. The game has been worth the candle." Then this able diplomat clasped her pink tipped fingers about her knees and fell to gazing at the fire.

"Priscilla," Constance voochsafed faintly, "you are a perfect darling. I am going to tell John Stormouth all about it."

Priscilla turned. Every feature was quivering. Her lips were white.

"Constance," she commanded, "leave John Stormouth to me. I will teach him that there are American girls and American girls. I am evidently one of the kind he has never even suspected."

"But, Priscilla"—

"Leave John Stormouth to me!" Priscilla repeated ominously.

CHAPTER XII.

On Thursday the conclave was held in the library.

Judge Delno was seated in a Francis I chair. His long pale hands, muscular and remarkable for their expression of reserved force, clasped firmly the carved arms. Priscilla leaned over the back.

Stormouth sat beside Judge Delno. There was a window behind them. It overlooked a court.

On the left of the judge were seated Miss Mildred Delno and Stephen Doxie. Facing him were Desmoulins and De Lacaze.

The proposition was submitted to the judge by Desmoulins, who repeated himself easily as he finished his peroration; but, unable to conceal entirely an inward perturbation, he tugged violently at one corner of his perfumed mustache. De Lacaze's face was the color of old wax. He sat intently considering the visible and invisible features of the case, his muddy eyes shifting furtively from countenance to countenance as Desmoulins accentuated the salient facts, made good his strength and kept out of sight as much as possible the weak points of the proposition.

Judge Delno listened. There is a silence which means nothing. There is a silence which hints at possible developments. Judge Delno's silence belonged to the latter order. At a glance he had taken in the unmitigated villainy of the two smug physiognomies which submitted themselves to his experienced scrutiny. He sympathetically nurtured the knowledge of Stormouth's policy, which was to expose the opposition plot to Priscilla in case she experienced any weakness in the direction of foreign suitors. He comprehended, in less time than it takes to write these words, the tools which his daughter and sister were supposed by their manipulators to exemplify under their practiced hands, oiled by incessant contact with the gambling methods, moral, mental and physical, brought to bear upon life's issues. His proud spirit was quivering with righteous wrath and a seething contempt for these specimens of a nation he had elected to despise.

To pit an American, vigorous, alive, armed to the hilt with tried capacity for innate godliness, firm in the knowledge of his personal integrity, against a Frenchman, talented, crafty, wicked and deliberately oblique in his methods, is like nothing so much as pitting a buffalo against one of those exquisite chameleons which lie along sun kissed walls in Spain, changing color with every movement. The buffalo confronts any contrary issue with a sounding bellow which announces at the start his intention. Then, head down, he surges wildly forward. If he is met with a counterthrust or a rally or is lassoed into reluctant, surly, temporary submission, he still worries and gives outspoken vent to his contempt for any method of attack less frankly courageous than his own.

What is perforce integrity to the buffalo is considered a barefaced lack of method by the chameleon. What reads ability or perspicacity or perfection of treatment to the chameleon is translated dastardly cowardice and bewildering and unnecessary complication by the buffalo. One is wily, insinuating and deceptive, rejoicing in treatment of warfare as a scientific problem wrought from the rough into a pattern unsuspected by any but the most artistic of intriguers; the other is a touch and go hero, with defiance for his first weapon, audacity for his second and stand and deliver exactions for his third.

Is the buffalo vanquished he storms and struggles, and in some cases dies in durance vile, but in any case vigorously unrenunciative of one iota of his theories or principles—just a great soul maltreated, pin pricked into recalcitrant submission. If the chameleon is mastered, he turns slowly in the sun, thus evading any perceptible evidence of failure, and, revealing himself of another color, shifts any responsibility by thus eloquently bidding his adversary believe he was not that chameleon, but his neighbor.

Judge Delno in the present instance held the characteristics of the buffalo to some extent, if not wholly. It had been his portion to deal with the worthy and the unworthy, with spurious and genuine metal. He had practiced his profession in one of the greatest metropolises of the world. He knew the elusive tendencies of villains, their dislike to calling a spade a spade, their nerves of steel and their methods of iron. He recognized, like all students of human nature, that there is more ability displayed in practiced villainy than is often considered tenable in the highways and byways of practiced integrity. In a measure he was crippled because in a strange country and among strange faces.

He listened to Desmoulins patiently. There was no evidence in his well governed countenance of his recognition of his adversaries' strong and weak points.

When Desmoulins had finished, Judge Delno inclined his head.

"I am to understand, then," he remarked, "that you place the case for your friend the Count de Lacaze, owing to his inability to speak fluently in our language."

"You are, sir," from Desmoulins.

Judge Delno turned toward De Lacaze. "You speak English, sir?" he demanded unexpectedly.

"I do."

"I am to understand that you wish to lay your title and your vast estates before me for consideration; that you have reason to trust that my daughter will reciprocate your regard? Is she assured I am willing she should thus follow her own inclination?"

The count bowed. "Mlle. Delno," he said, "has been so kind as to listen when I have told her of my intention."

"Is this so, Priscilla?"

"I told him," said Priscilla, very low, so low that only Stormouth and her father caught the words, "that if you gave your consent I would consider the matter."

"What," inquired the judge blandly, "is your income, count?"

This straightforward attack was a premeditated blow at his adversaries' suavity. It accomplished its purpose with miraculous swiftness.

The count stirred a little uneasily. Desmoulins darted at him a warning glance.

"My estates," he returned evasively, with a visible effort to seem unconcerned—"my estates, sir, would be considered sufficient guarantee in France to insure your daughter and her children against disaster should such disaster overtake us."

"Ah! Of what do those estates consist?"

"There is a property in Touraine," the count announced, "and one in Lombardy. Before my grandfather's estate was confiscated under the revolution he owned the entire village of Chambourliez, in the Vosges. When he was obliged to flee from Paris, taking every atom of personal property he could with him for fear of confiscation, he sold that village for 10,000,000 francs to obtain ready money."

"Were you his heir?"

Desmoulins rose. "You are subjecting my friend to a positive inquisition," he cried indignantly. "Things are not conducted after this fashion in France. A man of title is considered a sufficient parti without a fortune to back him up."

"A man of title, yes," returned the judge. Then for the first time he looked piercingly at Desmoulins.

"You, sir," he said, "instituted recently in New York a search in regard my daughter's family, property and fair fame, did you not?"

There was a movement all through the room. Priscilla lifted her head with an indignant flush, which spread from her forehead to her chin and remained there for five minutes. Stormouth stopped toying with a silver paper cutter which was lying on a first empire table near him. Doxie threw back his head with a grim smile.

"You are pleased," replied Desmoulins, just as coolly, exhibiting admirably strong nerve and undeniable capacity for ways and means esoteric and remarkable under fire, "to deal in enigmas."

"Perhaps. That word apparently conveys an opposite meaning in France from what it does in America. You deny, then, that you instituted a search into my daughter's connection in New York?"

"I deny nothing. I affirm nothing. It is customary in France when a man of title proposes uniting his family name with a person of insignificant parentage to inform himself of that person's past, present and future. We call it taking renseignements. The count may have thus informed himself without my instigation."

"By renseignements"—the judge pronounced the word with some difficulty—"you mean to convey that you require recommendations for your intended beneficiary, recommendations after the fashion of a master who demands of a cook references from his last place or a horse of which is exacted his pedigree by his would be purchaser?"

"Yes, monsieur."

The judge turned toward the count.

"Am I to understand that you made such inquiries?"

"I made no inquiries," returned the count. "Your daughter was responsible alone for my desire to unite my old name with youth and beauty."

The judge looked at Doxie. "Mr. Doxie," said he quietly, "you will oblige me by reading to these gentlemen the story of a nefarious plot which came to my notice a few days before I left New York. It is a letter, gentlemen," he said pleasantly, turning to Desmoulins and the count, "which was brought before me under peculiar circumstances. It was found in the pocket of a dead man. As it contained a signature strangely like yours, sir," speaking to Desmoulins, who was strikingly pale and was muttering something under his breath, "I made the comparison yesterday morning when I received your note requesting this interview. The signatures are one and the same. It seemed to me as pretty a case of compound felony as I have ever known."

"Find," Doxie read from a letter he had drawn from his pocket, "the record of the young woman's antecedents and social status. Is the old man gullible? Is the mamma to be coerced out of her ducats? Will the filthy lucre be forthcoming when the big move is made? De Lacaze is up to his ears in debt. He desires a wife with a big dot. If her antecedents are a little off color, so much the better. De Lacaze can hold then the whiphand and threaten exposure if his demands are rejected. The young woman's name is Priscilla Delno. Her address is 49 West Fifty-fifth street."

There was a dead silence.

Then a little figure sprang forward, a girl's figure in a pale pink gown, with a face like a flower, and tear filled eyes, and little shaking hands held forth toward Desmoulins.

"You said that of me," cried Priscilla, "of me, a girl who had never done you any harm, monsieur; a girl who had made you her friend; a girl who thought that men were friends and helpers, not liars?"

"Pah!" ejaculated Desmoulins. "One must live, mademoiselle," he added sullenly. The winning card was in the enemy's hand with a vengeance.

Over his stormy soul there swept a whiff of better days, days when he had stolen in, a little lad, among the sanctuary lamps, to prostrate himself before the image of the Virgin or a patron saint—days wherein he, before his version of life had burned his promise of peace and righteous attainment very low indeed, had dreamed dreams, too, of a land wherein love was a golden afternoon and— Pah, the game was up.

"Be silent, Priscilla. Come here, my daughter."

Priscilla took up her old stand behind her father's chair.

"Mademoiselle is melodramatic," Desmoulins began, in a stinging voice. "If she were Mlle. Brilla, for instance"—

"Silence!" hissed Stormouth violently. He had been gazing at Priscilla with a puzzled expression, which set the blood firm in her eyes and cheeks. He was breathing a little unevenly.

Desmoulins checked himself. Perhaps the game was not up yet. Who knew but that these foreigners, with their strange methods and novel plans of action, were in need of a social uplift after all? He would wait a little.

Judge Delno opened a book which lay on a table beside him. "I find," he remarked, after close perusal of a clause it contained, "that in France the penalty for compound felony is a fine. They draw it milder than in New York. There the penalty may consist in a forfeiture of estates."

"You have no evidence," returned Desmoulins, having by this time recovered all his suavity of demeanor and palpably stung into action, chameleon-like changing his color—"you have no evidence, sir, that that letter is not a bogus one."

"Pardon me. I have that evidence." The retort cut across Desmoulins' speech like a knife blade across a deer's throat.

"What evidence?"

"Your own signature."

"Ah!" The "ah" was slow and salient. "The letter you hold in your hand was not written by me. De Lacaze wrote it. I stood at his elbow. Inadvertently he signed my name."

"De Lacaze wrote it."

"Is that so?"

De Lacaze bowed his head silently. It was a poor move, he considered, a dastardly inefficiency, unworthy of the tempered steel of most of his methods, which it would have taken an expert to unravel or even suspect; but when the game was such a tempting one and the subject matter so delicious he considered that he might as well conduct his obvious strategy with visible ambiguity. She was so eminently desirable, that little maiden in the pink morning gown, with a flush like a strawberry stain in the smooth contour of her cheek, with that storm of revulsion in her flashing passionate eyes, the palpitating rise and fall of her breast. He set his teeth in his under lip hard. "Yes, monsieur, I wrote it," he continued quietly. "As mon ami states, he stood at my elbow. He has ever had a keen interest in my welfare. He has in more than one case dictated my letters, being more cognizant of ways and means foreign than myself, who have never quitted the shores of my beloved France." The latter sentence was accompanied by an ironical glance at Desmoulins which was not lost upon Judge Delno.

"Which proves," remarked the judge ironically, "that you indited both letters, count, since they are both in the same handwriting."

There was a pause.

De Lacaze answered nothing. If silence were the game, he would play the game of silence.

"Friendship!" cried Stormouth gayly. "Oh, beautiful and faithful friendship, how many sins are committed in thy name! In America, for instance, a man conducts his own lovemaking. I should counsel you to pursue that policy, count."

"One would be dull indeed," returned De Lacaze, with a snarl and a diabolical pertinence in the covert insinuation, "did not one perceive that the advised policy is your own, monsieur."

"Precisely," rejoined Stormouth. He stemmed peremptorily the venom of the counterthrust with a placidity which forced its import to glance off his own weakness, leaving it apparently as polished and unassailed as its propounder's impassive countenance.

The vegetable oils of which Ivory Soap is made, fit it for many special uses for which other soaps are unsafe or unsatisfactory.

CONNECTING LINK READY.

Trolley Cars to Run from South River to Plainfield.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, Jan. 23—Manager Radel, of the Brunswick Traction Company, has announced that Wednesday next the cars of the company will run over the new track and viaduct connecting the New Brunswick and Bound Brook line with the Bound Brook and Dunellen line.

Owing to the necessity of getting the consent of the Freeholders of Somerset and Middlesex counties to cross a line bridge over Green brook, and of building a trestle and viaduct after the right of way was secured, cars from New Brunswick have aun only to the outskirts of Bound Brook and passengers were transferred by stage to the line in Bound Brook. The stage service will be discontinued Wednesday next and the line will be be made continuous, establishing a trolley line from South River, eight miles south of New Brunswick to Plainfield, via New Brunswick, Bound Brook and Dunellen.

HORSETHIEF QUICKLY CAUGHT.

Animal Stolen From in Front of a Somerville Store Recovered.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, Jan. 23.—Charles Young, of Blackwell's Mills, drove into Somerville Friday afternoon and tied his horse on Main street in front of Case's drugstore. When he went after the rig an hour later it was missing. Mr. Young reported the matter to the authorities.

Detective Totten traced the thief to Millstone, where he captured the man, who had stopped to see his brother, who has a bakery there. The rig was subsequently recovered near Blackwell's Mills, where it had been left along the road.

The thief is Fred Boergup, of Baritan. He admits taking the rig. He is now in the county jail.

CONTRACTOR'S BILL WASN'T PAID.

Alderman Alleges Assault and the Dispute is to be Aired in Court.

(Special to The Daily Press)

Elizabeth, Jan. 23—In the Union County Court Saturday morning before Judge Vail, Niblo Palmer, a contractor at Roselle, was arraigned on an indictment charging him with assaulting Alderman James W. Hope, of Roselle.

The alleged assault on Alderman Hope was made because of his action as a member of the Street Committee in withholding a payment due Contractor Palmer for some work the latter performed for the city. The affair caused quite a stir in the borough of Roselle. Palmer pleaded not guilty and his trial was set down for January 25th. He furnished $500 bail for his appearance.

Story of a Slave.

To be bound hand and foot for years by the chains of disease is the worst form of slavery. George D. Williams, of Manchester, Mich., tells how such a slave was made free. He says: "My wife has been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Bitters, she is wonderfully improved and able to do her own work." This supreme remedy for female diseases quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, headache, backache, fainting and dizzy spells. This miracle working medicine is a godsend to weak, sickly, run down people. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50 cents. Sold by L. W. Randolph, Druggist.

DEATH OF A YOUNG WOMAN.

Miss Hattie Lunger, of Manning Avenue, Succumbs to Consumption.

The large circle of friends and acquaintances of Miss Hattie Lunger, daughter of Abram V. and Jane Lunger, of 87 Manning avenue, were shocked yesterday to learn of her death. She was twenty years, four months and sixteen days old. Death was due to consumption. The deceased was very popular and all who knew her were especially fond of her. She was an attendant at Trinity Reformed church and Sunday-school, and was a member of the class taught by J. P. Laire. She was a Christian and put her trust in her Heavenly Father. The funeral services will be held from her parent's home tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock, and the relatives and friends are respectfully invited. Interment will take place Wednesday morning at 11:30 o'clock at Whitehouse, Hunterdon county.

MR. MURRAY'S IDEA CAUSED GRUMBLING.

The Plainfield Assemblyman is on Deck Again.

WANTS TO HOLD BILLS A DAY

SESSION OF LESS THAN HALF HOUR IN ESTHER HOUSE WAS HELD.

Assemblyman Squire Introduces a Resolution Seeking to Do Away With the Engrossing Department—President Reed Presented With a Handsome Gavel of Whitewood—New Bills Introduced.

(Special to The Daily Press)

Trenton, Jan. 24.—The proceedings of the Legislature last evening were a repetition of those of last Monday, and both houses adjourned within half an hour after being called to order. The crowds in attendance were much larger and the people were standing in the galleries of both chambers.

Mr. Murray, of Union, introduced a resolution to keep all bills passed by the House twenty-four hours before sending them to the Senate. The reason for this resolution is that a member has twenty-four hours in which to move the reconsideration of a bill, and there is nothing to prevent the clerk from sending a bill as soon as it is passed and the Senate from passing the bill at once, so that it often happens that a member moves to reconsider a bill only to find that it has been sent to the Senate and passed. The Speaker referred the resolution to the Committee on Rules.

There was some grumbling on the part of members over the action of Mr. Murray in introducing such an important measure without consulting the party. It is said that if every member, on his own responsibility, should move to amend the rules in this style, confusion would be the result and the course of procedure would be somewhat chaotic.

A movement to abolish the old fashioned system of engrossing bills was started by Mr. Squire, who introduced a concurrent resolution providing for a committee of three Assemblymen and two Senators to consider the present system of engrossing bills. The resolution was adopted.

There has been much discontent for some years past over the system of engrossing bills. It is denounced as an antiquated method, abolished in most States and an unnecessary expense to New Jersey. What the outcome of the movement will be is difficult to foretell.

The committee on elections reported favorably bill No. 1, which increases the pay of election officers in municipalities having under forty thousand population. This was the bill introduced by Assemblyman Murray, and applies to Plainfield election officers.

In the Senate a ceremony which has taken place annually for several years back was gone through with. Down in Camden county there is an ancient citizen, now eighty-four years old, who each year makes a gavel of whitewood, grown on his farm, and has it presented to the President of the Senate. Senator Johnson presented the gavel, elaborately decorated with red, white and blue ribbons, to President Reed, and told of the donor's devotion to the Republican party and loyalty to the State of New Jersey. Mr. Reed accepted the gavel and returned his thanks in graceful terms.

Senator W. M. Johnson offered a concurrent resolution that the joint committee on appropriations make an investigation of the condition and requirements of the State Reformatory at Rahway and recommending to the present Legislature the policy which should be adopted in regard to its completion, the committee to have power to subpœna witnesses and employ assistance.

Senator Johnson explained that the resolution was in consonance with the views expressed in Governor Voorhees' inaugural.

Another bill by Mr. Abbott is intended to affect the case of Abraham Lincoln Graham, of Jersey City, who is fighting the Consolidated Traction Company for damages for the death of his child. Twice he has obtained a verdict of $5,000 in the Hudson county courts, only to have the same set aside by the highest courts as excessive. The third trial is about to take place. The bill provides that when suit is brought to recover damages for the death of an infant the jury shall not be compelled to limit such damages to the pecuniary damages resulting from such death, and the verdict as to damages shall be final and conclusive.

The delegation of Republican officeholders of Trenton, which was to visit the State House and protest against the retention in office of Democrats by the Republican administration did not appear.

OBJECT TO THE AWARDS

COUNTY BOULEVARD AGAIN HEARD IN COUNTY COURT.

Counsel for Property Owners Says That His Clients do Not Like the Idea of Joseph Hubbard Serving as a Commissioner.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Jan. 24.—In the Union County Court yesterday, Justice VanSyckel heard the arguments of the lawyers who appeared for the property objectors on Westfield avenue, in Union Township, against the awards made by the commissioners appointed by the Court to condemn land for the proposed county boulevard. Sherrerd Depue, of Newark, addressed the court in behalf of Annie J. Bronson, former Judge Gilhooly spoke for Mrs Antoinette Brown Blackwell, James W. Higgins, Peter C. Lee, Elias Hamilton and Mary Charlier; Lawyer Hall, of Jersey City, made an argument for Mrs. Franklin L. Pope, while Corra N. Williams, Summit, talked for W. P. Bonnell.

Mr. Gilhooly made the chief argument, and among other things said his clients strongly objected to Mr. Hubbard, of Plainfield, acting as one of the commissioners to condemn their land, on the ground that he was a brother of Director Hubbard, of the Board of Freeholders, and also because his son was one of the engineers who made the survey of the land on Westfield avenue, which the county wanted to appropriate for the new boulevard.

Justice VanSyckel, after hearing all the arguments presented, said the lawyers could submit their briefs to the Court, and that meanwhile additional testimony could be taken on the matter next Wednesday. The Justice did not say when his decision would be rendered, but it probably will not be given before next month.

County Attorney Codington, who represents the Board of Freeholders in the matter, did not address the Court, but will submit a brief.

FARMER PITTS' MURDERER MUST PAY THE PENALTY

SENTENCE OF DEATH IS AFFIRMED.

United States Supreme Court Decides That the Slayer of Farmer Pitts Must Be Hanged.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Washington, Jan. 24—The United States Supreme Court yesterday affirmed the decision of the Circuit Court for the district of New Jersey in the case of Louis Roesel, under sentence of death for murder. He applied to the Circuit Court for a writ of habeas corpus, which was denied him.

Roesel was convicted of the murder of Farmer James C. Pitts, at Summit, September 9, 1897, and was sentenced to be hanged. His case was appealed to the Court of Errors, which affirmed the decision of the lower court. Roesel's counsel, Frank Bergen, of Elizabeth, as a final resort, carried the case to the United States Supreme Court. It was on this appeal that the decision was handed down yesterday.

It will now be necessary to have a new date fixed for the execution.

George Manshanda, Roesel's accomplice, is now serving a twenty-year sentence in State Prison. He turned State's evidence and pleaded guilty to manslaughter.

Tired of Being Sentenced.

Elizabeth, January 24.—Frank Bergen, counsel for Louis Roesel, said yesterday afternoon that he had private information concerning the Roesel case. When asked if the decision of the United States Supreme Court meant that Roesel would now be hanged, Mr. Bergen would not reply.

It is understood that an effort will be made to obtain Executive clemency for Roesel, who has been sentenced three times to be hanged.

He said to one of his keepers when the death watch was set for the third time: "I am tired of being told by the Judge that 'you are to hang by the neck until you are dead.' Now shall I hang by the feet?"

THERE ARE MANY SEEKERS.

GOV. VOORHEES' FIRST YEAR IS A BRIGHT OUTLOOK.

Most of the Vacancies in Appointive Offices Occur the Second and Third Year of His Term—The Important Places to Be Filled This Year—The Essex County Prosecutorship Interesting.

(Special to The Daily Press)

Trenton, Jan. 24—Governor Voorhees will have a comparatively easy time of it this winter in the matter of appointments. He will not have many selections to make, as most of the vacancies he will be called upon to fill occur during the second and third years of his term. The important positions which become vacant this year are State Librarian, State Road Commissioner, State School Superintendent, all four places on the State Riparian Commission, all six places on the Board of State Prison Inspectors, the place of Henry J. West, on the State Board of Taxation, the county Judgeships in Burlington and Cumberland counties, and the Prosecutorships in Cumberland and Essex counties. Republicans now hold most of these places and many of them will be reappointed. The appointment of State Librarian does not rest with the Governor alone, but with the Library Commission, of which the Governor is a member. The Commission expects to meet Tuesday, and Colonel Hamilton's chances of reappointment are very good. Colonel Hamilton is a Democrat, but he opposed Bryan in 1896 on the silver issue and is generally understood to have voted for McKinley.

Road Commissioner Budd and School Superintendent Baxter, both Republicans, are almost sure to be re-appointed. There are some candidates for Mr. Budd's place, but it is not at all likely that Mr. Budd will be turned down.

The Riparian Commissioners and the Board of Prison Inspectors are bipartisan bodies. The likelihood of changes in the personnel of the Riparian Board is not so great as in the other. There are scores of candidates for appointment as prison inspectors. The places pay $500 each. The present incumbents are William H. Carler, Burlington; Edward H. Holcombe, Hunterdon; Samuel F. Stanger, Gloucester, Republicans; M. E. Staples, Hudson; William H. Brown, Essex, and Wells Lawrence, Morris, Democrats. The Riparian Commissioners are John I. Holt, Passaic; William Cloke, Mercer, Republicans; Willard C. Fisk, Hudson, and Miles Ross, Middlesex, Democrats.

Henry J. West, of Camden, the retiring member of the State Board of Taxation, is a Republican, and will be reappointed in all probability. If Major Carl Lentz, of the same board, is made Prosecutor of Essex, as seems most likely, then there will be another place for the Governor to fill. If political considerations alone control, there is little doubt that the Essex County Prosecutorship will go to Major Lentz for the good work he has done for his party. It is a fact, however, that the Major vigorously opposed the nomination of Governor Voorhees, and that such men as Frank M. Swayze and Robert H. McCarter would accept the Prosecutorship if it were offered to them. If the Governor consulted his own wishes he would probably name one of these, both of whom are well qualified, but the political leaders think Major Lentz should be appointed and the Governor may defer to their wishes.

Law Judge Gaskell, who is a Republican, will be reappointed in Burlington county. Thomas W. Trenchard, Republican State Committeeman, will doubtless be named for Law Judge in Cumberland. As to Prosecutorship there, the race is between J. Hampton Fithian, of Bridgeton, and Wheaton Berault, of Vineland. Both have strong support.

The Governor's inaugural address in two or three instances gives food for a good deal of speculation as to what the Legislature will do in the matter. The Rahway Reformatory is in an unfinished state, and it will require about $300,000 to make even a portion of it available for use, and probably another half million to complete it upon the plans adopted and partly executed. Last year no appropriation was made for continuing the construction, and were it not that the State Prison is overcrowded, the Reformatory is pushed to completion on

UNION AND MIDDLESEX POLICEMEN MET IN THIS CITY.

After a Short Business Session They Sat Down to a Spread—Mayor Rockfellow and Councilman Buckle Were Guests

The superior officers of the police departments of Union and Middlesex counties held one of their stated meetings in this city yesterday afternoon. The meeting was held in Captain Grant's office on Park avenue. The object of these meetings is to allow the police to become better acquainted and to talk over affairs that will help them in their work of keeping down lawlessness and crime. Heretofore the meetings have been held in Elizabeth, but this year Captain Grant invited them to come to Plainfield and enjoy the hospitality of the superiors in this city. The meeting was not a very long one, and nothing of any real importance was done.

After the meeting all adjourned to the Crescent Hotel, on Somerset street, where a spread was served by Rudolph Speigel. All of the good things of the season were served and the visitors were more than pleased with the treatment accorded. At the dinner there was an interchange of good feeling and many good stories were related. When the visitors departed for their homes they all thanked the Plainfield officers for the excellent time furnished to them. Among those present were Chief Tenney, Sergeants McGrail and Decker, Captain Long and Michael Gannon, of Elizabeth; Chief Harding, of New Brunswick; Chief Burke, of Perth Amboy; Chief Wright, of Rahway. There were also a few invited guests from this city, including Mayor Rockfellow and Councilman Buckle. It might be well to add that excellent speeches were made by the Mayor and Councilman Buckle, as well as by the officers. Those who received the visitors and provided the entertainment included Chief Grant, Sergeant Kiely, Roundsman Flynn and Frederickson.

MR. KEAN CHOSEN SENATOR

Both Houses of the Legislature Go Through Formality of Voting for Him.

(Special to The Daily Press)

Trenton, Jan. 24—John Kean, Jr., was elected United States Senator this morning by the New Jersey Legislature, both Houses voting for him.

JOHANSEN NEED NOT MOVE.

Jury in Justice Crossley's Court Granted a Non-suit.

Twelve good men and true declared yesterday that Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Johansen, who are occupying a farm in Washingtonville for which Charles Shertz, of New York, is agent, need not vacate the premises as Schertz was trying to make them do.

The case was tried before Justice Crossley and a jury in Spencer's Hall, and the trial occupied a great portion of the day. The Johansens are three months behind in their rent and owe $48. Shertz brought suit against them to eject them. The Johansens refused to go out, and fought the case. Lawyer S. S. Swackhamer, of the firm of Codington & Swackhamer, defended them, and raised three points why a non-suit should be given. The first was that there were plenty of goods on the place to have distrained instead of bringing the action. The second was that Shertz was acting as agent for his mother who died last August, and therefore he had no authority. The third was that the landlord had not lived up to his agreement in repairing the barns, etc. The non-suits were refused and the case given to the jury who were only out a few minutes and brought in a verdit of no cause for action. J. P. D. Kirch represented Shertz and it is not known what further action they will take to eject their tenants.

INSURANCE ALMOST COVERS LOSS.

Lawyer McNabb Will be Repaid for Most of the Damage Done by Fire.

Charles J. McNabb had $2,300 insurance on his Dunellen residence which was destroyed by fire yesterday morning. Mr. McNabb valued his property at $4,000, the house itself at $2,800. His personal property was insured for $1,000, which fully covers it, as most of the silverware, which was included in the inventory, was saved.

Mr. and Mrs. McNabb, when they were away, left their silverware with their next door neighbor, Mrs. George Harrison. They did this Sunday, and neglected to stop for it when they returned at night, so it is safe. Mr. McNabb intended placing more insurance on his house, but put it off until too late.

WILL FIGHT SHARKS FOR A BIG STAKE.

Ex-Cow Puncher and Sailor Visited Plainfield.

HIS WONDERFUL HISTORY.

ONE OF HIS SWEETHEARTS USED TO LIVE IN THIS CITY.

Failing to Find Her He Took to Drink—Was Arrested by Patrolman Vanderweg—Edwin Golden Challenged All Living Sharks—Wanted Judge Runyon for Referee—No Fighting, He Left Navy.

For many years he roamed the undulating prairies of the far west. For years he sailed the briny deep, fought the sharks and failed to fight the Spaniards. Disgusted that he should not see active service, Edward Golden confined his movements to the land and, last evening, wound up at the Plainfield city jail.

While Golden was not like the sailor you read about, having a girl in every port, he admired a number. One fair maid of his acquaintance came to Plainfield. That happened several years ago. He always vowed that, when fate permitted, he would visit the "Eldorado of the East" and see her. Yesterday Golden landed in Plainfield. He inquired for "his lady," but no one knew her. His efforts were fruitless and, tired of the unsuccessful hunt, he drowned his troubles in the flowing bowl.

Patrolman Vanderweg found the brave sailor, late of Uncle Sam's service, in a sad state last evening. He must have snapped a cable and drifted broadside to the gale, for he pitched and tossed and lost all steerage way. Golden finding himself adrift called out for help. Then the officer steered him into a friendly port and locked him up for the night.

When Golden had been with them a short while the police discovered that they were entertaining a remarkable character. It would take volumes to relate all the wonderful adventures of this wonderful man. As a "cow-puncher" on the western plains he made for himself a great reputation.

Then he tried his luck as a servant of Uncle Sam. He shipped as a fireman on the U. S. gunboat "Catskill" and served faithfully and well. But Golden's great ability appears in fighting sharks. He confindentally told his new-made friends that, given a club and a knife, he would lick any shark in the five oceans for $500 a side, time and place to be decided later. He also promised City Judge Runyon as referee of the fight. His list of victims among the shark family is a numerous one. Furthermore, he told his listeners that although he had killed many sharks in his time, not one had been able to kill him as yet.

Golden had his discharge with him when he was arrested; also a letter from Recruiting Agent Trowbridge, of Philadelphia. At first Golden explained that he had taken to drink last night to deaden the pain of neuralgia, but he afterwards confided the fact that sorrow at not finding "his lady" had also influenced him.

Golden was arraigned before City Judge Runyon this morning. The Judge heard his story and suspended sentence when Golden promised to depart immediately for Philadelphia and reship in the navy.

AVOIDING LAW SUITS.

Victims of the Lehigh Wreck Will Receive Damages.

(Special to The Daily Press.

Shamokin, Pa., Jan. 24.—Several persons who were in the New York excursion wreck at Dunellen have already received letters from New York lawyers who desire to place theire claims for damages sustained to person and property. Parents and wives of those killed are also in receipt of similiar letters.

P. J. Ferguson, of Shenandoah, claim agent for the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, who hurried to the scene of the wreck, has since personally visited some of the injured with a view of making settlement. Mr. Ferguson has been authorized to liberally remunerate all who sustained loss, either by the death of relatives, through injury or a time, and will personally visit every passenger on the ill-fated train who survived, together with relatives of those who were less fortunate.

It has been officially stated that the company will not enter into litigation with claimants if it can be avoided, and every passenger in the illfated train will be allowed liberal compensation for damages sustained.

—It is understood that there will be a number of new applications made this year to the City Council for the privilege to sell liquor.

THIEVES AT WORK EARLY

SMITH BROTHERS STORE BROKEN INTO RIGHT AFTER CLOSING.

J. A. Smith Was in the Office When He Heard Suspicious Noises—When He Investigated the Thieves Made Their Escape

A bold attempt at robbery was committed last evening soon after 7 o'clock at the grocery store of J. A. Smith & Bro., West Front street, but owing to the acute ear of J. A. Smith the thieves departed in haste and empty-handed.

Mr. Smith was sitting in his office quietly reading. Suddenly he heard a loud crash. His first thought was that the cat was chasing a rat about. Mr. Smith's mind was easy for a few minutes thinking that the cat was doing her duty, but when he heard footsteps about the cellar he began to wonder what was going on.

He went to the cellar door and called, "Who is there?" There was no answer. Just then he heard more foot-steps. Mr. Smith secured the assistance of two clerks and they proposed to go to the cellar. In the meantime the thief or thieves thought it best to make their escape, and by the time Mr. Smith and his clerks reached the cellar the intruders had disappeared.

The intruders had entered the cellar through a window from the alley alongside of the store. The grating had been removed and the window smashed, as well as much of the wood work was destroyed.

Mr. Smith has no idea as to who the thieves are and he died not reach the cellar quick enough to catch a glimpse of them. He has reported the matter to the police and it will be investigated.

MAYOR WILSON WAS AT MERCY OF MAD HORSES

His Honor Inside of Coach Drawn By a Plunging Team.

RESCUED SAFELY THOUGH.

DAVID EASTMAN'S YOUNG HORSE FRIGHTENED BY THE TROLLEY.

Fracas Occurred on East Front Street at 8 o'Clock This Morning—Driver Held on to the Reins in a Plucky Manner, But was Unable to Control Horse—Collided With Mayor's Vehicle.

A fractious steed owned by David Eastman, of Crescent avenue, and driven by his coachman, came near doing serious damage this morning about 8 o'clock on East Front street near Marshall's laundry. The horse, a young one and very nervous, became frightened at a passing trolley car, and in a few minutes was plunging in the most exciting manner. In the wagon beside the coachman was a small boy, and at the first opportunity he jumped out, thus saving himself any injury. The coachman held on the best he could, but he did not have control of the animal. Presently the horse and wagon crashed into Mayor Wilson's coach and team, and for a few minutes things looked serious. Wheels were locked and it was feared that Mayor Wilson, who was in his coach, would receive serious injury. Several passersby, however, took in the situation, and they gave their aid to straighten out the tangle. Two men caught hold of the Mayor' team and held them down while His Honor alighted from his wagon. In the meantime several men tried to curb the ferocious young horse that was making the trouble.

Suddenly, Mr. Eastman's horse broke away from the wagon and ran down the street toward Dunellen in a wild manner. Pieces of harness and parts of the shafts were scattered promiscuously along the road. Near Randolph's pharmacy the horse hit the sidewalk, but only to make a wild leap into the street again and continue his run for liberty. In front of Hillier & Co.'s place a whiffletree was left and a large plate glass just escaped being smashed.

Mr. Eastman's coachman started in pursuit of the horse and succeeded in catching the animal after a long run. The wagon suffered considerably from the accident, but the only damage to Mayor Wilson's rig was the breaking of the whiffletree.

WHITE ON EXPANSION

The California Senator Speaks on the Vest Resolution.

MATTER OF POLICY PURELY

Says We Should Not Retain the Philippines—Nominations Prevent Considera- of the Peace Treaty—Promotions for Sampson and Schley.

Washington, D. ., Jan. 24.--Soon after the Senate convened yesterday Mr. White, Democrat of California addressed the Senate in advocacy of Mr. Vest's anti-expansion resolution. He said that senators should ask themselves the question: "Shall we acquire the Philippine islands under the conditions now confronting us? Is it better that we shall do so?"

"Each senator should endeavor to impress on the Senate the fact that charity begins at home, and that if, we have erected a nation of which we are proud, it is our duty solemnly and positively to see that it remains pure, and that it be not tainted by a heterogeneous compound of inefficient humanity.

"I care not," Mr. White continued, "whether or not these people are fitted for free government. If they are, they should be permitted to exercise their rights and to establish a free government. If they are not, they should not be brought in alliance with us; we do not want them."

Contradictory statements, Mr. White said, had been made about the intentions of the administration in the matter of expansion, but in his mind there was no conclusion possible except that it was the intention, object and aim of the present administration and of those backing it, to annex the Philippine islands permanently.

Mr. White took occasion to refer to a remark of Mr. Chandler that the policy toward the Filipinos should be one of benevolent assimilation. Mr. White explained that the dictionary gave the meaning of the word not as absorption, but as bringing to a resemblance or likeness.

"If the senator from New Hampshire," Mr. White suggested, "absorbs a broiled lobster, he assimilates it; that is, he ought to."

"The senator from California does not notice the different meanings of the word," said Mr. Chandler. "Undoubtedly the president thinks—"

"Does the senator speak for the president?" Mr. White broke in.

"Undoubtedly the president thinks as I do," Mr. Chandler replied, "if he is a wise man; and I think he is. The president thinks we ought to bring these people into a reasonable likeness to us, but not necessarily to incorporate them, and I hope the senator will not lay too much stress on the use of the phrase 'benevolent assimilation.'"

"I trust," Mr. White said, "that the intention of the president and of the senator from New Hampshire is to beautify and soften and assimilate that alien race. Perhaps the senator has reference to a state of affairs that will result from an experiment of a century or two, when, through contact and otherwise, the Filipinos may be made more nearly homogeneous with us."

At the conclusion of Senator White's speech Mr. Hale, Republican of Maine, made an effort to proceed with one of the appropriation bills, but Mr. Davis, Republican of Minnesota, insisted on a motion to go into executive session for the purpose of considering the treaty of peace, and that motion was, at 2.15 p. m., agreed to.

Although Chairman Davis asked for an executive session for the purpose of considering the treaty of peace, the first business done behind closed doors was the confirmation of nominations to which there was no ojection, the usual proceeding.

After those nominations were disposed of, an effort was made to secure action on the promotions of Commodores Sampsn and Schley to rear admirals.

The debate on the merits of the two officers so occupied the whole of the session that the consideration of the treaty was not reached efore adjournment.

Fritz Von Bourdon Dead.

Wilmington, Del., Jan. 24.--Fritz Von Bourdon died yesterday morning from the effects of two paralytic strokes received on Saturday. He was born on August 6, 1826, in the Castle of Buchan on Fredersee, Wurtemburg. He was closely related to the Duke of Turn and Taxis, and through that family to Francis Joseph, emperor of Austria. He had resided in Wilmington for the past thirty years.

Grimm, Brigadier-General.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.--The president yesterday sent the following nominations to the Senate:

To be brigadier general of volunteers Colonel Eugene Griffin, First United States Volunteer Engineers.

Frederick C. Perkins to be register of the land office at Durango, Col.

Collingwood in Collision.

London, Jan. 24.--The British first class battleship Collingwood came into collision with the British third class cruiser Curacoa in Plymouth Sound yesterday. The Curacoa was seriously damaged on her starboard side and was obliged to be assisted by tugboats.

Philippine Constitution.

Manila, Jan. 24.--The formal promulgation of the constitution of the Philippine republic occurred at Malolos yesterday with much ceremony. A decree was also signed lierating the Spanish civil prisoners in the hands of the Filipinos.

Want Reduced Freight Rates.

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 24.--The Republican majority has, it is said, determined to pass the law reducing freight rates twenty per cent. The bill will be similar to the maximum rate bill declared unconstitutional last year.

DOUKHOBORS LAND.

Immigrants Are a Fine Lot of Persons—Eleven Weddings on Board.

St. John, N. B.ff, Jan. 24.--The largest party of immigrants ever landed at a Canadian port came ashore from the Beaver liner Lake Huron yesterday afternoon, when 2,300 Doukhobors put their feet on Canadian soil.

The steamer had touched at Halifax and given a clean bill of health, but to guard against any possibility of disease, she was stopped at quarantine. The ship's doctor reported all well and at four o'clock she was docked.

The immigrants were sent ashore in divisions of 450 and placed in the sheds, where they got all the food required, while the children were entertained by a delegation of the St. John Women's Council.

The voyage from Halifax occupied about thirty hours. On the way there were five marriages, which, with six on the voyage, makes eleven since the vessel left Batoum, in the latter part of December.

On the arrval of the steamer here one man was found to be suffering from pneumonia and he was sent to the hospital.

Both United States and Dominion government officials agree that no finer lot of immigrants ever landed in any port in America. The fact that after a twenty-nine day voyage no sickness of consequence developed is conclusive proof of the physical condition of the men, women and children.

Prince Hilkoff expressed himself delighted with all the arrangements and said he would never forget the kindness of the Canadian people.

The Lake Superior, with two thousand more Doukhobors is due in about ten days.

Every family has one hundred and sixty acres of land, a shanty and a number of farm implements given to them by the Dominion government. In addition they are provided with comfortable quarters until the advent of spring.

PEACE TREATY TO GO OVER.

Cannot Get a Vote and an Extra Session May be Called to Act.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.--The peace treaty will probably go over until an extra session.

The leaders find that they cannot get a vote at this session without making impossible concessions, and it is also not certain in advance of a vote how many senators would be with them.

Chairman Davis and his followers believe they would surely have a two-thirds majority when it came to a final vote, but cannot now count certainly in advance on the required three votes.

Senator Davis admitted yesterday afternoon, before he asked the Senate to go into executive session, that he feared he would have to take tthe treaty back to his committee and wait for the extra session which the president is really to call early in March.

Senator Davis construes the treaty which he helped to make as unnecessary to appropriate the twenty million dollars for Spain before the regular session of the next Congress, and says that it would not be necessary to call the House also in extra session.

Senator Hale does not want an extra session, as he has arranged to go to Europe in the spring. If he and Mr. Hoar consent to vote for the treaty there will be no need of an extra session or postponing his European trip.

Bodine Drops Dead.

Millville, N. J., Jan. 24.--J. Alfred Bodine, president of the Bodine Glass Company of Williamstown, dropped dead in the office of his factory yesterday afternoon. His death is believed to have been due to excitement over the threatened strike of three thousand glass blowrs and eight thousand other employes to-day at this place, Bridgton, Clayton, Glassboro, alem, Williamstown and other points.

Mr. Bodine was greatly worried over the coming strike and dreaded it. He left his home in Camden in the morning to go to the factory and his mission was to endeavor to obtain a postponement of the strike and see if a conference between the men and their employes could not be arranged.

The excitement of the situation was too much for him. He was seventy years of age and had been engaged in the glass business for fifty years. He was through the big strike a few years ago and knew what a new strike meant. He was thought to be favorable to the men.

The Children's Musical.

The children were discussing a possible musical entertainment for charity.

"We can't make it pay," said Jennie. "Why, I heard mamma say these singers get five hundred dollars for an afternoon!"

"Bosh! Nonsense!" said Polly. "I know a hand-organ man that'll play for an hour for twenty-five cents, and throw in a monkey!"—Harper's Round Table.

AGUINALDO'S THREAT

Says He Will Sever Relations With the United States.

ASKS RECOGNITION OF SPAIN

Will Not Release the Spanish Prisoners Unless the Independency of His Republic is Acknowledged—The Junta in Washington.

London, Jan. 24.--The Filipino Junta here has received dispatches saying that if Agoncillo, Aguinaldo's envoy at Washington, is not received y the United States government within a few days, Aguinaldo will recall him to Manila and suspend relations with the United States, "thus removing an important medium for arriving at a peaceful understanding."

The junta's advices also assert that "large numbers of the American troops are fraternizing with the natives and that many of them are engaged to Filipino girls."

Asks Recognition of Spain.

Madrid, Jan. 24.--Premier Sagasta declares that Aguinaldo has made the liberation of the Spanish prisoners in the Philippine Islands conditional upon Spain recognizing the Philippine republic and allying herself thereto.

Aguinaldo, it is added, has similarly demanded the Vatican's recognition of the Philippine republic.

Gen. Otis Heard From.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.--General Otis, commanding the military forces in the Philippines, has cabled the war department as follows:

Manila, Jan. 21.

Construction hospital Nagasaki unnecessary. Health of command good. Diseases successfully treated here, except chronic bowel difficulty and rheumatism. Send number of such cases by transport Zealandia to San Francisco. If peace prevailed might establish hospital in mountains, where recuperation would be rapid. Convalescent hospital at orregidor (near mouth of harbor) successful.

OTIS.

Agoncillo Becomes Defiant.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.--The Filipino junta in Washington now numbers five members. The three who left Manila several weeks ago have arrived and taken up their headquarters with Agoncillo and Lopez. They are Jose Losado, Juan Luna and Captain Marti Burgos.

Agoncillo, thus reinforced, has grown rather defiant, and has demanded of Secretary Hay that he appoint a time for him to see the president so that he may present his credentials as ambassador.

It is said that their next move will be to ask the United States to evacuate the island and let Aguinaldo's government take its place.

The state department, of course, has paid no attention to these communications, nor will it, and certainly Secretary of State Hay will make no appointment with the president to receive Agoncillo in any official capacity. The junta has a lawyer here who seems to be working with the opposition senators, and has laid the grievance of the Philippine junta before Senator Caffery. It is due to this that Senator Caffery introduced a resolution last week in the Senate asking the president to send to that body any communication received by the state department from the agent of the so-called republic.

The president has not complied with this request, either.

The lately arrived Filipinos have a very exalted opinion of Aguinaldo and his army. Captain Burgos said there are thirty thousand Filipinos under arms; that Spain could not have conquered them and he was sure that the United States could not. He was confident that they would have won their independence from Spain had not the United States interfered.

"The only assistance Admiral Dewey ever gave us," said Captain Burgos, "was to transport twenty-six Filipino officers from Hong Kong to Manila, and to furnish General Aguinaldo's men with one hundred and fifty stands of arms from the arsenal at Cavite."

It is said that the expenses of the Philippine junta are being paid out of the four hundred thousand dollars that Aguinaldo obtained from Spain on the agreement to desert his followers and leave the Philippine islands.

The Quay Battle.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 24.--The fifth ballot in the joint assembly of the Senate and House yesterday for United States senator resulted as follows:

Quay, Republican, 63; Jenks, Democrat, 48; Dalzell, Republican, 11; Irvin, Republican, 3; Stewart, Republican, 8; Huff, Republican, 3; C. W. Stone, Republican, 6; Tubbs, Republican, 3; Grow, Republican, 1; Markle, Republican, 1; Downing, Republican, 1; P. A. B. Weidener, Republican, 2.

Total vote cast, 150; necessary for a choice, 76. No election. Paired, 98. Absent without pairs, 4.

Prison for Electrocutions.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 24.--State Superintendent of Prisons Collins had a conference yesterday with Governor Roosevelt on the proposition to establish a prison where electrocutions shall take place. It would cost about fifteen thousand dollars if erected on state land near Clinton prison.

Governor Roosevelt was pleased with the suggestion and a bill will be introduced.

Daly Mayor of Limerick.

Dublin, Jan. 24.--John Daly, the Irish political prisoner who was released from Portland prison in 1896, after having been sentenced to penal servitude for life in 1884, for complicity in an alleged plot to blow up the House of Commons, while in session, by throwing dynamite bombs from the strangers' gallery, has been elected mayor of Limerick by a unanimous vote, under the new Irish local government act.

A BOLD ASSERTION

The Assertion Made to this Introduction to this Plainfield Citizen's Statement is Literally True.

There is only one proprietary article on the market which gives local evidence touching its merits; home proof to back up its claims; Plainfield evidence for Plainfield people. Statements from people we know in place of statements from strangers. That preparation is the one endorsed by Mrs. M. A. Hall, of 219 Prescott place, who says: "Doan's Kidney Pills without exception are the best medicine I ever used. My kidneys troubled me for several years with dull, aching pain across my back, and at times extending to my hips. I was compelled to lie in just one position at night, stooping, li ting or bending forward aggravated the pains. I was also subject to severe headaches and was more or less nervous. A kidney weakness which was very distressing and inconvenient also existed and though I used different remedies that were recommended to me I obtained little if any relief. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills highly endorsed in our daily papers and procured a box at L. W. Randolph's drug store. It was not long before I felt great relief and I was surprised how quickly the pain in my back disappeareu."

A Pennsylvania farmer, living in Walker township, Juniata County, recently underwent a pretty severe ordeal. "I was bothered with sick headache," he says, "so bad that I used to have to quit work and lie in bed for a day at a time." He believes that dyspepsia was at the bottom of the trouble; but whatever it was he declares: "I must say of Ripans Tabules that they cured me. Since I used them I am not bothered with headache or dizziness any more. I would not be without them. They made me feel like a different man."

A new style packet containing THE RIPANS TABULES in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at some drug stores—FOR FIVE CENTS. This low-priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (12 tabules in the box) will be sent by mail on receipt of forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (SIX TABULES) will be sent for five cents.

QUARLES BARELY ESCAPED.

Once Before He Came Within a Few Votes of Being Chosen Senator.

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 24.--J. V. Quarles, who made so splendid a fight for the United States senatorship, which is to end in the balloting of the legislature, which begins to-day, is a unique character in the political history of the Badger state. Mr Quarles is a lawyer of great note and practiced four years in Kenosha, Wis., from which place he was elected to the legislature late in the seventies.

J. V. QUARLES.

It was in the famous fight which Senator Timothy Howe made for reelection that the name of Mr. Quarles first figured. He had not been dreamed of as a senatorial possibility at that time. One morning a friend cast a vote for him. Others followed on the second ballot, and he came within two or three votes of being elected senator, although then barely above the required senatorial age.

The Samoan Trouble.

Washington, Jan. 24.--Inquiries made by the state department show that no further advices can be expected from Apia, Samoa, before the latter part of next week.

This is based on the presumption that the reports will come on the regular line of vessels that travels between Auckland and Apia, but, of course, there is a possibility of some private sailing craft making the trip if events of sufficient importance to demand an immediate report have taken place there since the last steamer sailed.

By Friday or Saturday of this week the British warship which recently left Wellington should arrive at Apia, and thus make it possible for one of two British vessels which then will be in port to be used for conveyance of advices to Aukland.

Return of Sick Soldiers.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 24.--The army transport Victoria, which lay in Hampton Roads all night, came up to Old Point wharf yesterday and began discharging the sick soldiers from Ponce and Santiago, nearly two hundred in number.

The regular army and volunteers from Illinois, Ohio, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania regiments were represented. Nearly all of the patients are suffering from tropical fever, and the condition of some is said to be critical.

The men were taken to the Josiah Simpson Hospital in open trolley cars, berths being arranged between the seats. The trip north was without incident and the sick soldiers received every attention.

President's Outing.

Washington D. C., Jan. 24.--President McKinley accompanied by Mrs. McKinley and a party of friends, went down the river yesterday on the dispatch boat Sylph for a day's outing.

In the party were Colonel and Mrs. Herrick of Cleveland, Captain and Mrs. McWilliams of Chicago, Captain and Mrs. Rand, Miss Mary Barber, Miss Mabel McKinley, Miss Clara Shields, Miss May McWilliams, Miss Carrie Harter, C. R. Schultz and James Barber.

All the members of the party are guests at the White House. The party returned to the city last evening.

Klondikers' Winter Output.

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 24.--P. H. Hebbe has arrived from Dawson and brings news that Dominion Creek has just jumped into prominence as a gold producer of the first rank, excelling Bonanza and equalling Eldorado. Its claims are not as rich as a limited number on Eldorado, but its length is greater.

Dominion and Eldorado together will produce afrom ten million dollars to twelve million dollars at the spring clean up.

A conservative estimate puts the winter output of the Klondike at thirty million dollars, doubling the output of last winter.

No Choice in Delaware.

Dover, Jan. 24.--The ninth joint ballot for United States senator yesterday resulted as follows:

George Gray, Democrat, 14; Edward Addicks, Republican, 15; Henry A. Dupont, regular Republican, 10; Francis G. Dupont, regular Republican, 1; William S. Hilles, regular Republican, 1; L. I. Handy, Democrat, 2; John H. Reedny, Democrat, 3; absent, 6. Total vote, 46; necessary to choice, 24. No election.

The General Appraisers.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.--It is understood that the president has requested the resignations of Mr. Shurtleff, Mr. Wilkinson and Mr. Sharp, three of the nine members of the board of general appraisers at New York.

The officials here decline to make any statement in regard to the matter, yet there is reason to believe that want of harmony in the board is one of the causes of the president's action.

Spain and the Philippines.

Madrid, Jan. 24.--The premier, Senor Sagasta, declares that Aguinaldo has made the liberation of the Spanish prisoners in the Philippine islands conditional upon Spain recognizing the Philippine republic, and allying herself thereto.

Aguinaldo, it is added, has similarly demanded the Vatican's recognition of the Philippine republic.

A COLONIAL COMMISSION

To Help Administer Island Governments.

AFFAIRS ARE COMPLICATED

To Operate Under the Direction of the Secretary of War—The Collection and Distribution of Funds in Cuba—Gen. Brook's Protest.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.--The secretary of war has completed the organization of a colonial commission to undertake the administration here in Washington of all matters of detail respecting the government of the territories acquired during the war, or occupied by the United States forces. The commission will be composed of General Robert P. Kennedy of Bellefontaine, Ohio, Curtis Guild of Massachusetts and George W. Watkins of Grand Rapids, Mich.

Up to this time the secretary and assistant secretary have undertaken themselves to deal with the administration of insular affairs, but the questions involved have become so numerous and complicated that it has been found absolutely necessary to call for assistance.

This commission will deal with the distribution of monies to be spent in public improvements, and all of the troublesome issues that have arisen and are likely to arise, in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines. The new commission is to act entirely within the powers conferred by the secretary of war, and his sanction will be necessary to give effect to any line of action proposed by the commission.

General Brooke's protest against the continuation of collection of taxes in Cuba through the Spanish bank has not yet reached the war department, so that it has not been possible to reach any decision in the matter. The officials are disposed to show all possible consideration for the feelings of the Cubans in this matter, but there are other considerations than those of sentiment involved, such, for instance, as a due regard for economy, made necessary by the fact that so heavy are the requirements for the island in the matter of public improvements and maintenance and sanitation that all of the funds derived from possible sources of taxation will not suffice to meet them completely.

Therefore, one of the first considerations to be taken into account by the officials is the comparative cost of the present tax collecting system and that of an entirely new system acting under direct governmental authority.

The latter would require the employment of a number of Cubans as tax collectors, and from that consideration might appeal strongly to the officials here, who have been earnestly seeking to give employment to as many of these people as possible.

The department has not yet completed its plans for the allotment of funds between the provinces of Cuba to be used in public works. The situation in Santiago has been noted with some concern, but it is expected that as soon as Major General Wood, the military commander and governor of the province, reaches Santiago, he will be able to convince the people of the wisdom and justice of the plans for the distribution of the customs receipts prepared by the government at Washington.

Philippine Commission Plans.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.--Final arrangements for the departure of President Schurman and Professor Worcester of the Philippine commission have been made. They will leave New York to-morrow for Vancouver, and sail on the steamship Empress of China.

The state department has supplied the commission with numerous publications regarding the Philippines. Several large boxes containing books and maps were shipped to Vancouver yesterday.

Paymaster Sawyer of the army has been assigned to the commission as disbursing officer. The selection of a secretary to the commission will not be made until all the members arrive at Manila.

E. W. Harden of Chicago received an offer of the appointment, but declined.

It is probable that the commission will secure the services of some prominent resident of the Philippines.

Colonel Denby expects to leave for Manila in about ten days. He will be accompanied by his son.

Lord Beresford's Plan.

Yokohama, Jan. 24.--Rear Admiral Lord Charles Beresford of the British navy, who has been making a tour of Chinese ports in the interest of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Great Britain, and who is on his way home by way of Japan and the United States, speaking at Tokio on Saturday before the Japanese Oriental Association, repeated his wish to see an alliance between Japan, Germany, the United States and Great Britain to protect their trade interests in China, and condemned any policy based upon "spheres of influence" that a country could take.

Many Bales of Cotton Burned.

London, Jan. 24.--A fire broke out Sunday evening in five thousand bales of cotton lying on the wharf at Genoa, which had been discharged from the British steamer Barbara, Captain Voss, from Galveston, on December 22. Two thousand bales were almost completely destroyed.

King Oscar's Illness.

Stockholm, Jan. 24.--Although the health of King Oscar continues to improve, his physicians have ordered him to take a complete rest. Therefore, he has intrusted the government, provisionally, to the Crown Prince, Prince Gustaf, and has gone to Saltsja-Baden.

Esterhazy Examined.

Paris, Jan. 24.--The Court of Cassation yesterday examined Major Count Esterhazy, who had entered the Palace of Justice without being noticed.

WILD DAY ON STOCK EXCHANGE.

All Records Broken in the Way of Speculation.

New York, Jan. 24.--Such a day as yesterday was on the Stock Exchange has not been witnessed for many years if indeed it ever has been before. It smashes not only the record—so frequently smashed of late from day to day—in the number of transactions, but in the big jumps in prices up and down and in the confused and sensational condition of the market the whole day through there is no recollection even among old time brokers to compare with it.

London contributed its quota toward the general mix up, for that market, too, was something of a bear garden, and the cables reported everybody abroad as climbing over each other to gather in the stocks which only a week ago they were selling to us at the rate of 40,000 a day.

The mad sun dance of crazed Indians never made a wilder scene than was witnessed by the spectators in the Stock Exchange galleries at the opening. For violent fluctuations, enormous transactions and intense excitement, comparison can only be made with some of the panic days following the Baring failure in 1890, and the publication of President Cleveland's letter to Congress on the Venezuelan question in 1893.

As is always the case in an excited market, stocks were to a great extent influenced by rumors of all kinds. Extravagant reports find ready ears when stocks are jumping up or down two or three points between trades. The most talked of of the stories was that regarding the consolidation of the anderbilt lines to form a trans-continental system, which has been repeatedly denied from official sources, but is still given credit, and that concerning the relation of the Pennsylvania road to the Panhandle, it being claimed that the two systems are now more closely linked than ever before.

House Proceedings.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.--In the House yesterday an attempt was made to pass under unanimous consent the bill extending to the Hawaiian islands the provisions of the anti-contract labor laws, but objection was made.

The day being set apart for legislation affecting the district of Columbia, bills reported by the district committee were taken up.

The following measures were passed: To incorporate the American Social Service Association, to regulate the height of buildings in the district, to cause the removal of weeds from vacant lots in Washington, to change the proceedings governing the admission of patients to the government hospital for the insane.

Little Metal in the Shamrock.

Glasgow, Jan. 24.--Sir Thomas Lipton has requested the Glasgow Citizen to contradict the misleading statements which have been published regarding the new racing cutter Shamrock, which is to contest for the America's cup.

Many new ideas have been suggested he says, and in some cases they have been adopted in the construction of the cup challenger, but the issue at stake is too great to induce the designer and builder of the cutter to experiment to any extent.

While the new boat is expected to be constructed on improved lines in comparison with the alkyrie III, there will be comparatively little metal used in the construction of the Shamrock.

Spanish Governor Murdered.

London, Jan. 24.--A dispatch from Victoria, Island of Labuan, under yesterday's date, announces the arrival there of the steamship Labuan from Palawan island, Malay archipelago, bringing news of the murder by natives of the Spanish governor and other public officers of Palawan as they were leaving church.

The commander of the Labuan, Captain Pfort, had an interview with the leaders of the natives and obtained the release of the Spanish governor's wife, the women belonging to the households of the other murdered officers and a number of other prisoners, all of whom are safe at Saudakan.

For Rifles of Uniform Calibre.

Washington, Jan. 24.--The House committee on naval affairs has reported favoraly a resolution authorizing the appointment of a special committee of five members of the House, to investigate the difference in calibres of the rifles used by the army and navy and to devise a plan for bringing about uniformity.

The object of the investigation is to secure interchangeability of ammunition.

Colon Strike Continues Bitter.

Colon, Colombia, Jan. 24.--A public meeting of the striking wharf laborers was held here yesterday. A Wesleyan clergyman addressed the meeting and advised the men to return to work. The laborers, however, decided to continue the strike.

The men have all been ordered to leave Fortune island, and the strikers are gathering in large numbers in the streets. The situation is very critical.

No Miners' Strike Expected.

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 24.--The miners' sub-scale committee is still in session, and there is no change in the situation in the convention.

It is practically settled that the Illinois delegation will agree to the terms already accepted by Pennsylvania and Ohio, but before doing so will state in convention its reasons for violating the iron-clad instructions of its constituents.

Changes in Auburn Prison.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 24.--Warden Meade of Auburn prison has appointed Allan Tupper of Auburn to be principal keeper, and John C. Hiser of Auburn to be kitchen keeper in place of Mr. Tupper, promoted.

No Fears for the Pope.

Rome, Jan. 24.--Dr. Lapponi, the pope's physician, says that his holiness's constitution is the strongest he has ever known and predicts that he will live to see the dawn of the twentieth century.

Section 1. That the Common Council doth hereby direct and order that separate sewers or drains to carry off the surface water, or the water flowing into Green Brook, be constructed in and for said City of Plainfield in Park Avenue from the Central Railroad of New Jersey to Front Street, with two inlets at the railroad bridge, one at North Avenue, six at Second Street, and two between Second and Front Streets; in Front Street, from Park Avenue to Somerset Street, with two inlets at West Front Street and Pruden's Alley and two at Somerset Street; in Somerset Street from Front Street to Green Brook, all with the necessary manholes and appurtenances to complete the same, said separate sewers or drains to be of the dimensions and material, and to be laid in said streets, and along such lines, and at such grades, and in such manner as indicated and specified on map on file with the City Clerk of the City of Plainfield, entitled, "Map for Storm Sewers in Park Avenue, Front and Somerset Streets, made by Andrew J. Gavett, C. E., Sept. 1898."

Section 2. That the costs and expenses required to be incurred under this ordinance shall be provided for in the manner specified in the preamble to this ordinance."

J.) at or before the expiration of ten days from the date of this notice or to the Common Council at its first meeting held after the expiration of said ten days, and said Common Council at such meeting to be held on the 6th day of February, 1899, as above stated, or afterward, may proceed to consider and pass such ordinance notwithstanding any objection. By direction of the Common Council.

Publishing the Laws.

The New Brunswick Fredonian urges the New Jersey Editorial Association or someother body of newspapermen to take up the question of publishing the session laws and bring the matter before the Legislature in a forceful manner. The Fredonian says that the bill should provide for the publication in full of local acts only, and a mere synopsis of the others. Quoting the editorial from The Fredonian, the Elizabeth Journal says:

The Governor is opposed to printing the laws in the newspapers, and every lawyer, in and out of the Legislature, is opposed to it. The old system of pupliahing the laws was a political club used in a most maliciously partisan manner, and it gave legislators an excuse for abolishing the whole system, under the specious plea of economy. What should have been done was to reform, not abolish, the system, but now that is is abolished it will be difficult to re-establish even an equitable and proper system in its stead. The newspaper men are, to a large degree, responsible for this their misfortune, and for the wrong done to the people. They catered to the legislators of their own parties and upheld those in authority and allowed their own throats to be cut. They should have held their legislators to a strict accountability. Not one of them but was a strong influence in electing the legislators of their respective districts, and yet it has been a favorite sport for a number of years back to injure the State newspapers. It is not a questi n of pap, however, for pap is not wanted. It is a question of right or wrong, and as such it should be pressed to a successful issue.

Rahway Reformatory Stir.

The first fruits of Governor Voorhees' inaugual cropped ont last night in the Assembly at Trenton in a concurrent resolution providing that the joint committee on appropriations make an investigation of the condition and requirememts of the Rahway Reformatory, and recommended to the Legislature the policy which should be adopted in regard to its completion. The original estimate of the cost of the institution was $100,000. Over $400,000 has already been spent, and it is estimated the cost will be more than a $1,000,000. The Johnson resolution provides that the joint committee shall have power to subpœna witnesses and make a thorough investigation of the work that has been done. Senator Johnson said the resolution was in accord with the views expressed by Governor Voorhees in his inaugural address.

The Essex county delegation of Assemblymen have undertaken an admirable and profitable practice each week in relation to their official duties. The Essex gentlemen realize the difficulty of Legislators getting at the true sentiment of their respective localities on matters of public importance, and as a step to overcome that condition they have resolved to hold public conferences at regular intervals during the Legislative session, at which constituents are invited to appear and voice their sentiments. In operation the conference will be a miniature Assembly, where a concensus of opinion for that county may be obtained in the effort to enlighten and direct the Legislators. With such a large delegation of Assemblymen as Essex posesses, such a conference, when attended by all or a majority of the Legislators, secures for it a dignity and influence that smaller counties could not duplicate.

The distinguishing feature of this week in the Legislature is the election of John Kean to the United States Senate. This afternoon each house of the Legislature will ballot seperately for Senator, and tomorrow they will meet in joint session. Mr. Kean is as good as elected now, but it will not be done in the eyes of the law till tomorrow. Mr. Kean received congratulations as early as the next morning after election last November on his victory today.

Assemblyman Murray introduced three bills in the Assembly last night, one of them bearing great importance in Plainfield. It is a bill which, if passed, will fix the terms of city clerks in second-class cities at one year. The other bills that Mr. Murray introduced are "to amend the act creating a sinking fund commission for cities," and to "amend the tax act concerning the allowance of rebates."

Germany has appropriated $25,000 to establish a station for the study of earthquakes. Now that's sheer extravagance. If Germany keeps at it she will be treated to several seismic disturbances that will find their origin in Manila bay and which will not cost Kaiser Wilhelm's subjects a single penny to commence with, but what the cost of repairs will be we do not undertake to estimate.

Young Mr. Kean is following in the footsteps of his illustrious elder brother. It has been a rocky political road that the now Senator-elect has traveled in times gone by, and we suppose that in the defeat of the junior Kean for chairman of the Union county Republican executive committee the latter takes the dose as part of his education in the ways of the Keans and the Republicans.

Assemblyman Murray seems to have the required gettheretoitiveness around the State halls of legislation. Having acquired the honor of introducing the first bill into the present session of Legislature, he also has succeeded in getting the self-same bill reported first in the Assembly. Mr. Murray is bound to be on deck.

The Jersey City Democrats have succeeded in raising $35,000 at the Davis Association fair, which was held for ten days in that city. The Davises seem to be as good at that business as at the raising of votes.

Judge Runyon did well in issuing the edict from the City Court bench that he will stand no race persecution in this city. There is altogether too much of that business in Plainfield.

Speaking of Trenton Republicans, the New York Herald says that "Politicians now want patronage." As the Mr. Flannery, of Texas, once said, "What are we here for anyway?"

At the rate lambs were shorn in Wall street yesterday it is to be expected that wool will be cheap this year irrespective of the high tariff or any other government enactment.

President of the Senate Reed has been presented with a handsome white wood gavel. It is to be hoped that it will not get black and blue from undue pounding.

"The Burglar Yelled"—a newspaper heading. He couldn't have been a burglar. He must have been what burglars call a "lobster."

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

The New Jersey Law Journal prints several letters from lawyers, approving the proposed changes in the laws governing the admission of lawyers and their conduct to clients. It is a question which the State has come to see must soon be decided. The cases of fraud and abuse of rights proven against lawyers of late have been so numerous and so serious that cleansing of the profession is not only desirable for the reputation of the bar but as a measure for the protection of the poor and ignorant. The Lawyers' Club, of this city, held its annual banquet last week, and the efforts to tone up the profession received the encouragement of some of the most distinguished members of the bar of the State.—Newark Call.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

Lincoln J. Carter, author of so many successful melo-dramas, is a man of remarkable fertility of invention. In his latest play, "The Heart of Chicago," which will be at Music Hall tonight he has succeeded in introducing something absolutely new to the stage. It is the much praised approaching train scene, in which an engine and line of cars is seen to be approaching the footlights, apparently from miles away, for fully ten minutes without for one moment becoming lost to view. This scene occupies ten minutes from the time the engine is first seen to the moment the engine comes to a halt at the footlights. Those who have seen approaching train pictures as thrown on scenes by the vitascope cinematograph and other animated picture machines, can appreciate the beauty of the scene. But it is not accomplished by pictures. A heavy engine and real men at the throttle and fire box, aided by a double stage, clever perspective arrangements and complicated stage apparatus, fairly outdoes Edison.

"The Girl from Paris" will not appear at Music Hall Thursday night, the management of the company, after contracting with Manager Maze Edwards, having arranged for a full week's engagement elsewhere. The play will probably be seen later. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" will be the attraction following the play tonight, and will be presented next Monday.

The vaudeville shows that Mr. Proctor is offering weekly to the patrons of his two New York theatres are remarkable examples of latter-day variety, and exhibit, with convincing force, the dignity and importance to which this branch of theatrical amusement has attained. Every act in the bills has to be bright, clean and clever—there must not be a suspicion of vulgarity or of anything in the least offensive. The latest is the first appearance in the east of the Streator Zouaves, a military organization from Illinois, that has created a sensation wherever it has appeared. The Zouaves are twenty in number, and their specialty is lightning drill and wall scaling. In the latter part of their entertainment they scale a 20 foot wall with remarkable agility, and evoke tremendous applause from the audience in so doing. It is really a thrilling exhibition. The Zouaves will appear at the Palace, East 58th street, week of Jan. 30th, as will George W. Monroe in his new monologue. The two star features are surrounded by a score of performers of exceptional merit. At Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre the charming comedienne, Alice Atherton, heads the bill, and will render her well-known ballads, besides several new 'coon' songs, of which she is such a clever exponent.

WHITE'S WHITE SALE
THE WHITE GOODS EVENT OF THE SEASON.

Encouraged by the marked success which has attended our previous Muslin Underwear sales, we have made a large purchase for this occasion. Our orders were placed during the makers' dull season. The work has been most thoroughly done, materials and trimmings are of the best, the fit, finish and size generosity is the same as if the garments were made under your own supervision—by your own home seamstress—and the prices are less than you would pay for bare materials.

NIGHT ROBES.

Every feature of this sale is special, but more special than other features will be the nightgown selling. They are among the best creations of master makers and are daintily trimmed with the prettiest laces, ribbons and embroideries. Prices 25c, 49c, 75c, $1 and $1.25.

WHITE SKIRTS.

Some plain with rows of tucks, some with cambric and embroidery flounces with lace insertions; all cut very full, nothing scant about them but the prices—25c, 35c, 49c, 75c to $1.25.

CORSET COVERS.

Trimmed with embroidery, torchon laces, or clusters of tucks with insertions, perfect fitting, high, square or V shape necks, made of fine cambric. Who would bother to make them when you buy at these prices—15c, 25c, 29c, 39c, 50c

DRAWERS.

Made with yoke bands, deep hamburg embroidery, umbrella, flounces or rows of tucks. As some of the best numbers are somewhat limited as to quantity it is advisable that you be among the early choosers as these lots cannot be duplicated at these prices—17c, 25c, 39c and 50c.

THE WOMAN'S WORLD

SOME QUEER SUPERSTITIONS.

The Signs Foreign Mothers Have for Bringing Good Luck to Children.

In Ireland, a belt of a woman's hair is placed about a child to keep harm away, and garlic-salt, bread and steak and put into the cradle of a new-born baby, in Holland. Roumanian mothers tie red ribbons around the ankles of their children to preserve them from harm, while Ethopian mothers attach bits of assafoetida to the neck of their offsprings.

Welsh mothers put a pair of tongs or a knife in the cradle to insure the safety of children. The knife is also used for the same purpose in some parts of England. Among Vosges peasants, children born at a new moon are supposed to have tongues better hung than others, while those born at the last quarter, reasoning powers. A daughter born during the waxing moon is always precocious.

At the birth of a child in Lower Brittany, the neighboring women take it in charge, wash it, crack it joints and rub its head with oil to solder the cranium bones. It is then wrapped in a tight bundle and its lips are anointed with brandy to make it a full Breton.

The Grecian mother, before putting her child in its cradle, turns three times around before the fire while singing her favorite song to ward off evil spirits. The Turkish mother loads her child with amulets as soon as it is born, and a small bit of mud, steeped in hot water, prepared by previous charms, is stuck on its forehead. In Spain, the infant's face is swept with a pine-tree bough to bring good luck. —Golden Days.

Nicotiana for Home and Garden Culture.

A really lovely flower, both for the garden and the window, or the greenhouse, is the night-blooming tobacco, Nicotiana affinis. While its foliage somewhat resembles that of the tobacco plant, it has not that coarseness which characterizes its better known relative. It is of bushy habit of growth. Its white flowers are produced in loose bunches at the ends of the branches, and in shape are something like the Bermuda lily, though much smaller. They have a peculiar and delightful fragrance which fills a room with its penetrating odor at evening. The plant is a persistent bloomer. Left to take care of itself, in the garden, it will yield flowers until frost comes and puts an end to it. In the house it can be kept in flower the entire season by simply cutting it back sharply from time to time. Remove the old branches when their crops of flowers become small, and in a short time a new and vigorous growth will take their place. Like all members of the tobacco family, it is a gross feeder, and in order to succeed with it it must be given a strong, rich soil. If grown in pots, apply some good commercial fertilizer for flowers once a week. Give it a sunny place in the window and keep the red spider from working on it. This you can prevent if you are careful to shower the plant daily, being sure that the water used gets to the underside of the foliage.—American Agriculturist.

How Two Girls Made Money.

A country girl who is determined to go to Paris to study art is laying aside for this purpose each dollar she has earned. She found that there was no one else in the village who could make as good bread and biscuit as she; that those who had to buy complained of the baker's bread. She made no effort at sending her bread to a woman's exchange, as she knew that such places were always overstocked, but she went through her own town—a very small one—and asked for orders. She is making money because there has never been a sad loaf of bread or a heavy biscuit sent out from her kitchen. She will supply a neighbor with ot biscuit at tea time and she has learned to make dainty rusk, especially for invalids, who enjoy these light, sweet dainties. Her prices are reasonable.

Another girl, ambitious to gain something, got her father to let her have a bit of ground, and to give her money that he would otherwise have bestowed upon her for a wedding dress. With this she was able to buy plants and to hire a boy to help her; and during the summer, while the boarding houses around demanded them, she served the freshest of radishes, the crispest of lettuce, the earliest corn and the largest tomatoes; and she says now that she thinks she will double the size of her garden next summer.

The Use of Alum.

Powdered alum is a useful article to have on hand in some emergencies. In case of an adult or child being bitten by a dog or other animal, a saturated solution of alum is one of the best known applications. Fill a bowl with water and put more powdered alum in it than will dissolve; this saturates the water. Suck the wound at once, rinse your mouth with alum water, suck again, rinse your mouth and bathe the wounded part also, with the alum water. Do both the rinsing and the bathing repeatedly, then take the bitten person to the nearest doctor.

The Queen of France.

Of sixty-seven queens of France, thirteen died without a record of misery. Eleven were divorced, two executed, nine died young, seven were soon widowed, three cruelly treated, three exiled; the poisoned and broken-hearted made up the rest.

FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

THE DOLLS' WEDDING.

There's a wedding to-day in the garden below,
Where the pinks and marigolds stand in a row;
The prettiest wedding that ever was seen,
I know for I peeped through the trellises green.

The bride is a doll that is nearly as tall
As the lily that leans to look over the wall;
In a gown of pink silk she is gorgeously dressed,
With a plume in her hat and a brooch on her breast.

The groom is a sailor boy gallant and bold,
In a cap and a jacket all braided with gold
(Both dollies belong to a lassie of three,
Whose face bubbles over with frolic and glee).

There are roses above, there are roses around
And the petals of roses lie thick on the ground,
And the robin is there with his silvery flute,
And the oriole clad in his flame-colored suit.

Little Tiny, the terrier, married the pair,
Sitting on a bench with a serious air,
With grandmother's kerchief as clerical clothes,
And grandmother's spectacles over his nose.
—Frank Leslie's Monthly.

A BOY HERO.

His Legs Wooden Ones, but He Traveled Far and Fast to Save Lives.

Not far from the Virginia line lives a two-thirds youth, for, unfortunately, both of his lower limbs are artificial, who has to his credit an act of heroism which should make him a loved lad as long as the memory of those who know him lasts. It is little crippled Tim Olin, whose home is away up in the mountains, thirty-five miles from everywhere, as a book agent once said of that part of the country.

This bit of a boy about three weeks ago heard that forest fires were sweeping everything that would burn before them along the Virginia side of the mountains. One afternoon he climbed through the snow to the top of the mountain, one of the steepest of the Cumberland, and took a view of the fire-swept country below him. He was surprised to find the fire so fierce, and as he watched Tim saw that the red tongues were creeping on toward a little log cabin in which lived two old and helpless women, the Ober sisters, and their blind and crippled brother, who is one of the oldest men over on the other side. The lad realized that the house was a long ways from any other farm house, and knew that the people in the humble cot would find themselves powerless if they were left in the cabin until the fire got to their home.

Without thinking of how much suffering it meant to his poor aching limbs, Tim started down the rugged hillside on his perilous journey of heroism. He had a race with the fire and twice fell from exhaustion and almost despaired of saving the old folks. But his indomitable courage never flagged, and he kept going. He reached the old homestead just as the prairie fire was attacking the old frame crib. He hurried into the house and informed the the old and thoroughly frightened people of their danger. It only took him a few minutes to hitch the horse to the sled, and the old man was helped on to this. The four drove on to shelter at the nearest neighbor's, leaving the fire to do its worst. The home of old people was partly burned during the night, but the boy had gotten some of the neighbors to go and fight the fire, and they were able to save most of the contents of the house.

The modest-looking lad has never recovered from the injuries he sustained in making the awful trip, but he is very proud of the deed. The old people will never cease to love and contribute to the boy's support out of their limited means.—From Sandy Signal.

Capt. Heard's Exploit With a Privateer.

The speed of the Baltimore clipper, in days gone by made history redound with their exploits. Every boy and girl has read at some time or place of the piratical long, low rakish-looking schooners that cruised the ocean ostensibly as pirates, in those days, and have marvelled more or less at their astounding adventures. A good story is told of the late Captain Augustine Heard, that while in command of a fine ship richly laden, bound from China to New York, he was overhauled by one of this kind, which came up under his lee, fired a shot into his ship, and demanded in "good English" that she should be hove to. Captain Heard watched a favorable opportunity, squared his yards, ran the privateer down, passed over her between the masts, and when well to leeward brought his ship to the wind and resumed his course. She had lost some of her head-gear, but sustained no damage in her hull. Captain Heard left the "long, low, black privateer," or pirate, to her fate, and had no doubt that all her crew perished.

It was a dangerous thing to do, but Heard relied upon the good timber in his ship's bows to withstand the shock, although his heart grew sad at the loss of life. Still, as he put it, "My honor and life were at stake, so he had to go under."—Harper's Round Table.

The Owl's Eye.

The owl has no motion in the eye, the globe of which is immovably fixed in its socket by a strong, elastic, hard, cartilaginous case; but, in order to compensate for the absence of motion in the eye, the owl is able to turn its head round in almost a complete circle without moving its body.

Monkey Castigator.

First Monkey—You remember that boy who was teasing me, yesterday? I caught him by the wrist and pretty nearly twisted his arm off.

Second Monkey—Yes; I heard him telling another boy he got hurt by a monkey-wrench.—Harper's Round Table.

THE GAME OF PELOTA.

An Exciting Ball Game Played in Spain and Mexico.

Americans who have been in Mexico are enthusiastic over a proposition to introduce the game of pelota in this country. They declare it to be the finest game of ball ever played.

Pelota bears an equally close resemblance to handball and to racquets, but has certainly features which are said to make it a harder game, or rather a game requiring more violent exertion, though probably not more skill. Any man familiar with hand ball or racquets will understand at once how pelota is played but he would require considerable practice before he could take part in it.

The game as played in Mexico and Spain is attended with more pomp and circumstance than any sport we know. The spectators sit in boxes of carved stone, and the most fashionable and beautiful women are to be seen among them. It is a rival of bull fighting. In Spain the Queen is often present at a first-class game. The Spanish are great gamblers, and pelota is the cause of much heavy betting.

Four men, two on a side, usually take part in the game. The court or fronto in which the game is played is 180 feet long and 40 feet wide. The wall against which the ball is struck in serving is 60 feet high. The player or pelota stands 75 feet from the front wall and serves the ball against it. One of his opponents must return the ball before is has struck the ground more than once. Then all four keep sending it to the front wall until some one misses it. When the server or his partner misses the ball he goes out. When one of his opponents misses he scores one. The game is played for 25 or 35 points.

Each player wears on his right hand a chisteras, a horn-shaped construction of wicker. This is about twenty inches long and four and a half inches wide. It is fastened on above the wrist, and curves inward like the palm of the hand. It ends in a tip with a very sharp curve. This covering protects the hand entirely against the impact of the ball, and enables the player to drive it with tremendous force. He can send it to the front wall and bring it to the back wall, a distance of 180 feet, after one bounce only.

The long chisteras is very useful in enabling a man to pick a low ball out of the corner or catch one high in the air. By its aid he is able to get balls which he could not reach with his bare hand. Its curved point, it is said, moreover, enables him to get balls which with a racquet would be sent against the side walls and fail to reach the front wall.

A curious feature of the game is that two umpires watch it and prevent the players from speaking to one another lest they should alter the result in order to profit by the betting.

The pelota courts are handsomely built of stone. The walls against which the ball is played are polished. Above the back wall rise tiers of seats and boxes. When the ball is kept whizzing through the air during a rally of five minutes by the excited and muscular pelotaros the enthusiasm of the spectators boils over.—New York Journal.

Immense Honey Combs.

India, where the giant bees, found in that country, build in its forests combs as large as any ordinary house door. These huge combs, hung from the limbs of lofty trees, or from projective ledges of rock at a high altitude, give enormous quantities of wax. Bee-hunting is a profession in India, and the hunters have a superstitious fear of the insects, but are very clever in attacking their nests by strategem. Their usual method is to climb the tree from a high limb of which the comb depends, swinging below it a long stick with a bunch of ignited leaves on the end of it until the bees are driven out. Opportunity is then taken to cut away the great comb and lower it to the ground by means of a rope. Vast quantities of honey and wax collected in this manner may be seen in the warehouses and shops of the cities. The largest bee farm in the United Kingdom is in the village of Usworth, county of Durham, the property of Mr. W. B. Chambers, shoemaker, who has twenty hives with a million bees. The total number of hives of bees in the world is about seven and a half millions, producing 185 million pounds of honey per annum.—Tid-Bits.

Had Been Very Moderate.

I shall fine you for contempt of Court, said the judge, as he glared at the lawyer who had aroused his ire.

"With all due respect to your honor," responded the lawyer, "I think that you should not. I have been particularly careful not to express my true feelings towards the Court."—Answers

Straßburg. Die Militärverwaltung hat der Stadt gegen Erlag von 2,500,000 Mark für den Bau eines erweiterten Hafens im Rhein militärischen Areal abgetreten und Baufreiheit gewährt, obwohl hierdurch das bisherige System der Fortifikation in einzelnen Beziehungen eine Einbuße erleidet. Zur Kompensation soll nun die von der Stadt gezahlte Summe zur ausgleichenden Wiederherstellung der fortifikatorischen Sicherheit verwendet werden, so daß in Straßburg mit diesen Fortifikationsbauten, der Hafenanlage und dem beabsichtigten Ausbau der Bahnhofanlagen eine Zeit umfangreicher Bauthätigkeit beginnen dürfte.

Wien. Die in den letzten Jahren so überstark emporgeschossene Fahrradfabrikation droht in Wien in's Stocken zu gerathen. Die Ueberproduktion in dieser Industrie-Branche war eine so gewaltige, daß zahlreiche Fahrradfabriken sich jetzt genöthigt sehen, ihren Betrieb einzuschränken und einen Theil ihrer Arbeiter zu entlassen.—In Folge falscher Weichenstellung auf der hiesigen Stadtbahn ist ein ganzer Güterzug vom Bahnkörper auf die Straße herabgestürzt. Die Geschichte ging aber noch gut ab; mit Ausnahme des Lokomotivführers ist Niemand verletzt worden.

Klausenburg. Auf der Eisenbahnfahrt von Karlsburg nach hier gerieth der Waggon, in welchem sich der Bischof Graf Majlath befand, in Brand, der so rapide um sich griff, daß der Bischof nur mit großer Mühe gerettet werden konnte.

Kornеuburg. In der hiesigen Landeszwangs-Anstalt revoltirten die Sträflinge, weil ihnen die Direktion den Biergenuß am Sonntage von zwei Krügeln auf ein Krügel einschränkte. Militär mußte einschreiten und die Ordnung wieder herstellen.

Prag. Die ersten Chargirten sämmtlicher farbentragenden Verbindungen wurden auf die Universitätskanzlei geladen, wo ihnen der Rektor mittheilte, daß sie auf Grund polizeilicher Anordnung höchstens zu Dreien in Farben über die Straße gehen dürfen, da sonst die Wache einschreiten werde. Die Anordnung richtet sich gegen den althergebrachten Grabenbummel der deutschen Studentenschaft.

Proßnitz. Bei der Wahl der Gemeindevertretung wurde, nachdem der bisherige Bürgermeister Wojaczek jede Wiederwahl auf das Entschiedenste abgelehnt hatte, J. Wait, Direktor der bäuerlichen Proßnitzer Malzfabrik, zum Bürgermeister und Reichsrathabgeordneter Skala zum Bürgermeister-Stellvertreter gewählt.

Teltschen. Die deutschen Gastwirthe dahier, wo der große Fideikommißbesitz des Premierministers Grafen Thun liegt, rächen sich für die tschechischen Sympathien des Grafen dadurch, daß sie das Bier, das auf den Gütern desselben gebraut wird, boykotten. Jetzt kann Graf Thun sehen, wie er sein Gebräu los wird.

CHAPTER XIII.

"Taking into consideration," recommenced Judge Delno, after a short lull in the proceedings, in which they one and all made an effort at self control and remembered that there were women present, one of whom represented the bone of contention in the case—"taking into consideration the fact that our ways are as totally opposed as the poles, I shall put a few questions which it would afford me a keen satisfaction for many reasons, not all of which are entirely personal, if you would answer, count." He ignored Desmoulins, to the visible perturbation of that worthy.

"What questions?"

"Are you aware that in the marriage you propose there is evidence of true nobility—nobility disassociated generally from marriages of this sort? Your demand is apparently entirely disinterested? You give all, you demand nothing?"

The count rubbed his hands together violently. "It is understood in France," he finally stated blandly, "that the family of the fiancee offers with her a sum sufficient to insure her husband against disaster—since, obviously, he assumes with marriage its expenses, its responsibilities, its reforms." He paused. "That sum is called a dot."

"The aforesaid dot to be reserved for the wife in case of misfortune befalling her husband?"

"Not so. That dot to be paid down to her suitor's bankers, under the assumption that the income to be drawn from it will be hers as well as his."

"Admirable! And what is his is hers?"

The count cleared his throat. "Unfortunately for the woman," he murmured, a trifle awkwardly, "the law in France is what we call raide."

"Unelastic," translated Stornmouth humorously, if not literally.

"The wife's property is invariably subservient to the will of her husband," continued the count, with a scowl.

"Justly," remarked the judge suavely, "if she receives in the marriage contract a sum equivalent to the sum advanced by her parents to be accredited to her. The"—

"Pardon, monsieur. When an American woman of property unites herself with a distinguished French family, she receives the title only in exchange for her personal property."

"And her husband's property—what of that?"

"That stands in her husband's name—with her own."

"You mean to say, then, that she buys his title with her money, her purity and her youth, demands no security against possible disaster and is supposed to be thankful and contented that her choice still respects her for such an evidence of individual imbecility?"

"Monsieur puts it harshly. Why does monsieur presume that a Frenchman desires to unite himself with a foreigner? In so doing the Parisian renounces his personal satisfaction for all time. A foreigner, to a Parisian born and bred, is a specimen both uninteresting and incomprehensible. A Parisian understands and is understood by his own class, by his own customs, by his own heart. It is rarely, unless in middle age, if monsieur will take into consideration most Franco-American unions, that the Parisian is the first to give evidence of a desire to sacrifice himself to a foreigner, even though that foreigner be as young and beautiful as Miss Delno." The count laid his hand upon that portion of his anatomy which is popularly supposed to represent the place where the heart should be. He bowed very low indeed, possibly to make up somewhat for the bald cruelty of his proposition.

"I will put it more harshly still. Your title, it is obvious, is your only claim? You propose to offer it for a consideration?"

"Monsieur is pleased to strip my proposition of its bloom."

"Pah! It has no bloom. It is as starved of ultimate promise, as devoid of the beauty of hope and aspiration, as barren of the sacredness we Americans associate with the divine duties, the tender promise of true conjugal union, as you are devoid of any sense of honor to make it. You call yourself a nobleman. Know, then, there is not a savage in our far west who understands so little the law of exchange as do you. He chooses his squaw out of his tribe. He may give her nothing in exchange for her gewgaws and her maidenhood but a tomahawk and a pair of arms with brawn in them and a soul teeming with the strength of his savage forefathers, but he knows the law—an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth. He takes his bride to his heart the way a lion takes his mate. He gives her his manhood or his protection—call it what you will. In any case he stands between her and lesser brutes who would snatch her from his arms. A fig for your vaunted civilization! Give me, were I a girl, a virgin man out of one of our western forests, with the stir of life's combat in his veins, without a sou, only his birthright, the keen desire in him to succor the weak. Give me a man among men, not a fop, who seeks to sell his debts, dispose of his title and yet still retain it, figure up his bride as a means of financial reinstatement, to be coerced and finally abused and thrown out when stripped of her helpfulness in the time of need"—

"But, monsieur"—

But Judge Delno, like a warhorse with the sound of the battlecry in his ears, continued. "Civilization!" he cried. "What has it taught you, you foreigners, with your vaunted age we lack, with your vaunted art we are struggling to acquire, with your vaunted vice which unhappily we in our younger generation are striving to attain? It has taught you to lay low your manhood and put in its place a thing called self, a self which digs a grave for and buries and raises a headstone to personal integrity. When birds nest, they nest with birds. When cattle mate, they mate with cattle. When a Frenchman demands his 'right' to claim a bride, he offers a stone for bread, a rotten carcass in exchange for incarnate purity."

She stepped forward slightly.

A clear voice broke in abruptly. It was the voice of Desmoulins.

"Who asks us to sell our titles for your lucre? The American. Who comes out of the east and west with his ducats clanking loudly and his bragging voice declaring he will buy art, heart and emotions? The American. He never thinks how we regard him. He acts from the standpoint alone of how he regards us. How we laugh! Mais, how we laugh! We have lived; he has yet to grow. We have suffered. He is longing to throw himself into the fray and to be gored alive rather than to wait for time to ripen him. If we choose to gore him, who can blame us? It is what he has demanded, what he has cried for, like a sick child whimpering for the moon."

"To continue with the case in hand," interrupted Stornmouth. For the first time he admired Desmoulins. After all, in this Frenchman's misused soul there dwelt a spark of that fire which assails the lowest of human creatures at times, that fire which flames out into vital protest in silent hours and demands the truth as a feverish invalid calls for water to quench his thirst. For the first time Stornmouth judged the American abroad from the French standpoint. It was not a pleasant standpoint to this virile specimen of its best blood, its best methods, its noblest intentions; but, endeavor as he might, he could not deny the fact that Desmoulins' accusation held a semblance of truth as regarded a small number of his compatriots who had visited France, bought up its titles and estates and lost a considerable record for keen patriotism or national fidelity in the process. He knew that the exception was not the rule. He, in justice, could not blame Desmoulins for thinking otherwise.

"I refuse," the judge calmly announced, "to permit my daughter to enter into any such alliance—unless," turning toward Priscilla, "she loves you."

Priscilla, her eyes ablaze, had been leaning over the back of her father's chair.

She grew visibly pale as she raised her spirited young head at his call. She stepped forward slightly and leaned one little hand upon Judge Delno's shoulder, as though for support—for support in the argument which had been hammering against her temples for weeks, and which under existing circumstances at last took an adequate stand in all its acquired strength—a stand which established conviction in the hearts of those for and against her protest, who listened to its young propounder nolens volens.

"It has occurred to me, count," she said very gently, with that fearless method of attack which makes American girlhood the vital and bonny thing it is to home masculine hearts which respect it and foreign masculine hearts which seek to oppress it and to lay its young strength and vigor and brightness so very low in demanding of it its worst—"it has occurred to me more than once lately that the main part of what I in my inexperience should call desirability in matrimony has been left out of your proposition. Until now I have not spoken. It seemed to me useless. It seemed to me you would not understand it. It is so very sweet and dear. Its name is love. With us—we American girls—it comes or it does not come, but when it comes it comes for good, and when it comes there is not much ambition in it, I think. Sacrifice, too, goes out—a word we have forgotten. Sometimes I know girls marry titles and are happy, but not on account of the title. In those cases the title is merely an accessory to their happiness, just as it should be to yours. Their husbands welcome it for both their sakes as a fortunate circumstance in life which, unworthily enough, bids people lacking dignity of character to bow down to them.

"You asked me, you have asked me more than once, whether you could place your proposition before my father. I did not know the nature of the proposition. As it stands I decline it. Had it stood otherwise I in all probability should have refused it, not because you have nothing—if I had loved you I should not have considered that—but because you had not the manliness to tell me the truth and risk yourself from that standpoint alone. We love in that land of ours you so little understand the men who lay down their lives to save them ultimately. The men who save their lives temporarily, only to lose them in the end, as we consider it, American girls seldom love for long."

Sometimes out of the dead level of the commonplace there springs to life a little flower of a familiar aspect. We gaze at it wonderingly, with astonished, enraptured eyes. Happy are those of us who have plucked it in the morning of our days to wear it in our bosoms for all time, cherishing, with its soft pressure against our hearts, memories as of primroses and hawthorn in the springtime. If we have not plucked it and let it dwell with us, its downy head, like the winsome pleading of a little child softening the edges of our griefs, one day when we are worn and old it lifts itself again out of the marsh of our misdeeds and confronts us when we least expect it. This time, when it makes its beauty evident, with a choking, unquenchable pain which tears at our heartstrings like inevitable loss, we recognize, too late, that the time has passed during which we might have culled it worthily and worn it openly.

Perhaps such a feeling came to life in De Lacaze's soul, that soul so sordid with its owner's mistranslation of life as to have forgotten for years that such a characteristic as personal probity existed. Perhaps not. The judge, as he watched his face closely, sternly resentful, thought he saw something flit across it at Priscilla's words which resembled a flicker of acute pain. Then he considered that he had been mistaken. The count rose and confronted Priscilla.

"I love you, mademoiselle," he said, with his old fashioned inclination, so odd to American eyes, so correct in French titled circles, misunderstood or otherwise.

"Forgive me," returned Priscilla gently, "but I do not love you, count."

"There have been women who have learned to love," persisted the count, "women such as you, mademoiselle."

Priscilla flushed very suddenly and deeply.

"I cannot," she answered, very low.

"You could not try, mademoiselle?" De Lacaze's little withered countenance was almost wistful now. He experienced no awkwardness in pleading his suit before a roomful of people. It was customary in cases of this sort, he supposed. To Priscilla the situation was not only ludicrous, but full of anguish. She saw Stornmouth's face, with its stern mouth and powerful brows, as though through a mist. Desmoulins was pulling his mustache violently. He knew De Lacaze was playing his last card. The transaction had glided from him like quicksilver. The present issue was maddeningly conclusive.

"It is impossible," said Priscilla.

"Why impossible?"

Priscilla shook her head. Then she turned toward her father. "Oh, send him away!" she cried. "It is hard for me—and for him!"

The count drew himself up with a little stiff movement which betrayed a record of military training.

"Assez, mademoiselle. I have lost," he affirmed curtly to Desmoulins. Be it said to his credit, he accepted his defeat with no little courage, considering what it involved for him.

"I will hold these papers," remarked Judge Delno, with precision, "against M. Desmoulins until he admits his collusion in them." He pointed to the two letters. "The fine incurred by the commission of the crime they confirm is 1,000 francs," he added pithily.

Then quite unexpectedly he drew a slip of paper from his pocket. "I find upon search," he remarked blandly, the lids of his eyes unlifted, his suave voice carrying the weight of an ominous calm, its volume increasing as he continued, "that the aforesaid property in Touraine was confiscated some 90 years since by your father's creditors, and also the property in Lombardy; that, although what you state is true in regard to the village of Chambourlies in the Vosges—that your grandfather sold it for 10,000,000 francs—what your aforesaid relative received was $10,000 all told.

"I am at a loss"—the judge's voice here took on a quality which his colleagues were wont to dread—"to discover any sum accredited to you at your banker's, where, I have been informed, you do not possess a checkbook. At the office where you are employed as reporter I have received this recommendation, or, as M. Desmoulins calls it, renseignements: 'De Lacaze. Wherewithal? Nil. Income? Nil. Intelligence? Unequal. Ability? Undeniable. Salary, 400 francs a month.'" He paused. "At your club," he added dryly, "your debts are reported to exceed your winnings." There was a fine smile in the judge's eyes as he laid the paper down. "So slim a case had hardly been worth crossing the Atlantic for," he mused. Stornmouth could have conducted the matter without his assistance.

Desmoulins had been moving toward the door. He started as though he had been shot as a man barred his exit—the man designated as "The Rat," Stornmouth's garcon from Durand's, with his well known smooth face and little ferret eyes. Desmoulins recognized him as his direst foe. He it was, he now remembered, before whom he had laid his nefarious proposition as regarded De Lacaze. He recollected at this moment that this man held him by the throat as effectually as those papers of Judge Delno, which might encompass his ruin.

Before the occupants of the room could acquire even recognition of the arrival of this last overpowering witness of the two rascals' consternation and visible acknowledgment that the game was up, Desmoulins, with a brief Gallic exclamation which was as salient as it was rife with an awful purpose, had thrown himself against the astonished newcomer and was dragging him frantically through the doorway out on the landing. There he fastened him by the throat against the wall and pummeled him roundly. Then, before Stornmouth or Doxie could come to "The Rat's" rescue, Desmoulins had seized him bodily in his arms and had thrown him, with a dull crash, far down the stairs. "The Rat" had been so suddenly attacked—expectant only of a large remuneration for putting in an appearance upon the scene where, he had been assured by Stornmouth, his presence would be sorely needed—that, taken unawares, he was unprepared to defend himself.

When, bruised and shaken, happily with no bones broken, but with his countenance mashed from Gallic exuberance to a mass of pulp, one eye nearly gouged out, his throat encircled by a purple rim, shaking from head to foot, he was gathered up, he stuck his vanquished head forth from the window of the fiacre which Stornmouth had hired for him to convey him to the juge de paix with Desmoulins (the latter having been handed over to two sergents de ville who had opportunely made their appearance at this moment) and gave vent to some memorable words. "'Twas he," he said solemnly, with a knowing wink, mindful of the promised sum for constituting himself a witness, "Desmoulins of the Eclair. Et je m'en fiche du reste."

The count had slunk away when Stornmouth returned to the library. Indeed the room was vacant, with the exception of a slight figure which stood beside the mantelpiece gravely gazing into the fire—a little figure in a pink gown, with a pale face and shaking, nervous hands.

"Priscilla," said Stornmouth, "how well, how very well, you know what love is! Who taught you?"

"A man," answered the sweet voice, "a man who misunderstood me"—the voice grew firmer as it continued, as though gathering courage as its owner became strengthened by what the words strung on it contained—"a man who dared to think"—

"Dared?" Stornmouth quoted reproachfully.

"Yes, dared," said Priscilla. "You thought," she said, "oh, my dear, my very dear!"—her hands were in Stornmouth's hands by this time and she was speaking very fast—"you thought I played fast and loose with you—with you! It was for Constance—all for Constance. I wished to pull her through."

"And you sacrificed yourself thus for her?" Stornmouth spoke huskily, in a tone which held no small element of awe and reverence. His hands were clasping her shoulders. Presently one of them crept up to the rounded chin and turned the dearest little face in the world toward the tender, searching eyes that loved it better than life.

"Well, I don't know that I mind much," whispered Priscilla.

"She is so poor," exclaimed Priscilla, "she could not pay her critics. There was no other way. Besides, I wished to teach both you and him a lesson."

"If you love me," whispered Stornmouth irrelevantly, with pardonable audacity under the circumstances, "you will, of your own accord, teach me something I have longed to know all my life." His brilliant eyes held a compelling, masterful look which made Priscilla tremble.

"Yes!" answered Priscilla, and then she managed to ejaculate, "And what is that?"

"The lesson a woman teaches the man she loves with all her soul when she lays her lips on his and tells him in that kiss she will be his wife."

"Is there no other way?" demanded a remarkably subdued, shaky little girlish voice dubiously.

"No."

"Well, I don't know that I mind much," whispered Priscilla.

CHAPTER XIV.

"The Rat" exhibited, in the confrontation with his assailant before the juge de paix, a memory which made him famous. It held pigeonholed facts as a honeycomb holds honey. Indeed he proved himself so valuable an aid in emphasizing Desmoulins' just retribution that he received an offer—as soon as shook off the coils of French administrative methods—of the position of head detective in a private force which proved itself later to be possessed of rare excellence and undeniable originality in ways and means hitherto undreamed of in the business.

Desmoulins, accused of collusion in many cases of fraud concealed until now, was sent to Mazas for a period of two years. "The Rat" smiled grimly as he was marched off to prison between two gendarmes. The exuberance returned to his countenance and the light to his eyes as he administered his own medicine to the individual who had sought for so long to suppress him.

De Lacaze slunk off toward the Midi, having been informed by his employers of the Figaro that his services were no longer required.

The affair caused an immense stir in Paris. It was deemed wise that its perpetrators should be forgotten.

For three years Constance Brilla pursued her vocal career. Then she retired from the stage. In those three years she learned how sad a struggle women born to private life assume when they elect to cast in their lot with those ungodly and lowborn creatures with whom the foreign stage almost invariably overflows.

Doxie returned to America with his honest heart fired with new zeal now that he had her promise to work upon.

Constance's loneliness was profound. Friends she had none. Jealousy and venom cap sheafed any possible contingency in that delightful direction. Her fine character, her high standard for art pure and simple, her desire to succeed through merit, proved her direst foes, since unconsciously they assumed for her a superiority which in any other direction she was far from feeling. Her better womanhood only won for her venomous innuendo from her comrades of both genders. For the foreign stage, feverish from incessant contact with scurvy methods and talent strung on a record of viciousness—a viciousness perhaps acquired or inherited through strangling poverty and imperative association with immorality—has at present very few instances of indomitable will, coupled with merit spiritual as much as material, having made its way worthily to the fore. It has been proved, it is being proved, it will be proved again and again, that success, the highest, sweetest version of righteous achievement, is practically unattainable in this quarter for young, beautiful and well born foreigners unless through the most awful strife, a strife incomprehensible perhaps, at least unmastered, by onlookers at home, a strife which to uninitiated maidenhood is as the blizzard to the bothouse flower, a strife no less ceaseless nor racking than the strife of the spirit against the flesh.

When Constance turned her face toward home, she experienced none of the regret it might have been supposed would be her portion upon taking such a decision—a decision to renounce the footlights for the fireside, the applause of the multitude for the appreciation of her friends. Rather she rejoiced, for she recognized, sadly enough, that her star would never be in the ascendant in a country where human nature warred against her peace with vile innuendo and inappreciation of her noble battle against deterioration. Her mind encompassed finally the sad conclusion that she was purposely misunderstood. Happily by that time Stephen Doxie came in search of his wife.

At home at last, where the sound of the thrashing machine made music for her dreams, and the grasshoppers droned out their monotonous song, and the odor of salt and sedge drifted its fragrant freshness through the honeysuckle which sweetened her quiet thoughts, she wrote one day a letter to Mrs. John Stornmouth of New York.

"Stephen says," ran the little missive, "that every note I sing to him is worth its weight in gold. Although he is not the greatest critic in the world, somehow I believe him. By the way, dearie, are there not days when you are glad that we gave up our dreams—yours of a title and mine of being a prima donna?"

"Constance, you dear old girl," came the answer, a month later, "how did you ever know I wished to be a countess? John has never even suspected it. Besides, it is all very well for you to be resigned. You were a prima donna."

That very night the Stornmouths gave a dinner, a fashionable dinner, with a pink and silver background, Hungarians in a small conservatory at the left of the dining room, several of the season's prettiest debutantes and Mrs. John Stornmouth radiant at the head of the table.

The conversation drifted on to the international marriage question.

"Listen," Priscilla advised soberly, her hand on the dimpled wrist of a girl at her side, a girl who had turned the heads of half England's noblest sons at the queen's last drawing room, a girl with eyes like golden topazes and a head like a stag in its spirited carriage, a brow for a tiara, the world said, "listen. Don't do it. There will be days, you know, when the atmosphere will be heavy as lead and your husband won't care to understand."

"But how do you know?"

Priscilla flushed violently. Her eyes caught Stornmouth's. His were guilty of the old twinkle. "Hush!" she whispered fearfully. "I came very near it. He"—indicating her vis-a-vis—"never knew how near."

And just at that moment one of John Stornmouth's most observing guests wondered why his host threw back his handsome head and gave vent to a ringing laugh.

BASKET BALL.

The girls of the Plainfield High School have just received another challenge for a game with an out-of-town team. A girls' academy in Montclair has written to Miss Bessie F. Randolph, secretary of the Girls' Athletic Association of the High School, proposing that the two schools arrange a series of games. It seems probable that the challenge will be accepted if satisfactory arrangements can be made.

The managemet of the Y. M. C. A. basket ball team is considering the advisibility of a scheme that would seem eminently advisible and advantageous. It is a well-known fact, especially since the changes made to concur with the State laws, that the local association gymnasium is no place for a public exhibition of basket ball. The apparatus greatly hinders the players and then there is but little space for the audience. Basket ball has now attained such a place in the eyes of the Plainfield public that there is no doubt of its success as a popular amusement. The management is now considering the advisibility of securthe Crescent Rink for a game with the basket ball team of Yale University. The Yale boys are quite anxious to come to Plainfield and meet the local team and have granted the management here a date, February 23d. The question of leaving the gymnasium is one that the physical work committee will have to consider. It is to be hoped that they will decide favorably, as it would be too bad that Plainfield should miss the chance of seeing the Yale boys, who are considered one of the best teams of the country, and that the local team should miss the chance of showing just what its strength is against such a powerful antagonist. The rink is an excellent place in which to play and would offer unsurpassed facilities for accommodating a large crowd. Considering the popularity of the game here there is no doubt as to the success of a game played there. All the members of the local team are much in favor of the proposed match with Yale.

DEATH OF EDWARD T. HANN.

Letter-Carrier Passes Away This Afternoon—Afflicted With Consumption.

After a long illness with consumption, Edward T. Hann, of Somerset place, died this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Mr. Hann was for many years one of Plainfield's most popular and efficient letter-carriers. He had a host of friends who will deeply regret his death.

He was during the past year a great sufferer from the disease, and death was considered only a question of a short time.

Star Course Entertainment.

Last evening at the Y. M. C. A. Hall a large and enthusiastic audience enjoyed one of the Star Course entertainments. The entertainers were Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Thompson, necromancer and fantasists, and Prof. Charles Wold, who gave several selections with musical glasses. The artists were all of a superior order and the entertainment was strictly first-class. The sleight-of-hand tricks were clever and thoroughly amused those present. Mrs. Thompson assisted her husband in playing on the piano, while Master Harold Thompson also assisted on the stage.

Wreck Victims Soon to Go Home.

All of the injured people at the hospital as a result of the Lehigh Valley Railroad wreck at West Dunellen are steadily improving and in a short time some of them will be able to leave for their homes.

Story of a Slave.

To be bound hand and foot for years by the chains of disease is the worst form of slavery. George D. Williams, of Manchester, Mich., tells how such a slave was made free. He says: "My wife has been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Bitters, she is wonderfully improved and able to do her own work." This supreme remedy for female diseases quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, headache, backache, fainting and dizzy spells. This miracle working medicine is a godsend to weak, sickly, run down people. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50 cents. Sold by L. W. Randolph, Druggist.

THE POLITICAL PLUMS.

the original lines and some other projects, like the addition to the Morris Plains Asylum, are met with the desired appropriations, there will be little need for the Governor or the Legislature to worry about some means of keeping down the treasury surplus. A part at least of this increasing surplus, the Governor thinks, should revert to the municipalities in some way or go to lessen the State school tax.

Another Suit Against Calvary Church.

L. L. Manning has brought suit against the Calvary Baptist church (colored) for $15, for rent of the hall over his marble works on West Front street. The case has been partly settled, but is set down for trial January 31st before Justice Nash.

A Social Gathering.

A social gathering was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Morse, on Jackson avenue, when a few friends assembled and spent an evening of sociability and music. The affair was a pleasant one throughout.

CAMPANINI'S LARGE SALARY.

He is Said to Have Been the First to Receive $1,000 a Night.

Campanini is said to have been the first tenor to receive $1,000 a night, and he received that amount from Henry Abbey, who wanted to get him away from Col. Mapleson. Mr. Abbey's name has been chiefly associated with the large salaries paid to foreign artists in this country. When he conducted the first season after the Metropolitan Opera House was built and opened in 1882-83 the high salaries for the first time became one of the burning questions which divided the interests of the American public with the singers' own merits. Salaries have increased since that day probably to the same extent that wealth in New York has increased, and it is doubtful if they are proportionately higher to-day. Mlle. Calve in her arrangements for a concert tour to follow the season of opera at the Metropolitan demanded $2,000 a concert. She gets between $1,400 and $1,500 at the Metropolitan and forty performances guaranteed. Mme. Emma Eames is receiving this year about $900 a night, with a guarantee of at least forty performances. After Mme. Klafsky's death Mme. Nordica demanded of Mr. Grau $1,500 a performance, a guarantee of ten performances a month during the season, and exclusive right to the role of Elsa. Plancon gets $400 a night and Lassalle about $700. Mme. Litvinne, who has had the hardest work of the season, gets $300 a night. These salaries will give some idea of the expense at which the opera performances are given.—New York Sun.

Old Zimmerhackle's Observations.

The man who has no will in life will not need to make one at death.

The question is frequently asked: "Does advertising pay?" Certainly it does. Do you think we are running a newspaper for our health?

"Smith was found lying by the roadside."

"That's nothing to be alarmed at, for if he had been found lying anywhere else, he would have been lying just the same."

There is probably not another thing on earth that is subjected to as much abuse as the human stomach. Sometimes it rebels, but it is always willing to compromise and be friendly again.

Sunshine is the cause of more colds than cold and bluster, for a few rays of sunshine will fool a man into thinking he can dispense with his overcoat, or flannels, and then comes the resulting snuffles or pneumonia.

The brain of an ant is larger in proportion than that of any other known creature. That's why an ant knows enough to work six months of the year and sleep all the rest of the time. Small-brained man must work fourteen months in every year, and then die in debt. "Go to the ant, thou sluggard. Consider her ways and be wise."

His Genealogy.

One day a malicious person said to Alexandre Dumas fils, "Your father was a mulatto, was he not?"

Dumas replied, "Yes, sir my father was a mulatto, my grandfather a negro, and my great-grandfather a monkey. My genealogy begins where yours ends."

Bill to Keep Polygamists Out of Congress

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.—Representative Clark of Iowa yesterday introduced a bill "providing that no polygamist shall be a senator or representative."

It provides that "no person living in or practicing polygamy shall be eligible to be a member of either house of Congress of the United States, nor shall such person be permitted to hold a seat therein."

It is further provided that the evidence of polygamy shall be "of whatever nature that establishes the fact." Another provision makes the act take immediate effect.

Married Brother's Widow.

Mascoutah, Ill., Jan. 24.—Robert M. Keller has been married to the widow of his brother Henry, who died two years ago.

On his death bed Henry exacted a promise from Robert to take care of his wife and business. Robert also promised to marry Henry's widow if his own wife should die.

His wife did die a few months ago, and Robert was able to fulfill all the promises made to his dying brother.

JOHN KEAN IS NOW JERSEY'S SENATOR.

Formally Declared so in the Legislature This Noon.

ABBETT DON'T LIKE SMITH.

THE MINORITY CANDIDATE WAS NOT HIS PERSONAL CHOICE.

Little Business Transacted in Either House Yesterday—Senator Stokes Has a Plan for Doing Away With the Great Surplus by Aiding the Public Schools—Bill to Make Telephones Cheaper.

(Special to The Daily Press)

Trenton, January 25.—Balloting for a United States Senator was the feature of yesterday's session of the New Jersey Legislature.

The Senate balloted first, and the proceeding was quickly over. William M. Johnson, of Bergen, nominated John Kean, and Mr. Smith was named by Senator Martin, of Sussex. The voting proceeded quickly, and Mr. Kean received 14 votes to Mr. Smith's 6. Soon afterward Mr. McDermott, of Hudson, entered the chamber and requested to be recorded for Mr. Smith, which made his vote 7.

Promptly at noon the House took up the balloting. Wood McKee, leader of the Republicans, named John Kean, and James J. Murphy Mr. Smith.

Mr. Abbett's name was called first, and rising in his seat he said: "Mr. Speaker, in casting my vote I bow to the will of my party caucus and do not desire to be considered as giving expression to my personal preference for the office of United States Senator, I vote for James Smith."

Somehow during the roll call Mr. Marnell, of Hoboken, did not get recorded, but he hurried to the clerk's desk and had himself placed on record for James Smith. Mr. Smith received the full Democratic vote. Both Houses adjourned for the day when they had taken the vote. This noon a joint meeting was held, and when the clerks read the journals of their respective Houses, to show that John Kean had received a majority of the votes of both chambers, he was declared, by the presiding officer, to be the Senator in Congress from New Jersey for a term of six years, beginning March 4th next.

Little business was transacted in either house yesterday. The Senate concurred in the House resolution for the appointment of a committee to investigate the affairs of the new reformatory at Rahway.

In the House Speaker Watkins was presented with a gavel similar to that which President Reed, of the Senate, received last night. It was made by the same man, Joseph Jones, the eighty-four-year-old Republican, of Campen county.

Several bills of more than usual importance were introduced in both chambers. In the Senate Senator Stokes attempted to solve in a degree the surplus enigma, which is now keeping the Republicans guessing, with a bill providing that the Legislature shall annually appropriate whatever sum shall be deemed wise for the support of the public schools of the State, which sum shall be apportioned among the school districts, with a view of reducing the annual State school tax. The tax now is $5 per child, and the purpose of this bill is to cut down gradually that amount until the entire tax is wiped out, if the State Treasury from year to year will permit. For the present it is not expected that the legislative appropriation will permit of more than a partial reduction of the tax.

The House began early to attempt to regulate the affairs of corporations, and two bills of importance were introduced. Mr. Marnell, of Hudson, got in one fixing telephone rates at not more than $50 per year, and not over twenty-five cents for five minutes conversation between persons in different cities.

Mr. Horner, of Burlington, introduced a measure which he entitles "An Act to privide for the safety and comfort of passengers and to prevent accidents on trolley cars." Each car must be heated from November 1st to April 1st and have suitable safety fenders. It is provided that not only are the companies to be liable for damages to the individual injured, but for every person that is injured the company guilty must pay a fine of $100.

Mr. McKee, of Morris, introduced a bill making the salary of Prosecutors in counties having a population of fifty thousand and seventy-five thousand $3,000 annually.

Plenty of Hot Weather Commodity.

ELIZABETHPORT LYCEUM VISITED PLAINFIELD CATHOLIC CLUB.

The Honors at Bowling Were Evenly Divided and Then All Took A Hand at the Entertainment That Followed.

Twenty-five members of the Elizabethport Lyceum came to Plainfield last evening and were entertained at the clubhouse of the Plainfield Catholic Club. Despite the storm there were a hundred of the associate and active members of the club on hand to receive the guests.

Bowling was the first event of the evening. After each team won a game a supper was served and then followed singing and speeches. A dance ended the evening's enjoyment and lasted until 2 o'clock this morning.

The scores in the bowling match were as follows:

HIS DAYS OF SERVICE ARE OVER FOR ALL TIME.

DEATH OF LETTER-CARRIER ED. HANN

Ravages of Consumption Were Too Much For Him—One of the Oldest Letter-Carriers.

Edward T. Hann, of Somerset place, who died yesterday afternoon, as reported in these columns, was one of the original letter-carriers that Plainfield had and was appointed in May, 1886, by President Cleveland during his first term, when the late William L. Force was postmaster. Mr. Hann was one of the best carriers. He was assigned to the business part of the town owing to his exceptional quickness in delivering mail. He served in that capacity for eight years, when his territory was changed and Carrier Glaentzer was appointed to assist in the delivery of mail in the business section. This relieved Mr. Hann considerable, as the mail was growing heavier every day. Mr. Hann served the Government continuously since his appointment until about a year ago, when his health began to fail. He took a vacation, covering a period of several months, during which time he seemed to grow stronger and his health was much better. He finally decided to go back to his position last summer. He held it till late in the fall when he was obliged to retire again. He did everything possible to regain his health, and all that medical skill could do was employed in his behalf. Toward the last, however, the physicians would give little hope, and it was then known that the end was not far off. The end came peacefully yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Hann was very popular among those whom he served with mail, and among his fellow-carriers he was well liked. He had many qualities that made him popular, and his willingness to do what he could won for him many friends. The most of his life was spent in this city, although he was a native of Hunterdon county. A wife and three children survive him.

Entertained Young Friends.

Miss Eva Estelle Wilkins, of East Fifth street, entertained a few friends at her home last evening. The evening's pleasure consisted of games and music, after which cake and cream were served. The table decorations were pink carnations and smilax. Among the guests were Miss Charlotte Messersmith, Miss Helen Hockridge, Miss Nellie Winckler, George Woodrow, Fred Ross, Frank L. Batson and Fred Phillips.

A Fine Turkey Supper.

Visions of a fine turkey supper are now floating through the minds of many Plainfielders, for they expect to attend the turkey supper to be given at Trinity Reformed church tomorrow and Friday evenings under the auspices of the Ladies' Christian Work Society. The supper will be all right and it will only cost 35 cents. The profits will be used to pay the balance on the church furnishings.

JURY DECIDES THAT CHURCH MUST PAY.

B. W. Hand Wins on Second Trial of His Case.

GIVEN A VERDICT FOR $70.

NO EXCITING TESTIMONY GIVEN YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

Case Occupied Several Hours in Justice Mattison's Court—Church People Claimed That the Trustees Had No Right to Sign the Note, as They Were Not Instructed to—To Appeal Case

For the second time the case of B. W. Hand against the First Church of Christ was tried yesterday afternoon, and for several hours twelve jurymen listened to half a score of witnesses telling different kinds of stories in connection with some financial transactions between Mr. Hand and the church, in which three notes played an important part. These notes were given by the board of trustees of the church, whose names are signed to it, but now they claim that the church is not responsible for its payment, as the trustees have no power to pay bills without being authorized to do so by the church.

The sharp retorts and spirit of anger which pervaded the court room at the last trial of the case were absent yesterday, and the trial simmered down to a plain everyday statement of facts as they were believed by both parties. The jury was given the case at 6:30 o'clock, and after being out an hour came back with a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for the full amount sued for and costs.

As was told last week Mr. Hand is suing the board of trustees, as representing the church, for $70 balance still due him for money loaned. Mr. Hand was the first and only witness for the plaintiff. He offered the notes in evidence. One was for $90 given January 17, 1898. April 18th $10 was paid on the $90 and a new note for $80 given. July 17th the last note for $70 was given, $10 more having been paid on the note. Just before the note became due the board of trustees, through the advice of John Goodwin, it was said, refused to pay the $70 unless Mr. Hand could give the board a bill of particulars of the money he claimed.

Mr. Hand said that he preached for the church at the rate of $5 a Sunday. In answer to cross-questioning, Mr. Hand said that the church still owed him back salary, but that was not included in the amount being sued for.

Rev. Mr. McKane was the first witness sworn for the defense. His testimony was that the church had to authorize the payment of all bills before they were paid.

Joseph L. Shultiess, the church treasurer, said that he had authority from the church to pay such bills as for gas, coal, etc. He said that he signed the note because "he thought Mr. Hand knew all about it." He said that he didn't believe then that the church owes Mr. Hand $70. He admitted that when he handed in his reports to the church that he included in his statement a clause that Mr. Hand held a claim for so much against the church.

Mr. Goodwin, the last witness sworn for the defense, provoked a laugh as soon as his name was called. Last time the case was tried Mr. Goodwin answered an exclamation of W. S. Angleman by calling him a "stinker," and it was expected by those present that there would be a repetition of the scene, but they were disappointed. He and Mr. Angleman passed a few pleasantries, but that was all.

Rev. Mr. Clever, a former pastor, was also called as a witness. He threw considerable light upon the church government. He said he would be willing to do his share towards paying Mr. Hand, and ended by rising in his seat and saying that he desired peace, and held a love and regard for all parties concerned. His remarks brought forth a round of applause which even Justice Mattison, who presided, could not quell at once.

E. E. Brown and E. E. H. Conover gave testimony on one side or the other, then the lawyers summed up and the case given to the jury who were Edward Mundy, Theodore Stites, Lewis Smalley, Amos Stites, Charles Williams, A. S. Huff, Patrick McGue, William Jerolaman, Walter Smalley, William White, George Conover and C. J. Barrett.

The five trustees whose names were signed to the note were B. W. Hand, J. L. Shultiess, Edward Brown, H. Conover and J. J. Ackerman. W. S. Angleman appeared for the plaintiff, and S. S. Swackhamer, of the firm of Codington & Swackhamer, for the de-

Connecting Line Between Bound Brook and South Bound Brook Was Opened This Morning in a Ceremonious Manner.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, January 25.—The opening of the short stretch of track on the Brunswick Traction Company's trolley lines between the New Brunswick and the Dunellen-Somerville branches at Bound Brook was formally accomplished this morning with great eclat by the officials of the company, aided by the presence of a number of dignitaries from New Brunswick, Bound Brook, Lincoln and Dunellen. Car No. 111, which is called the "old reliable" because of its participation in a number of similar ceremonies, was used to run over the new connecting links, which now completes the lines of the Brunswick company.

Manager Radel, of New Brunswick, was on hand to supervise the event. He wore the famous white Alpine hat, which has been his headgear for all trolley openings that he has participated in. The first car passed over the new stretch of track about 10:30, accompanied by the explosion of several torpedoes that had been placed on the rails to signalize the auspicious event in trolleydom. The car was run up East Main street to the tracks running between Dunellen and Somerville, and then continued on a trip to Somerville. As the car passed over the viaduct crossing the Central Railroad of New Jersey tracks a bottle of champagne was broken over the front dashboard.

After today the stage service for the accommodation of the trolley company patrons between Bound Brook and South Bound Brook will be discontinued. A new schedule for the running of cars has not yet been arranged, but it will be in a few days. During the summer months it is expected that through cars will be run between Plainfield and New Brunswick, if mutual terms can be agreed upon between the Plainfield Street Railway Company and the Brunswick Traction Company.

The two cars of the Brunswick Traction Company, used for the ceremonies of opening the connecting link at Bound Brook, were run to this city today at noon. Superintendent Radel was at the motor, while Superintendent Adelmann, of the Plainfield line, was at his side. The second car was was filled with a number of prominent Plainfielders who had been invited to take the trip. The cars were decked out in a gay manner with flags and bunting. It was quite a strange sight to see the blue-banded Brunswick cars in Plainfield, but before long it will undoubtedly become a familiar sight.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY.

Baldwin Boys and Hartfielder Accused of Trespassing.

George and Augustus Baldwin and William Hartfielder were arraigned before Justice Austin yesterday charged by Sydney Colby, superintendent of the North Plainfield Poultry Farm, with trespassing on the property of the farm with gun and dog.

Francis J. Blatz represented the three defendants, who were held for the Grand Jury under $100 bail. Mr. Blatz objected to the Justice trying the case, and insisted that he could only hold them for the Grand Jury or else dismiss the complaint. After a deal of arguing on both sides Mr. Blatz carried his point, and the court decided to waive the right to try the case. Newton Smalley went the boys' bond.

Bad Weather Kept Away the Crowd.

Owing to the inclement weather last evening the entertainment that was to have been given at Grace M. E. church was postponed to next week Tuesday evening. A few persons gathered at the church, but it was unanimously agreed that a postponement would be best. All persons holding tickets for last evening can use the same for next Tuesday evening.

New Officers Presided.

The new officers of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., presided last evening for the first time since the election. Despite the storm there was a good attendance and the meeting was one of great interest. In the good of the order several excellent speeches were made by the officers and members.

An invitation dance will be given in Washington Hall, West Second street, tomorrow evening under the auspices of Wm. Ilisley, M. Brokaw and H. Ackerman. O'Beilly will play.

THE SILK COMPANY FORMALLY ORGANIZED.

Articles Of Incorporation Filed at Elizabeth Yesterday.

THE DIRECTORS CHOSEN.

STOCKHOLDERS MET LAST NIGHT AND FORMALLY ORGANIZED.

Officers of the Watchung Silk Company Elected Last Night—J. C. Pope Is President—Machinery to be Purchased Today at Paterson—Factory to be Located in the Schepflin Block

Yesterday marked the opening of the formal career of the Watchung Silk Company. The concern was regularly incorporated yesterday at Elizabeth, and last night the directors and officers of the company were elected. Today the necessary machinery will be purchased.

The scheme of a silk mill for Plainfield, which was fathered by the local Board of Trade, has reached a successful culmination. Within thirty days it is expected that work will be done in the local mill.

Yesterday, W. R. Codington filed the articles of incorporation for the Watchung Silk Company with the County Clerk at Elizabeth. It is capitalized at $10,000. There are 400 shares at $25 each. Of these 133 shares are reserved for the two organizers, Bullock and Young, to be turned over to them when the profits equal the amount of the capital. The incorporators of the company are: Willis W. Vail, J. F. MacDonald, W. R. Codington, J. C. Pope, E. M. Laing, J. M. Higgins, M. F. Elderton, J. H. McVey, L. B. Woolston, Moses Schloss, Henry Liefke, J. F. Hubbard, A. M. Griffen, F. S. Runyon, A. D. Thompson, J. D. Runyon, Herman Weber, L. L. Manning, Dr. O. L. Jenkins, W. H. Combs, William Lunger, Lewis C VanNest and Allen B. Laing. There are now 178 shares shares subscribed. The promoters have no fear of disposing of the remaining shares.

Last night, a meeting of the stockholders was held in the Board of Trade rooms. There were 121 shares represented. The following board of directors was then elected: W. R. Codington, J. C. Pope, J. F. MacDonald, E. M. Laing, F. S. Runyon, J. H. McVey and H. C. Runyon.

The by-laws were drawn up and adopted after which followed a general discussion of the affairs of the corporation.

The Board of Directors held a meeting later and elected the following officers: President, J. C. Pope; vice president, J. H. McVey; treasurer, W. R. Codington; secretary, Harry C. Runyon; general manager, E. M. Laing.

E. M. Laing, the general manager of the concern, went to Paterson this morning, accompanied by T. R. Bullock and W. J. Young, the practical workers of the company, to purchase the plant of Bannigan Brothers, at Paterson. The plant includes twenty looms and the accompanying machinery. The factory of the company is to be located on the second floor of the Schepflin building, West Front street. Floor space, 50 feet by 85 feet, has been secured. There will be room enough to accommodate forty looms. The power used will be steam, the boilers in the basement supplying an engine that will be placed on the second floor.

The machinery is expected to arrive in Plainfield in a week. Then it will be necessary to fit up the rooms and place the machinery in position. It is thought that that will occupy a period not exceeding thirty days. Then the factory will be ready to turn out silk fabric.

At the start, it is expected that 20 people will be employed. Of these, seven men will be skilled labor who will be brought here as there are none in Plainfield at present. The remainder will be the weavers, women and girls. A few skilled ones will be brought here from Paterson and the rest will be local help who will soon be taught the work. Weavers are paid by the piece. A skilled weaver, running two looms, can make from $2 to $2.50 a day. An inexperienced hand can in a few days make $1 a day.

BECOMING A GREAT LAND

PROF. MACE DELIVERED AN INSTRUCTIVE LECTURE LAST NIGHT.

His Subject Was "The Results of the Union of Nationality and Democracy"—Period From 1828 to 1840 Considered.

The third in the series of lectures on American history by Prof. William H. Mace, of Syracuse University, in the University Extension course, was delivered at the Y. M. C. A. Hall last evening. The subject was "The Results of the Union of Nationality and Democracy." The audience was rather small on account of the severe storm.

The first part of the evening was devoted to questions and answers on the preceding lecture. Three papers on various subjects discussed at that lecture were read. Then came the lecture.

The period in the history of the country between the years 1828 and 1840 was considered. The lecturer told how there began a new era in political affairs of the nation.

The growth of the spoils system began and had its effects on the methods of conducting the campaign and on the government. Even then the question of civil service reform began to be raised. State soveignty entered a new phase and the controversy between the State and national authorities was growing. The government took a hand in regulating the banking system of the country.

Aside from the new era in political affairs, the speaker pointed out the intellectual and material development. There was an awakening in the old world that was felt on this side of the ocean. In literature new men sprang up. Then the modern newspaper began to have its effect on the country. Reforms of various kinds sprang up. The introduction of the steam engine and other machinery presented new industrial conditions. As a result of it all America began to rise in her own and in foreign estimation.

GENUINE THUNDER STORM IN MIDST OF WINTER.

BIG DOWNPOUR OF RAIN LAST NIGHT

Vivid Lightning and Peals of Thunder—Small Sized Flood Occurred.

A genuine thunder storm with all the usual accompaniments visited this section last evening. A heavy shower occurred about 8 o'clock in the evening, the rain falling in torrents, flooding streets and sidewalks while it lasted. Park avening, between North avenue and Front street, was flooded from curb to curb. The water went down as soon as the heavy rainfall lessened.

Shortly after 11 o'clock another heavy shower began, accompanied by very sharp lightning and heavy thunder. There had been occasional flashes of lightning earlier in the evening. The storm lasted for an hour, flooding the streets again. It was accompanied by high winds.

As a result of the very heavy rainfall there was quite a freshet in Green brook. The stream was swollen far above its usual dimensions. No serious damage done by the freshet has yet been reported.

GEORGE BENSON DEAD.

Well-Known Painter Proved a Victim of Pneumonia This Morning.

This morning at 5 o'clock occurred the death of George Benson, of Duer street, who had been seriously ill with pneumonia but a short time. Mr. Benson was well-known in this vicinity. He learned the trade of painter with Woolston & Buckle and worked for them nearly thirteen years. He was a faithful workman and well liked by his employers.

He was born at Dunellen thirty years ago but came to Plainfield when a boy and resided here ever since. Several years ago he was married to a Miss Hull, daughter of Samuel Hull, and she and three children survive him. Mr. Benson's father now resides at Bound Brook. He also has a brother who formerly resided in North Plainfield. Arrangements for funeral services have not yet been completed.

Revival Continues.

There was a very small attendance at the Christian church last night on account of the inclemency of the weather. Rev. Mr. McKane will speak upon the following subject tonight: "Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's." Rev. J. B. Cleaver will speak this evening.

Only One Woman on Hand.

Yesterday afternoon was the time for the regular meeting of the Town Improvement Association, but as only one woman appeared the meeting was called off. The inclement weather was responsible for the non-appearance of the members.

MR. MURRAY EXPLAINS HIS NEW LEGISLATION.

Not on the Warpath Against City Clerk MacMurray.

WHAT HIS BILL PROPOSES.

IT WILL GIVE EACH COUNCIL THE RIGHT OF ITS OWN CHOICE.

A Misunderstanding Surrounds the Motive of Mr. Murray in Introducing Legislation—He Consulted Colleagues Before Introducing the Resolution That Caused Some Grumbling in the Assembly.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Trenton, January 25.—The Republicans of the State Assembly are beginning to realize that Assemblyman Roger F. Murray is going to be a prominent figure in the legislative halls this winter. Monday night saw a small squall over the introduction by him of a resolution providing that all bills passed by the Assembly shall be held twenty-four hours before they are sent to the Senate. The resolution was a surprise for Speaker and Republican leader on the floor. Murray then came in for considerable criticism on the ground that he should have submitted it first to the party leader in the House.

A Press reporter interviewed Mr. Murray on the subject this morning. The Plainfield Assemblyman explained that after drawing up the resolution, he presented it for the approval of the members of the committee on rules. A majority of them favored it and declared that they would back him up in it. He also saw some dozen Assemblymen of both parties and found them all in favor of it. Under those circumstances he felt justified in bringing it before the Assembly. Had the measure taken the usual course he felt sure that it would have been held up.

Regarding the bill he has just introduced into the Assembly, Mr. Murray said that there was a general misunderstanding. The rumor that he was on the war-path against City Clerk McMurray, of Plainfield, was utterly false. The bill was not aimed at that official, nor at any one else.

A mistaken idea has been obtained by a superficial glance at the title he said. The bill does not provide that the term of office of city clerks in second class cities shall be one year. What it does permit is that any Common Council in a second-class city may, if it so desires, make the term of office of the city clerk one year.

The object of this bill, Mr. Murray explained, was to give every new Council the right to choose its own city clerk. It is only fair that every new Council should have the say as to whom its chief recording officer should be instead of allowing one Council to fix that officer for future Councils. The idea had found favor with several of Plainfield's prominent Councilmen, hence Mr. Murray's reason for introducing it.

Boroughites Change Residences.

Former Councilman Fred Slater and family, of Manning avenue, will, at an early date, move into their former residence on Jackson avenue, where Former Mayor H. E. Needham and family now reside. Mr. Needham and family will move to Craig place in J. C. Dyer's house opposite Duer street.

Three Fingers Crushed.

D. W. Brown, of Plainfield avenue, met with an accident while at work in the Pond Machine Tool Works Monday. He was working in some of the machinery when his hand was caught and three fingers were crushed.

SENATOR LODGE SPEAKS

An Argument for the Ratification of the Treaty.

OUR DUTY TO THE FILIPINOS

Favors Ultimate Philippine Independence—A Responsibility That Cannot be Shirked—Senate Discusses Motion to Discuss it With Open Doors.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 25.--In the Senate yesterday Mr. Lodge, Republican of Massachusetts, delivered his previously announced speech on the Vest anti-expansion resolution. He said:

"I believe that the United States has the undoubted power, which it has frequently exercised, to acquire territory and to hold and govern it. I am ready to admit, if necessary, that action in these directions must be taken for constitutional purposes, but the constitutionality of the purposes must be determined by Congress itself through its majority. I believe that the power of the United States in any territory or possession outside the limits of the states themselves is absolute, with the single exception of the limitation placed upon such outside possessions by the thirteenth amendment. Such, at all events, has been the policy of the United States and its course of action in practice.

"We must either ratify the treaty or reject it, for I cannot suppose that any one would seriously advance the proposition that we should amend the treaty in such a way as to make pledges to Spain, and to Spain alone, and give bonds to Spain, and to Spain alone for our good conduct in the matter which will be wholly our own to decide. Suppose we ratify the treaty. The islands pass from the possession of Spain into our possession without committing us to any policy. I believe we can be trusted as a people to deal honestly and justly with the islands and their inhabitants (thus given to our care.

"What our policy then shall be I do not know, but I believe that we shall have the wisdom not to attempt to incorporate those islands with our body politic, or make their inhabitants part of our citizenship, or set their labor alongside of ours and within our tariff to compete in any industry with American workmen. I believe that we shall have the courage not to depart from those islands fearfully, timidly and unworthily, and leave them to anarchy among themselves, to the brief and bloody domination of some self-constituted dictator, and to the quick conquest of other powers, who will have no such hesitation as we should feel in crushing them into subjection by harsh and repressive methods. It is for us to decide the destiny of the Philippines, not for Europe, and we can do it alone and without assistance. I believe that we shall have the wisdom, the self-restraint, and the ability to restore peace and order in those islands and give to their people an opportunity for self government and for freedom under the protecting shield of the United States until the time shall come when they can stand alone."

Mr. Clay of Georgia, one of the Democratic senators who expects to vote for the ratification of the treaty of peace, also addressed the Senate on the general question of territorial expansion. He made it very clear that nothing should be allowed to stand in the way of prompt ratification of the peace treaty, but that this government should hold out to the Philippines the same promise of ultimate independence that is held out to the Cubans.

Mr. Davis, who is in charge of the peace treaty, and had been on his feet for half an hour to move the consideration of executive business, insisted on his motion, and at 2.30 o'clock the doors were closed.

After disposing of some nominations, to which there was no objection, the treaty was taken up. The discussion, however, was not on its merits, but upon the pending motion offered some time ago by Mr. Berry of Arkansas to conduct the debate on the treaty in open session.

There is a prevailing impression, arising from some unapparent cause, that the peace treaty cannot be ratified at this session, and that an extra session of the Senate after March 4 is already a foregone conclusion.

One reason given for this somewhat surprising change in the situation of a week ago is that some of the Republican senators wish to have an extra session of both houses in the interest of certain plans of their own, and that they are therefore not alarmed or grieved at the outlook for the success of the opponents of ratification. Another rumor has been in circulation for the past day or two to the effect that the president, for various reasons, was not particularly anxious for ratification at this season.

Scandal is Feared.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 25.--In the Senate yesterday Mr. Gallinger of New Hampshire, through a resolution which he had passed, intimated that there might be a scandal in connection with the management of the Washington Asylum of this city, the responsibility for which he placed at the doors of Congress.

The resolution provides for an investigation of the asylum by the committee on District of Columbia.

Mr. Gallinger said that there were 826 inmates in the institution. In the workhouse for males there were 216 bunks and 314 inmates. He deemed the situation to be a disgrace to Washington and calculated to bring reproach upon Congress.

Shot by a Burglar.

New York, Jan. 25.--A desperate burglar, chased from roof to roof and from house to house, shot at and hunted by police and residents in the neighborhood of Sixth and Seventh streets and First and Second avenues yesterday, finally shook off his pursuers and made his escape, after putting a bullet in the abdomen of one of his would be captors, who subsequently died.

The murdered man was George Everhardt, 24 years old.

MANUFACTURERS OF AMERICA.

They Will Have President McKinley as Their Guest of Honor.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 25.--The National Association of Manufacturers, the most important industrial organization in America, is in convention here and will be attended not alone by the leading business men of the country, but by the president of the United States, who will speak at the banquet to-day. The subject will be "American Trade," and it is expected that much of the discourse will be immediately pertinent to the territorial expansion and its important influence on commerce.

The election of officers will take place on Thursday, and with President McKinley's address that evening the annual sessions of the captains of American industries will come to a close.

SECRETARY WILSON.

The secretary, Mr. Wilson of Cincinnati, is of course slated to succeed himself. The president, Mr. Search, is a Philadelphia manufacturer.

Want to Avoid Hostilities.

London, Jan. 25.--The Filipino junta has received a cable message from Agoncillo, Aguinaldo's representative at Washington, declaring that the prospects were improving, though the work was difficult.

The absence of direct news from Manila and the receipt of secret intelligence from Washington are causing the greatest anxiety among the Filipinos here.

The arrests of natives by Major General Otis and the news that numbers of Filipinos have fled are regarded as very serious occurrences. The Filipinos say this is exactly what happened in 1896 under General Blanco, and on the following day the revolution broke out.

The members of the junta here say they cabled to Manila yesterday urging the Filipinos "not to start hostilities if there is the remotest possibility of avoiding trouble."

News from Havana.

Havana, Jan. 25.--Brigadier General Breckinridge, the inspector general of the United States army, has arrived here.

The French line steamer Versailles, which went ashore some time ago on the north coast of the province of Pinar del Rio, has not been floated. A wrecking company is expected to go to work on her soon.

Her cargo and passengers have all been transferred here. The latter will continue their journey via New York.

The Cuban Colonel Bacalao, who was released from jail on parole by the American board of pardons, after having been confined for some time for an alleged crime committed during the war, has been tendered a reception at Cardenas.

Belgian Cabinet Changes.

Brussels, Jan. 25.--A royal decree has been published accepting the resignations of the premier, M. de Smet de Naeyer, and the minister of industry and labor, M. Nyssens.

The same decree appoints MM. Liebaert and Cooreman, both members of the Chamber of Deputies, to succeed MM. de Smet de Naeyer and Nyssens.

M. Smet de Naeyer has been appointed minister of state.

The resignations of the ministers were caused by serious differences between them and King Leopold on the question of the introduction of the electoral bill, which the king advocates.

To Blow Up the Merrimac.

Washington, Jan. 25.--The navy department has decided to remove the Merrimac from the edge of the channel in Santiago harbor by means of explosives.

Lieutenant Clow, in charge of the wrecking operations, reported that the vessel is not worth the money it would cost to raise her.

Bronze Plates for Shamrock.

London, Jan. 25.--It is announced that the Manganese Bronze Company of Deptford has received an order for bronze plates with steel ribs, to be used in the construction of the America's cup challenger Shamrock.

PLANTATIONS GUARDED

Cubans Are Making Trouble in Guatanamo District.

CUBAN CAPTAIN ARRESTED

Charged With Intimidating Cane Workers—Insurgents Refuse to Disarm—Member of Ray's Regiment Under Arrest—Many Troops on Duty.

Guantanamo, Cuba, Jan. 25.--A Cuban captain, Serafin Planch, who applied for and obtained work on the Santa Cocilia sugar plantation, near Guantanamo, harangued the workmen at noon yesterday and ordered them to leave work, under penalty of arrest and trial by court martial of the Cuban army.

The American troops who were guarding the plantation, arrested Planch and brought him to Guantanamo. On the way he told them that he had acted under the orders of his own officers, though he refused to give names.

Lieutenant Colonel Ray, who is in command of the United States forces in this district, says that the action of Planch is by no means an isolated case. All over the valley are small bands of insurgents who refuse to disarm, and whose officers will only permit their men to work three days a week, compelling them to report at their camps for duty on the other four.

Lieutenant Colonel Ray says that several of these people, tiring of the tyranny of their officers, have applied to him for protection, which has been invariably granted.

Twenty-three plantations in the Guantanamo district are now guarded by the United States troops, the work engaging the greater part of Lieutenant Colonel Ray's regiment, in addition to the troops whose headquarters are at Baracoa and Sagua de Tanamo. He says that he cannot understand their motives in burning the plantations, unless it is that they are trying to keep the district unsettled. These insurgent bands are extremely impudent.

Major Edward Wilson of Ray's regiment, who was recently questioned regarding a shortage in his accounts, admits this amount to be about two hundred dollars, and has tendered a check for the deficit. He insists that the deficit was due to carelessness, but he has been placed under arrest and may be charged by Lieutenant Colonel Ray with conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman.

There has been considerable sickness among the troops in the Guantanamo district, many of the men suffering from malarial fever. Lieutenant Colonel Ray will recommend the removal of the main garrison to a point in the mountains, twenty-seven miles distant, where the Spanish authorities were accustomed to send troops fresh from Spain, and where fevers are practically unknown.

Owing to the number of men discharged and on the sick list, the regiment is in bad shape now numerically, but the officers believe that if the recommendation for removal is approved, the number of sick will be reduced by one-half in less than a month.

Drowned in the Hudson.

Newburgh, N. Y., Jan. 25.--Walter Watts, aged seventeen, and Miss Mary Sinclair, aged eighteen, of this city, were drowned Monday night in the Hudson river near New Windsor.

With six other young people they had skated to Cornwall, four miles distant, and were returning. On their way down the party crossed a crack in the ice a foot wide without difficulty, the tide being ebb. When they returned, the tide in the meantime having changed, the ice floe was separated from the main body, leaving a wide space of open water.

Watts and the girl were some distance ahead of the others. They saw the open water, but supposing it to be "black ice," they skated into it and were drowned. Watts might have saved himself had he released his hold on the girl.

The Military Congressmen.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 25.--The inquiry by the committee on judiciary ordered by the House of Representatives as to what members were holding outside offices, originally intended to determine the status of Major General Joseph Wheeler and other members in the army, began yesterday.

The inquiry was public, and besides the members of the committee there were present General Wheeler, Representative Hitt of Illinois, the members of the Hawaiian commission, Representative Moody of Massachusetts, a member of the postal commission, and Representative Otjen of Wisconsin, a member of the industrial commission. Representative Gardner of New Jersey, a member of the industrial commission, submitted a brief as to the right of members on that commission to hold their places.

A Battle in Bolivia.

Lima, Peru, Jan. 25.--According to advices received here from the Desaguadero district, or inter-Alpine valley, in Bolivia and Peru, under date of January 22, a fierce battle took place on January 17 at Curi Bay, thirteen leagues from La Paz, the nominal capital of Bolivia, between the vanguard of the Federalist troops, or insurgents, who now occupy La Paz, and the vanguard of the forces commanded by President Alonzo, with the result that the latter were defeated with the loss of a colonel and forty-three men killed. The insurgents also captured sixty prisoners.

It is added that desertions from the president's troops are occurring every day.

Crew of the Philadelphia.

San Diego, Cal., Jan. 25.--Since the arrival of the cruiser Philadelphia, now in the harbor here, nearly thirty members of the crew have deserted, and of these eighteen have been recaptured.

The men are in a very bitter frame of mind. They say that they were denied shore leave while at Central American and Mexican ports, but promised it when they should reach an American port, but since arriving here very few have been permitted to come ashore.

Nervous Dyspepsia

To Gain Flesh, to Sleep Well, to Know What Appetite and Good Digestion Mean

MAKE A TEST OF STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS.

No trouble is more common or more misunderstood than nervous dyspepsia. People having it think their nerves are to blame and are surprised that they are not cured by nerve medicines. The real seat of the mischief is lost sight of. The stomach is the organ to be looked after.

Nervous dyspeptics often do not have any pain whatever in the stomach, nor perhaps any of the usual symptoms of stomach weakness. Nervous dyspepsia shows itself not in the stomach so much as in nearly every organ. In some cases the heart palpitates and is irregular; in others the kidneys are effected; in others the bowels are constipated, with headaches; still others are troubled with loss of flesh and appetite with accumulations of gas, and sour risings and heartburn.

It is safe to say that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will cure any stomach weakness or disease except cancer of the stomach. They cure sour stomach, gas, loss of flesh and appetite, sleeplessness, palpitation, heartburn, constipation and headache.

Send for valuable little book on stomach diseases by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich. All druggists sell full-sized packages at 50 cents. Prof. Henry W. Becker, A. M., the well known religious worker and writer of St. Louis.

Church; also takes an active part in the work of the Epworth League, and to write on religious and educational topics for several magazines. How he found relief is best told in his own words.

"Some weeks ago my brother heard me say something about indigestion, and taking a box from his pocket said 'Try Stuart's Tablets.' I did, and was promptly relieved. Then I investigated the nature of the tablets and became satisfied that they were made of just the right things and in just the right proportions to aid in the assimilation of food. I heartily endorse them in all respects, and I keep them constantly on hand." 1 9 e o d 9

The treasurer of a Brooklyn (N. Y.) Safe Deposit Co. was a sufferer for fifteen years with nervous dyspepsia, and, like many other victims of this dread disorder, tried everything suggested by physicians and friends to attain relief and was always extremely gratified for even a temporary cessation of pain. He finally commenced with Ripans Tabules and, after taking them a few weeks, found himself entirely cured. "I smoke to my heart's content," said he, "and eat any and everything, and I have not had to take even a Ripans for the last three or four months." His attention was first called to the Tabules by seeing them advertised in the cars of the Brooklyn Elevated R.R. He has been the means of selling hundreds of boxes of Ripans Tabules on the strength of his cure, even going so far as to get his own physician to use them in his general practice, for he "had given my case up as hopeless."

A new style packet containing FIVE RIPANS TABULES in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at some drug stores—FOR FIVE CENTS. This low-priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (SIXTY TABULES) can be had by mail by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (FIVE TABULES) will be sent for five cents.

JOHN KEAN ELECTED SENATOR.

To Succeed James Smith, of New Jersey.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 25.--The two houses of the New Jersey legislature balloted separately at noon yesterday for United States senator to succeed Senator Smith, Democrat.

John Kean, Republican, received 14 votes in the Senate and 37 in the House and Senator Smith received 7 in the Senate and 22 in the House.

John Kean was born in Ursino, near Elizabeth, N. J., on December 4, 1852. He studied at private schools and entered Yale with the class of 1876, but did not complete the course, leaving to take up the study of law.

He graduated from the Columbia Law school of New York in 1875, and was admitted to the New Jersey bar in 1877. He was elected to the Forty-eighth and Fiftieth Congresses, was chairman of the New Jersey Republican state committee in 1891 and 1892, and Republican nominee for governor in 1892, but was defeated by George T. Wertz, his Democratic opponent. He was a member of the commission appointed in 1894 to revise the state judiciary and practice, and in 1896 was elected one of the delegates at large to the Republican national convention. Mr. Kean is president of the National State Bank of Elizabeth, vice president of the Manhattan Trust Company of New York city, president of the Elizabethtown Gas Light Company, president of the Elizabethtown Water Company, and managing director of the Elizabethport Banking Company. He is also interested in an electric street railway between Elizabeth and Plainfield, for the franchise of which he recently offered $250,000 in cash, and which will be constructed as soon as the needful franchise can be obtained.

Embezzler Dies in Prison.

Concord, N. H., Jan. 25.--Major Hiram P. Gerrish, formerly deputy state treasurer of New Hampshire, who was sentenced to state prison last October for two years, for embezzlement, died at that institution early yesterday morning of pneumonia, following an attack of the grip. He had been sick for a little more than a week.

Gerrish served in the civil war in the Second regiment of New Hampshire volunteers, and rose to the rank of major. In 1891 he was appointed deputy state treasurer and was removed last summer upon the discovery of a discrepancy in his accounts. He was 59 years of age and leaves a wife and an adopted daughter. The shortage is placed at from four to five thousand dollars.

Will Sleep the Long Sleep in a Iron Chair

Amesbury, Mass., Jan. 25.--Reuben J. Smith, an eccentric old man, who had lived here for many years and whose peculiarities are shown by the provisions made for the disposal of his body, died here yesterday. He was seventy-one years old. Death was due to old age.

In accordance with plans devised by Mr. Smith, a sarcophagus for the receipt of his body after death was completed several months ago. In his tomb an iron chair was constructed, and Mr. mith directed that his body should be placed in the chair in a sitting position, the door securely locked and the key destroyed. This will be done.

Father and Three Children Poisoned.

Philadelphia, a., Jan. 25.--George Schaffer, a butcher, 52 years of age, and his three children, respectively fourteen, eleven and three years old, were poisoned yesterday by drinking coffee which contained arsenic. All are in the hospital in a critical condition.

The police are inclined to the belief that Schaffer attempted to kill his children and himself, but Schaffer, after regaining consciousness at the hospital, said one of the children must have placed the milk used in the coffee in a cup which contained rat poison. His wife died a few months ago and Schaffer himself has been ill for some time.

Detective Kills Burglar.

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 25.--Detective Weber of the New York Central Railroad shot and killed a burglar in the Central yard yesterday morning, and captured his companion. The dead man was known as Babeleke and had served time for burglary. The other man gave the name of George Hakowski.

In the latter's possession was found a quantity of dress goods. Babeleke fired at Weber and was about to shoot again when Weber shot him through the head.

Arbitrators Take a Hand.

Marlboro, Mass., Jan. 25.--The members of the state board of arbitration arrived in this city yesterday morning and at once went into conference with the representatives of the joint council of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Unions of this city.

The appearance of the board was not unexpected. The shoe workers, while determined to stand by their organization, are anxious for the existing troubles to be amicably settled, if possible.

FILIPINO ULTIMATUM

Agoncillo Demands Recognition of So-called Republic.

THE SITUATION IS SERIOUS

Officials Would Not be Surprised if Trouble Follows at Manila—The Delay in Ratifying the Treaty Cause of the Crisis—Agoncillo Files a Communication.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 25.--It is acknowledged in administration circles that Agoncillo, the Filipino representative in Washington, has practically submitted an ultimatum demanding that the president recognize him at once as the ambassador from the "Philippine Republic, or take the consequences."

The dispatches via Madrid and London yesterday announcing that the time allowed the Americans to recognize the Filipino republic expired that day, are acknowledged to have some foundation, in so far as Agoncillo has demanded recognition by the president. The war department considers the situation serious, and each day's delay by the Senate in acting on the treaty makes it worse.

Agoncillo and his augmented junta have informed Aguinaldo of the situation in Washington, but Agoncillo has declared that the Americans do not assert their possession of the islands for fear of the Philippine army.

The proposed postponement of the ratification of the treaty has so emboldened Agoncillo that it would not surprise the officials here if his dispatches to Manila incited trouble there. The matter was discussed by the cabinet yesterday but the administration is powerless to act as long as a vote on the treaty is blocked.

In the last two or three days Agoncillo and his fellow members of the junta have been in close consultation with a number of opposition senators, concocting schemes for defeating or further delaying action on the treaty. Inasmuch as a state of war still exists, there is a question whether, if he continues his tactics, Agoncillo may not be dealt with under the law.

The president and his cabinet are still determined that the American forces shall not be the aggressors in the Philippines, but if Aguinaldo considers that the time for the Americans to recognize the so-called republic has expired, the Filipinos may bring about the crisis themselves.

It is now a question whether the senators who are holding up the treaty may not be the men who will cause bloodshed in the Philippines. The longer these senators continue their present course the more defiant and arrogant the Filipinos become.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 25.--Senor Lopez, secretary to Agoncillo, the Washington representative of Aguinaldo, called at the state department yesterday afternoon and lodged with the chief clerk a communication.

Secretary Hay was attending a meeting of the cabinet at the White House.

A Filipino Proclamation.

Hong Kong, Jan. 25.--The Filipino junta here has issued the following statement:

"The purchase by the American authorities at Hong Kong of a number of steam launches for river work in the Philippine islands is high-handed, unnecessary and vexatious.

"Domiciliary visits throughout Manila are exasperating to the Filipinos. Their suspicions are aroused by such actions. The dispatch of reinforcements is incompatible with peace and the appointment of a commission is only a pretext to gain time. The American secret police is acting offensively towards the Filipinos at Hong Kong, who are British subjects.

"The Filipino congress at Malila has unanimously vetoed annexation."

Says Rupture Has Occured.

Madrid, Jan. 25.--A dispatch from Hong Kong to the Reforma of this city says a letter received from the Philippines, under date of January 20, announces that the rupture between the Filipinos and the Americans is an accomplished fact, and that the lives of the Spaniards in the archipelago are endangered.

Quay Loses a Vote.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 25.--On yesterday's joint ballot in the senatorship contest Quay lost a vote, and was sixteen short of the required majority. Benjamin T. Hale of Towanda, was a new man voted for, the vote being given him by his friend, Representative Edmiston. Hale is a rich man, and Edmiston says he is the real dark horse.

Two hundred and thirty-eight votes were cast and 120 were necessary to an election. The following was the vote:

Quay, 106; Jenks, 80; Dalzell, 15, Stone, 8; Irvin, 3; Stewart, 8; Huff, 5; Smith, 1; Tubbs, 2; Downing, 2; Markle, 2; Grow, 1; Didener, 2; Rice, 2; Hale, 1.

Sulus Helped the Balabacs.

London, Jan. 25.--A dispatch from Labuan, British Borneo, says that it was on the island of Balabac that the Spanish governor and other officers were murdered by the natives, and not on the island of Palawan, as reported in yesterday's dispatches.

The governor and his officers were attacked by the natives as they were leaving church. The governor's widow and sixty other women and children, the dispatch adds, have been brought to Labuan.

The women were robbed of everything of value, but otherwise they were not maltreated. The Sulu islanders assisted the Balabacs in their attack upon the Spaniards.

To Vote Next Week.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 25.--The army reorganization bill was taken up in the House yesterday and after some discussion it was agreed that a vote should be taken "not later than three o'clock of next week."

MONSTER PAULIST SERVICES.

They Will be Conducted by the Leading Prelates of America.

New York, Jan. 25.--The greatest celebration the Catholic church has had in years will be that conducted today by Archbishop Martinelli, Archbishop Corrigan, Bishop Farley and others as notable. The ceremony is in charge of the Paulist Fathers of America, who will with great pomp observe the feast of the conversion of St. Paul, the patron saint.

The celebration this year partakes of a national character, for celebrities from all over the country have been invited and will meet with the papal delegate, Martinelli.

ARCHBISHOP MARTINELLI.

A choir of over five hundred voices has been secured for the services. Mgr. Martinelli is an Augustinian, having once been prior general of that order.

SECRETARY ALGER MAY TESTIFY.

He is Invited to Appear Before the War Investigation Committee.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 25.--Secretary Alger has been invited by the war investigating commission to appear before it to-day and make a statement of the conduct of the war department in the war with Spain.

No reply has been received, but it is expected that the secretary of war will signify his desire to make some statement.

Major Rufus M. Townsend of the commissary department was a witness yesterday. As chief commissary of the Seguranca, he issued a large quantity of refrigerated and canned beef and found very little that was not of good quality. It gave general satisfaction.

At the close of the examination of Major Townsend the commission opened a can of roast beef furnished by General Miles, who received it from Captain Bean of the Philadelphia light battery. This beef was brought from Ponce, Porto Rico, by Captain Bean, and in a letter to General Miles he condemned the meat in strong terms.

The opened can was passed around to each member of the commission. Its odor was fresh and wholesome.

"Let's taste it," remarked Colonel Denby. He did so and pronounced it excellent. The can was marked roast beef, but the meat had evidently been corned.

The Government of Guam.

Until the auxiliary cruiser Yosemite, on which he will take passage, sails, Captain Leary will reside at the navy yard. The Yosemite will sail in about two weeks.

Captain Leary said that he would take command of a division of the Asiatic squadron under Rear Admiral Dewey, and would use the Yosemite as his flagship, with headquarters at Guam.

Guam is to be one of the principal naval stations of the United States in the Pacific, and a large steel dock will be built for our warships which will coal there.

Captain Leary carries to Guam a proclamation from President McKinley to the natives of the island, which is identified with those used with Porto Rico and Cuba.

Captain Leary said yesterday that the most important clause was that "the ports occupied by the United States shall be opened to the commerce of all friendly powers."

Canadian Postage Changes.

Montreal, Jan. 25.--So large has been the demand for the two cent stamp issued to commemorate the introduction of penny postage, that a second issue has been struck off and distributed to postmasters throughout Canada. It is not, of course, the intention of the postoffice department to abandon the regular two cent stamp of the older issue. The postoffice department, although consenting to purchase three cent stamps, rendered useless by the reduction in domestic postage, refuses to purchase five cent stamps.

Numerous applications are being received by the department, but so far no change has been made.

The Gillett Failure.

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 25.--Holders and endorsers of Grant G. Gillett's "cattle paper" held a meeting here Monday at which it was decided that the best interests of all would be subserved by holding the Gillett assets together until all of the Gillett cattle are in condition for the market.

Much of the Gillett paper is now overdue, but it was agreed that the commission firms which endorsed the notes would not be pushed for a prompt settlement.

Twenty-five banks were represented at the meeting and creditors were present from olorado to New England.

A Blind Farmer Murdered.

Corry, Pa., Jan. 25.--Ira Crandall, aged 70 years, a blind farmer, was pounded to death Monday night with an axe wielded by Emmet Bouton, 61 years old, a crazy resident of this city. Bouton had been in the insane asylum for a year, but was discharged some time ago pronounced cured. Monday night he became violently insane and attacked Crandall with an axe, literally cutting him to pieces. Bouton has been locked up.

John Kean's Career.

Almost every person in Union county has come to regard Senator-elect John Kean as an acquaintance, owing to his intimacy with Union county affairs. The following brief biography of Mr. Kean's career will not be amiss at this moment, however:

John Kean was born in Union county Dec. 6th, 1852, and still resides in the same house where he first saw the light of day. He is a graduate of Yale College and Columbia Law School. He studied law with Chief Justice Magie, but never practiced the profession. He is extensively engaged in the banking and manufacturing business.

Mr. Kean is vice-president of the Manhattan Trust Company, of New York, and has a controlling interest in the gaslight and street railway companies of Elizabeth. In 1882 he was elected to Congress and in 1884 he was defeated for re-election by Robert S. Green, who afterwards became Governor of New Jersey. He ran again in 1886 and was elected by a narrow majority. He was a candidate for Governor in 1892 and was defeated by George T. Werts.

An important bill introduced in the Legislature provides that there shall be appropriated annually by the Legislature whatever sum is deemed wise for the support of the public schools of the State, which sum shall be apportioned among the school districts with a view to reducing the annual State school tax. The tax now is $5 per child, and the purpose of this bill is gradually to cut down that amount till the whole tax is wiped out, if the condition of the State treasury from year to year will permit. For the present it is not expected that the legislative appropriation will permit more than a partial reduction of the tax.

The fact that the time for making application for liquor licenses in Plainfield is nearly at hand lends contemporaneous interest to legislation at Trenton affecting such mattters. Assemblyman John King, of Passaic county, has introduced a bill providing that in all cities there shall be a Board of Excise Commissioners, to consist of three persons, but two to belong to the same political party, to be appointed by the Mayor for three years, and confirmed by the governing body of the city, the salaries for each member of the Board not to exceed $150 a year.

According to Manila advices "large numbers of the American troops are fraternizing with the natives and that many of them are engaged to Filipino girls." We don't mind the $20,000,000 that Spain is to be paid for her interests in the Phillipines, but when it comes to allowing the Filipino damsels to capture our gallant boys with their artful ways we think it is time to cry enough! Unless the expansionits secure the censoring of such news they may expect their cause to fail.

When it is considered how the late Leon Abbett was prevented from being elected United States Senator six years ago, it is not to be wondered at that his son—now a member of the Assembly—hesitated about casting his vote for the re-election of Senator Smith by arising in the Lower House during the progress of voting and stating that it was not by his personal choice that Mr. Smith secured his vote for the empty honor.

The Metuchen Recorder goes back three years to get a good view of John Kean, who is now United States Senator from New Jersey. The Recorder says: "John Kean is more than a rich man. He stood up alone in the New Jersey delegation and voted for the nomination of Thomas B. Reed for President of the United States. It was a manly thing to do. It showed that he was more than a mere politician also."

COMMISSARY GENERAL EAGAN.

Commissary General Charles P. Eagan has to face a court martial. The charge is that he used violent and abusive language before the war investigating committee in replying to the assertion of General Miles that "embalmed beef" was supplied by the commissary department to the soldiers in Cuba.

Aguinaldo threatens to recall his envoy to this country unless President McKinley recognizes him very soon, which, the Filipino Junta asserts, "will remove an important medium for arriving at a peaceful understanding." It is well for Aguinaldo to follow these little formalities of government lest we should forget that he is still in the ring.

Former Mayor Magowan turns up in New York and has a man arrested for stealing two $1,000 bills from him. Magowan is a corker. How any man could have so much money as that, after going through what the Trentonian has in the past few years, is more of a mystery than the Adams poisoning case.

The strongest argument that can be made in favor of Plainfield securing a large force of letter-carriers is found in the fact that the other day one of the carriers was compelled to return to the postoffice with over 180 letters of the first class that he was unable to deliver by reason of the time assigned to him for covering his route expiring before he had got over it.

Assemblyman Murray kept up his record yesterday by introducing one new bill in the Legislature. It provides additional procedure regulating construction of sidewalks and payment therefor. It undoubtedly has something to do with Mr. Murray's observation of Plainfield municipal affairs.

It may be a trifle late in comparison with others who have extended their congratulations to Mr. Kean, but nevertheless we congratulate the Sage of Ursino on his election to the United States Senate, which was formally consummated this noon in joint session of the Legislature.

The need of a surface drainage was never more apparent than it was yesterday afternoon and evening on Park avenue. The water assumed the appearance of a small river, and at times walking was almost impossible.

Congressman Fowler's selection for appointment as postmaster at East Orange—Marcus Mitchell—was confirmed by the Senate yesterday.

If there had been any steamboats about town last night they would have done a rip-roaring business.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

It seems from investigations made by Comptroller Heston, of Atlantic City, that Newark is able to borrow money for temporary loans on better terms than any other city in the State. The local banks charge Atlantic City six per cent. for discounting its paper, and Mr. Heston thought this was too much. Upon making inquiries he learned that Newark pays three and three and a half per cent., Burlington and Jersey City four per cent., Paterson four, five and six per cent., New Brunswick four to six per cent., Bordentown, Lambertville, Orange, Passaic, Plainfield and Princeton five per cent., Trenton five and six per cent. and Camden six per cent.—Newark News.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

Proprietor Staats, of the Grenada Hotel, is somewhat puzzled to know what to name the hotel which he is soon to open. All sorts of names have been suggested, but Mr. Staats is lost for a name that suits him. He will probably make up his mind in a few days to select some other name than the one now in use.

* * * * *

It is now the fashion among young women to wear fur boas to which are attached the heads or imitation heads of the animals from which the fur is obtained. These boas have been growing larger and larger during the past year. A new danger from these life-like wraps was recently demonstrated at a Plainfield church. A young woman seated herself in a pew and hung her boa over the back of the seat in front of her. Now in that pew was a small child. As the sermon progressed the small child became restless and looked around. Now it so happened that a head of a fox had been placed at the end of the boa and hung over the pew in truly realistic fashion. As the child turned about he caught sight of this fierce head close by. With a scream the child turned to his mother and his cries were hushed with difficulty.

THEATRICAL.

Current Dramatic Attractions That Plainfielders' Can Witness.

Stetson's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" company will appear at Music Hall next Monday night. This company is undoubtedly the largest and best Uncle Tom company traveling, comprising 50 first-class artists. So complete is their scenery that the piece could be put on in a barn with better scenic effects than is produced by any other company. They have a grand double band of white and colored musicians, an orchestra of ten pieces, and one that is hard to beat. The African mandolin students with this company are the first and only colored people appearing in public and performing on the Spanish mandolin. The Lone Star Quartette is claimed to be without an equal, and the Topsies, there they have something that charms all. The Topsies are two young ladies, and their superiors as character and terpsichorean artists have not yet been produced on the American stage; two Marks, the best that a big salary can secure. The street parade is the finest ever witnessed, and of the performance it is said that if they do not give the best production of this sterling old drama ever given in this city, they will cheerfully refund the price of admission.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence to The Press.)

Dunellen, Jan. 25—Mrs. John Peters, who was taken ill last week, is slowly improving.

The Washington Avenue Card Club met at the home of Miss Jessie Haynes Monday night and enjoyed the usual hour of card playing. Miss Janie Churhill and Charles Coriell won the first prizes, and Miss Emma Marlow and William Tabb won the second prizes. The prizes this time were particularly nice, being of silver. There was a silver backed clothes brush and a hat pin for the ladies, and a silver match case and a pen-knife for the gentlemen. Next time the club will meet at the home of Mrs. R. L. Giddes.

Mrs. Thomas G. Robinson, of Newark, is ill at her father's home here. Mrs. Robinson is under the care of Dr. Hedges, of Plainfield, and it is feared that she is suffering from an abscess on the brain.

Charles D. Boice, Jr., who left for Florida a few days ago, has arrived at his destination.

Mrs. E. S. Jamison's mother, who is ill in Brooklyn, is improving in health.

William Conley's parents are both ill at Glen Gardner.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Jan. 25—John Thys, who has been helping Clarence Lambert fill his large icehouse at Willow Grove, met with a very painful accident Monday night. It was his place to receive the ice from the long shute leading into the house, and in some way his foot caught at the bottom of the shute and before he could release himself a large cake of ice was shot into the house and came down the shute with great speed, striking his foot near the ankle, spraining and bruising it very badly. It will be some days before John will be able to resume work again. But he considers himself fortunate that the accident broke no bones.

Samuel Taintor, the blacksmith, while working around the shop several days ago was unfortunate enough to have a flying splinter of iron penetrate his eye, injuring it so badly that he will probably lose the sight of it.

The young ladies who are interested in the public library are making arrangement to hold a fair in Excelsior Hall during the first part of February for the benefit of the library.

A Methodist sociable will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Bruchman on Mountain avenue Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bacon, of Haverstraw, N. Y., are visiting Mrs. Bacon's father, Robert Walpole, for a few days.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Westfield, Jan. 25—Last evening the officers of Father Wiseman Council, No. 661, Catholic Benevolent Legion, were installed by Deputy State Chancelor, A. J. Nolen, of Plainfield, assisted by Jeremiah Moore, of the same place. There was a large attendance of members and after the business was transacted refreshments were served. The work of installation was performed in a highly creditable manner.

—Through the agency of Wm. A. Woodruff the loss on the contents of Charles McNabb's house by fire has been satisfactorily settled.

—Commander W. C. Smith and his three sons constitute a quartette who will furnish music at the free entertainment in Reform Hall next Friday evening, given by the Christian church. Mrs. Manley has also been engaged to sing.

WANT TO PRINT LAWS.

STATE EDITORS PRESENT THEIR SCHEME TO THE GOVERNOR.

But Mr. Voorhees Does Not Give Much Encouragement, However—Editors Will Try Persuasion With the Legislators.

(Special to The Daily Press)

Trenton, January 25.—Governor Voorhees has has had a number of callers but none has occasioned more interest than a committee from the New Jersey Editorial Association. It was chaperoned by former Senator Winton, editor of The Bergen County Democrat, and Anthony Kilgore, of The Hunterdon County Democrat. The object of the visitors was to secure the support of the Governor for a new plan the association has devised for the publication of the session laws in ninety State papers—not more than eight or less than two to be located in any one county. Under this plan, all the laws affecting the counties in which the designated papers are published shall be printed therein in full, and all other laws in synopsis only.

This plan, the committee believes, would fix the cost of publishing the laws at about $20,000 annually, instead of $100,000 a year, the figure reached just prior to the session of the Senate Investigating Committe, which recommended and succeeded in having the law repealed.

Governor Voorhees was chairman of that committee, and he intimated that his views on the subject have not undergone any material change. A glance at the annual appropriation for publishing the laws of this session showed just $7,500 alotted for the purpose, and the Governor remarked that this was much lower than even the $20 000 for which the committee declared the State papers could do the work. It was not within his province, however, he added, to pass upon the merits or demerits of a bill before it reached him, and he did not want to stand in the position of influencing legislation.

It then developed that before calling on the Governor the committee had tried their persuasive powers with several Senators and Assemblymen, and were asked by all to get the Governor's views before having the measure introduced. The committee will make another attempt next Monday night, and some of the members appear to think the effort will be successful.

WHITE'S WHITE SALE

THE WHITE GOODS EVENT OF THE SEASON.

Encouraged by the marked success which has attended our previous Muslin Underwear sales, we have made a large purchase for this occasion. Our orders were placed during the makers' dull season. The work has been most thoroughly done, materials and trimmings are of the best, the fit, finish and size generosity is the same as if the garments were made under your own supervision—by your own home seamstress—and the prices are less than you would pay for bare materials.

NIGHT ROBES.

Every feature of this sale is special, but more special than other features will be the nightgown selling. They are among the best creations of master makers and are daintily trimmed with the prettiest laces, ribbons and embroideries. Prices 25c, 49c, 75c, $1 and $1.25.

WHITE SKIRTS.

Some plain with rows of tucks, some with cambric and embroidery flounces with lace insertions; all cut very full, nothing scant about them but the prices—25c, 35c, 49c, 75c to $1.25.

CORSET COVERS.

Trimmed with embroidery, torchon laces, or clusters of tucks with insertions, perfect fitting, high, square or V shape necks, made of fine cambric. Who would bother to make them when you buy at these prices—15c, 25c, 29c, 39c, 50c

DRAWERS.

Made with yoke bands, deep hamburg embroidery, umbrella, flounces or rows of tucks. As some of the best numbers are somewhat limited as to quantity it is advisable that you be among the early choosers as these lots cannot be duplicated at these prices—17c, 25c, 39c and 50c.

Proceedings of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County.

[OFFICIAL.]

Regular meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the county of Union held on Thursday, Jan. 5, 1899, at 2.30 p. m.

All members were present except Freeholder King—1.

The minutes of the previous meeting, reading of bills being omitted, were on motion approved as read.

Before proceeding with the regular order of business Freeholder Farrell moved that the resolution pending before the board, relative to new indices of records and accounts in the Surrogate's office be taken up, which was so ordered.

Surrogate Parrott then addressed the board, explaining the work to be done and the necessity for the same, after which the resolution was read by the clerk, and Freeholder Miller moved its adoption. Freeholder Roll suggested that before taking action the board ascertain as near as possible just what the cost would be per name for making said new indices, whereupon Freeholder Farrell moved as an amendment that the matter lie over until such information could be obtained.

The amendment was adopted, and further action laid over.

COMMUNICATIONS, PETITIONS, ETC.

From Mrs. B. O Clirehugh, of 353 Morris avenue, Elizabeth, N. J., and addressed to the director of the board, calling attention to the mass of tree branches and other debris brought down by the Elizabeth river, and now piled up in front of the centre support of the bridge of said river at Morris avenue, Elizabeth, and immediately adjoining her property. She considered such a mass a decided obstruction to the more than ordinary flow of said river, and asked the removal of this special accumulation.

On motion of Freeholder Farrell received and referred to the Elizabeth bridge committee.

Elizabeth, N. J., Jan. 5, 1899.

To the Honorable the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the county of Union:

Gentlemen: The undersigned respectfully reports to you that the contractor for the masoary on the Bridge street bridge, Rahway, N. J has completed the same as far as can be until the erection of iron work, and that the said contractor is entitled to the sum of two thousand five undred ($2,500) dollars on account of said work, the said amount being eighty (80) per cent of amount of work completed.

Respectfully submitted,

Louis Quien, Engineer.

On motion of Freeholder Bucklacher the communication was referred to the Bridge street committee, of Rahway, and it was ordered that the said sum of $2,500 be paid to the contractor when approved by said committee.

Board of Chosen Freeholders:

Dear Sir—The road from Townley's Bridge to Millington, at Somerset line, is petitioned for by the residents on the line, and Board of Freeholders has accepted the road, and ordered profiles made and forwarded to State Commissioner H. I. Budd for his approval.

Yours truly,

Merritt B. Lum,

Director of Morris County.

On motion of Freeholder Bucklacher received and placed on file.

Village of South Orange,

To the Honorable Board of Freeholders County of Union, N. J.

Gentlemen: In behalf of the city of Newark, the borough of Vailsburgh, the townships of West Orange, South Orange and Milburn, the town of Irvington, and the village of South Orange, acting jointly in the construction of a sewer to tide water, I hereby apply to your board for permission, in the course of construction, to cross under the roadway of county roads as designated in the map filed herewith. The work will be done under such restrictions as your board may deem proper to impose. Signed

Very respectfully,

Robert S. Sinclair,

Chairman of Joint Committee.

A map was presented to the Board, which showed the proposed route of said sewer, and on motion of Freeholder Farrell it was ordered that the communication, together with said map, be received and placed on file.

On motion of Freeholder Roll the resolution was adopted without dissent.

The director appointed as the said committee Freeholders Farrell, Roll and Burnett.

On motion of Freeholder Roll the board then went into executive session.

Upon resuming open session roll call showed all members present except Freeholder King—1.

The following resolution was presented by the county road committee, viz:

Resolved, That the sums demanded by the following persons, viz:

Ayes—Director Hubbard and Freeholders Bucklacher, Burnett Ehrlich, Farrell, Higgins, Hulskamper, McCandless, Miller, Robison, Roll, Scudder, Swain, Tier, and Wahl—15.

Not voting, Freeholder Adams—1.

Absent, Freeholder King—1.

Freeholder Wahl moved that the resolution pending before the board relative to macadamizing South street, in New Providence, etc., be taken up, which was so ordered. The said resolution was read by the clerk, and Freeholder Wahl moved its adoption.

Considerable discussion followed, during which Freeholder Wahl stated that the expense of said work to this county would be about $5,000, the state paying about $2,400, and property owners along the line paying the balance, which would be 10 per cent. of the total cost.

Freeholder Swain said that he had been informed that Morris county would macadamize the road in said county, leading to Townley's bridge, being a continuation of South street, New Providence.

Freeholder Roll said that the resolution had been before the board for some time, and should be settled in one way or another.

The resolution was then on roll call adopted by the following vote, viz:

Ayes—Freeholders Adams, Higgins, Hulskamper, McCandless, Miller, Roll Swain and Wahl—8.

Nays—Director Hubbard and Freeholders Bucklacher, Burnett, Farrell, Robison, Scudder and Tier—7.

Excused—Freeholder Ehrlich—1.

Absent—Freeholder King—1.

By Freeholer Roll:

Resolved, That the request of Robert S. Sinclair, chairman of joint committee, and this day presented to this board, be granted, said work to be done under the supervision of the county road inspector and county road committee.

Dated Jan. 5th, 1899,

On motion of Freeholder Farrell the motion was adopted without dissent.

By Freeholder Wahl:

Resolved, That the clerk of this board be authorized to notify the state road commissioner of action of this board regarding the road from New Providence to Townley's bridge, and that said clerk be authorized to request said commissioner for the customary and legal appropriation in said matter.

Freeholder Swain moved the adoption of the resolution, which was duly seconded.

Freeholder Roll said he did not think this county should take any further action in this matter until assurance was given by Morris county that the road leading to Townley's bride, in said county, would be macadamized by the Board of Freeholders of said Morris county.

The motion to adopt was then lost by the following vote:

Ayes—Freeholders Adams, Higgins, Hulskamper, McCandless, Miller, Swain, Wahl—7.

Nays—Director Hubbard and Freeholders, Bucklacher, Burnett, Ehrlich Farrell, Robison, Roll, Scudder, Tier—9.

Absent—Freeholder King—1.

Freeholder Wahl said he desired to call attention to stoppage of water, etc., on county road in New Providence. Freeholder Swain said he had been requested to state that the matter had been settled, and no action was taken.
